2005 Amendment: Chapter 66 in (2)(a) at beginning deleted "With respect to contracts providing for flexible considerations" and near middle after "time at" substituted "rates of interest as indicated in subsection (3)(a) of the net considerations, as described in subsection (2)(b)" for "a rate of interest of 3% a year of percentages of the net considerations (as hereinafter defined)"; in (2)(a)(i) at end substituted "rates of interest as indicated in subsection (3)(a)" for "a rate of interest of 3% a year"; inserted (2)(a)(ii) providing that an annual contract charge be figured into the total decrease; inserted (2)(a)(iii) providing that any premium tax paid by the company be figured into the total decrease; in (2)(a)(iv) at end after "accrued" deleted "and increased by existing additional amounts credited by the company to the contract"; in (2)(b) near beginning after second "amount" substituted "equal to 87.5% of" for "not less than zero and shall be equal to" and at end after "year" deleted remainder of (2)(b) that read: "less an annual contract charge of $30 and less a collection charge of $1.25 per consideration credited to the contract during that contract year. The percentages of net consideration shall be 65% of the net consideration for the first contract year and 87½% of the net consideration for the second and later contract years. Notwithstanding the provisions of the preceding sentence, the percentage shall be 65% of the portion of the total net consideration for any renewal contract year which exceeds by not more than two times the sum of those portions of the net consideration in all prior contract years for which the percentage was 65%"; substituted (3) and (4) regarding calculation of the interest rate used in determining minimum nonforfeiture amounts for former (3) and (4) that read: "(3) With respect to contracts providing for fixed schedule consideration, minimum nonforfeiture amounts shall be calculated on the assumption that consideration is paid annually in advance and shall be defined as for contracts with flexible payments of consideration which are paid annually with two exceptions:

(a) The portion of the net consideration for the first contract year to be accumulated shall be the sum of 65% of the net consideration for the first contract year plus 22½% of the excess of the net consideration for the first contract year over the lesser of the net considerations for the second and third contract years.

(b) The annual contract charge shall be the lesser of $30 or 10% of the gross annual consideration.

(4) With respect to contracts providing for a single consideration, minimum nonforfeiture amounts shall be defined as for contracts with flexible payments of consideration except that the percentage of net consideration used to determine the minimum nonforfeiture amount shall be equal to 90% and the net consideration shall be the gross consideration less a contract charge of $75"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

Although 33-1-313 delegates to the commissioner of insurance rulemaking authority to effectuate any provisions of the code, this bill substantively increases this power, necessitating a statement of intent.

[Section 5] [33-20-602] empowers the commissioner of insurance with the sole authority to regulate the issuance and sale of variable contracts and allows the commissioner to promulgate rules to carry out the provisions of this bill. The commissioner's authority to promulgate rules is limited in scope to the following areas:

(1) rules relating to maintaining reserves for guaranteed benefits and funds in a separate account;

(2) rules relating to valuation of assets allocated to a separate account;

(3) rules relating to the transfer of cash or securities among a life insurance company's accounts; and

(4) rules relating to the requirements of doing business under this bill.

All rules promulgated under this bill are subject to the provisions of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act."

Case Notes

Conflict Between Contract and Certificate of Insurance: Decedent's employer provided him with group life insurance and paid the total premium. Employer kept the master policy, which stated that the benefit paid would be 300% of annual salary at the time of death, rounded to the nearest dollar. A certificate of insurance not containing this formula was issued to decedent and stated that his benefit would be $104,000. Employer paid premiums based on that amount. Decedent was not shown to have read the master policy. The certificate was issued pursuant to a statute requiring it. Decedent's salary upon his death was $14,700, and based on the policy formula, the correct benefit was $44,000. Insurer sent employer a corrected certificate showing the proper benefit 19 days before decedent died, but the certificate was not given to decedent or his wife until after his death, and neither was informed of the error and correction before death occurred. The master policy stated that the policy controlled in event of discrepancy between it and the certificate. On appeal from judgment that wife was entitled to a $104,000 benefit, the Supreme Court ruled that: (1) the certificate was part of the contract, and in view of the conflict the construction most favorable to the insured would be adopted and the policy provision that the policy governed would be disregarded; (2) insured contracted only indirectly, through his employer, with insurer and his certificate of insurance was his primary source of information regarding the policy and thus he was entitled to rely on the certificate to correctly state the coverage; (3) if the coverage stated on the certificate is incorrect, insured and beneficiaries are deprived of the chance to supplement coverage if they find it inadequate; (4) the amount of decedent's coverage was the essence of the policy; (5) insurer was the drafter of the policy and certificate and must bear the burden of the ambiguity it created; and (6) equity did not require reformation of the contract to correct the error as the certificate was a year old and due diligence would have resulted in discovery of the error before death. Case Notes

Accidental Death Coverage Considered Life Insurance for Purposes of Conversion Rights: Golt worked as a civilian employee of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) until he was discharged from employment in 1994 for cause. Thirty days after termination, Golt died of carbon monoxide poisoning. As a benefit of employment, Golt was covered by an accident insurance policy issued by General American Life Insurance Company (General), which provided that if he died while covered by the policy, his estate was eligible to receive $200,000. The policy also provided that coverage would terminate on the first premium due date after Golt ceased to be an employee, which in this case was 6 days after Golt was terminated from employment. The General policy also allowed the group accident policy to be converted to an individual policy within 31 days of discharge upon written application and payment of the first premium. In addition to the General policy, Golt was also insured by Aetna Life Insurance Company (Aetna) under a group life and accident and health insurance policy, which provided a life insurance benefit of $32,000 if Golt died from any cause while insured, plus an accidental death benefit of $32,000 in the event of Golt's accidental death. The Aetna policy provided that coverage ceased upon termination of employment, but allowed the group life insurance policy to be converted to individual life insurance within 31 days of discharge and provided that if Golt died during that period, benefits would be payable. AAFES transmitted the Aetna claim, which paid $32,000 under the life insurance provisions but denied the claim for accidental death benefits on grounds that the coverage ended when employment was terminated. AAFES did not transmit the General claim. A subsequent request for benefits from General was denied because the claim was not submitted within 20 days after the covered loss occurred. Golt's wife commenced an action in 1996 in federal court, seeking accidental death benefits from both Aetna and General. The federal District Court concluded that there was no coverage under either policy and entered final judgment in favor of the insurers. In 1999, the Supreme Court agreed to address three questions certified by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals pursuant to former Rule 44, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), regarding the Montana statutory definitions of life insurance for purposes of determining an insured's conversions rights. The Supreme Court held that under 33-1-205, an insurance coverage may come within the definition of two kinds of insurance. Therefore, although accidental death coverage is disability insurance, for purposes of conversion rights, it is also life insurance as defined in 33-1-208. As life insurance, accidental death coverage is subject to a 31-day conversion right upon termination of coverage pursuant to this section and, in the event of death within the 31-day conversion period, is subject to automatic conversion under 33-20-1211. With regard to Golt's policies, the accidental death policy remained in effect, even when Golt died during the 31-day grace period without exercising the right to convert the policy by making application and paying the first premium. 1997 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 298, L. 1997, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 15] [33-20-1315] grants rulemaking authority to the insurance commissioner. The rulemaking authority is consistent with the requirements of Public Law 104-191, H.R. 3103, which provides for the adoption of standards promulgated by the national association of insurance commissioners. The commissioner in adopting rules needs to establish trade practice standards for regulating advertising and solicitation of viatical settlement contracts, for evaluating reasonableness of payments under viatical settlement contracts, and for determining the forms necessary to effectively administer the bill. The rules adopted should be consistent with any regulations adopted under Public Law 104-191, H.R. 3103. Chapter Case Notes

Car Rental Accidental Death Policy as Disability Insurance: An insurance policy providing a renter of a car with coverage for accidental death arising from operation during the rental period was classified as disability insurance under 33-1-207, rather than life insurance under 33-1-208. Therefore, an "intoxicants exclusion" in the policy was not voided by the prohibition against such exclusions as related to life insurance policies under 33-20-121. Rodli v. Am. Bankers Ins. Case Notes

Tort Action — Failure to Pay Promptly: An insurer has not only a contractual duty to make payment of a valid claim but a statutory duty to do so as soon as possible. It is the breach of that statutory requirement, a duty independent of the insurance contract, that gives rise to tort liability. The measure of damages in such a case is provided in 27-1-317. First Sec. Bank v. Goddard, 181 M 407, 593 P2d 1040 (1979).

Credit Disability Insurance — Punitive Damages Not Barred: The District Court erred in granting the defendant insurer's motion to strike the plaintiff's claim for punitive damages arising out of the defendant's refusal to pay on a credit disability insurance policy. The general rule that exemplary damages are not allowed in actions arising out of breach of contract would not preclude award of exemplary damages where acts constituting alleged breach of contract also violated state law. 1989 Amendment: Substituted language in (1) providing for the initial amount of credit life insurance (see 1989 Session Law for text) for "(1) The amount of credit life insurance shall be equal to the indebtedness, provided that the original indebtedness does not exceed the sum of $15,000. If the original indebtedness exceeds the sum of $15,000, the amount of credit life insurance shall not exceed the indebtedness. Where indebtedness repayable in substantially equal installments is secured by an individual policy of credit life insurance, the amount of insurance shall not exceed the approximate unpaid indebtedness on the date of death and where secured by a group policy of credit life insurance shall not exceed the exact amount of unpaid indebtedness on such date. Except, that agricultural loans not exceeding 1 year may be written up to the amount of the loan commitment on a nondecreasing or level term plan"; at end of (2) deleted "provided that the original indebtedness does not exceed the sum of $15,000. If the original indebtedness exceeds the sum of $15,000, the amount of periodic indemnity payable by credit disability insurance in the event of disability, as defined in the policy, shall not exceed the aggregate of the periodic scheduled unpaid installments of indebtedness and shall not exceed the original indebtedness divided by the number of periodic installments"; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Effective Date of Disability Insurance: Disability insurance, subject to acceptance by the insurer, commences on the date when the debtor becomes obligated to the creditor. A promissory note takes effect from the time of its delivery. The promissory note was considered delivered at the time it was mailed to the bank. The note thereupon became the property of the payee when it was posted to the bank. It was beyond the control of the makers at that time. The time of mailing therefore became the "time of his engagement" under 30-3-413, fixing the liability of the maker. It was at that time that the insured became obligated to the creditor under 33-21-204, and the disability insurance financed by the note became effective. First Sec. Bank v. Case Notes

Requirement for Payment of Insurance: The contract for the retail installment purchase of a mobile home contained a clause stating that credit life and disability insurance was not required by the seller. The buyer, now deceased, applied for the insurance and paid the first premium. The retail installment sale contract was assigned to the First National Bank, making it a creditor. An employee of the seller decided the buyer was not eligible for insurance and never forwarded his application to the parent company. Buyer's premium payment was not returned to him until the attorney for his estate requested payment on the insurance. If the payment by the buyer was required, 33-21-206(3) applies, and the seller was required to give written notice to the buyer which was not done. If no payment was required, 33-21-206(3) does not apply. This is a genuine issue of material fact, and therefore summary judgment was improperly granted. Cameron v. First Nat'l Bank, 186 M 345, 607 P2d 1113 (1980).

No such policy, certificate of insurance, notice of proposed insurance, and no application, binder, endorsement, or rider shall be issued or used until the expiration of 30 days after it has been so filed, unless the commissioner gives his prior written approval thereto.

(4) The commissioner may, at any time after a hearing, of which not less than 20 days' written notice was given to the insurer, withdraw his approval of any such form on any of such grounds.

(5) It is not lawful for the insurer to issue such forms or use them after the effective date of such withdrawal of approval"; in (4) inserted first sentence prohibiting use of a form that has had approval withdrawn; and made minor changes in phraseology and style.

CHAPTER 22
DISABILITY INSURANCE

Chapter Compiler's Comments

Review of Health Care Insurance — Advisory Council: Section 1, Ch. 114, L. 2011, required the insurance commissioner to convene an advisory council to review the costs, benefits, and procedural and technical requirements necessary to design, implement, and maintain a statewide all-payer, all-claims database for health care and to report to the children, families, health, and human services interim committee. Chapter 114 was effective July 1, 2011, and terminates December 31, 2012.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 114, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, comprehensive data about the quality and cost of health care allows state policymakers to monitor the success and efficiency of efforts to reduce health care costs and improve both health care quality and population health; and

WHEREAS, comprehensive health care data can show statewide variation in care, including whether evidence-based guidelines and best-practice clinical standards are being followed and how they affect cost and quality; and

WHEREAS, access to comparative data can help businesses to learn where they stand when compared with their peers with respect to the cost and covered services of health insurance policies; and

WHEREAS, comparative data provides consumers with information that they and their health care providers can use to make informed decisions about the effectiveness of treatments and the quality of care; and

WHEREAS, comparative data supports providers' efforts to design targeted quality improvement initiatives and to compare their own performance with that of their peers; and

WHEREAS, comprehensive health care data helps health care policymakers evaluate reform efforts and identify communities that provide cost-effective care so that successful initiatives can be identified and replicated; and

WHEREAS, other states have learned of the value of all-payer, all-claims health care databases and have implemented them to the benefit of their citizens while protecting the privacy rights of all individuals."

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Coverage Required Under Uniform Health Benefit Plans: The Legislature expressly codified uniform health benefit plans with other insurance plans and the mandated benefit provisions codified throughout this chapter, without any language restricting application of the mandated benefit provisions. Therefore, uniform health benefit plans authorized by Ch. 527, L. 1995, must include coverage for the services and articles specifically referred to in 33-22-245 (now repealed) and 33-22-522 (now repealed) and for the mandated benefit provisions of Title 33, ch. 22. 46 A.G. Statute of Limitations on Claim for Disability Insurance Cost of Living Adjustments: Rodgers purchased a disability policy from defendant in 1983. On the application, Rodgers checked a box requesting cost of living adjustments (COLA), but the request was turned down by defendant because a policy with COLA benefits required a higher premium. Defendant received a document purportedly signed by Rodgers, requesting that the COLA rider be deleted. Defendant then issued a policy without the benefits, and Rodgers began paying premiums on the policy without COLA benefits. Rodgers raised no issue or complaint regarding the lack of COLA payments until 2002, when he sued defendant for COLA payments. The District Court summarily dismissed the claim, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Rodgers had been receiving monthly disability payments, without COLA benefits, since 1989, and because the payments did not increase, it should have been clear to Rodgers that he was not receiving COLA increases. By the time that Rodgers' claim was filed in 2002, the statute of limitations for the claim had expired, and summary judgment for defendant was proper. Rodgers v. MONY Life Ins. Co., 2005 MT 290, 329 M 289, 124 P3d 137 (2005).

Material Misrepresentation on Application for Credit Life and Disability Insurance — Denial of Coverage Warranted: Schlemmer applied to the North Central Life Insurance Company (North Central) for credit life and disability insurance but misrepresented his health history. If he had answered correctly on the application, he would have been ineligible for the insurance. Nevertheless, he averred by his signature that he understood the form and that his application statements were true, so the policy was issued. Schlemmer later filed a claim for disability payments. North Central investigated, found that Schlemmer had been treated within the previous 2 years for hypertension, chronic obstructive lung disease, and disease or disorder of the kidneys, contrary to his statements in the application, and denied the claim and refunded Schlemmer's premiums. Schlemmer sued for damages, claiming that the application and underwriting procedures used by North Central violated 33-18-201, commonly known as the unfair claims settlement practices law, breached the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and constituted fraud. Schlemmer also maintained that the District Court erred in failing to rule on whether North Central's agent had knowledge of Schlemmer's condition, which might have created a question of material fact. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's rulings that: (1) Schlemmer's claim of ignorance of the contents of the written application could not prevail because the application language was clear and unambiguous and Schlemmer did not deny signing it; (2) Schlemmer materially misrepresented his health on the application; (3) the material misrepresentation was legally sufficient to allow North Central to deny coverage under the policy; and (4) Schlemmer's argument that North Central's agent knew or should have known about Schlemmer's health was mere speculation insufficient to create an issue of fact to defeat North Central's properly supported motion for summary judgment. Further, the Supreme Court declined to consider Schlemmer's argument that the misrepresentation could not serve as a basis to rescind the policy because he did not apply for benefits until more than 2 years after applying for the insurance, pursuant to 33-22-205, because Schlemmer never raised the issue at the District Court level. Schlemmer v. N. Cent. Life Ins. Co., 2001 MT 256, 307 M 203, 37 P3d 63 (2001).

Case Notes

Workers' Compensation Claimant's Right to Choose Treating Physician Not Denied by Department of Labor and Industry Selection of Panel Physician for Diagnosis: Grooms filed a workers' compensation claim with her insurer, the State Fund, alleging that she suffered from a skin allergy condition. The State Fund denied liability and requested that the Department of Labor and Industry process her claim under the Occupational Disease Act of Montana (now repealed and merged with Workers' Compensation Act) by scheduling a medical examination for her by a member of a panel of physicians. Grooms objected to the first designated physician, and another was designated. The physician concluded that Grooms was suffering from an allergic condition that could not be definitively attributed to her employment. The diagnosis was given to Grooms, and she was notified of her right to have another medical evaluation done by a panel physician at her own expense. In the Workers' Compensation Court, Grooms alleged that her right to choose her own treating physician under this section was violated by 39-72-602 (now repealed), pursuant to which the Department chose a panel physician to conduct an examination. However, the Workers' Compensation Court held against her. The Supreme Court affirmed the Workers' Compensation Court, holding that the choice of a treating physician under this section has nothing to do with the selection of an examining physician from a panel by the Department. The purpose of the examination by a physician chosen from the panel is for consultation with an independent expert to determine if the claimant is suffering from an occupational disease and not for the purpose of treatment. The Supreme Court distinguished the case relied on by Grooms, Stordalen v. Ricci's Food Farm, 261 M 256, 862 P2d 393 (1993), by noting that the case involved neither 39-72-602 nor examination by a medical panel physician. Grooms v. Ponderosa Inn, 283 M 459, 942 P2d 699, 54 St. Rep. 725 (1997).

Conflict Between Workers' Compensation Statute and Administrative Rule — Fiscal Health Not Justification for Discrimination: Under this section, a workers' compensation claimant is entitled to freedom of choice in selecting a treating physician, but under ARM 24.29.1511, an injured worker cannot change physicians without the approval of the State Fund. The Workers' Compensation Court correctly found that pursuant to 33-1-102, the freedom of choice under this section is not extended to workers' compensation cases. However, in reality, the exemption extends to cases involving coverage by the State Fund under Plan No. 1 or 3 but not to workers covered under Plan No. 2. The State Fund argued that the differentiation did not present an equal protection problem because the disparate treatment was rationally related to the legitimate governmental goal of controlling workers' compensation costs. The Supreme Court found that the policy of discriminating among injured workers based solely on which insurance plan supplied coverage was an equal protection violation because it was not rationally related to a legitimate government objective. Offering services to some while excluding others always results in lower costs, but cost control alone does not justify disparate treatment that violates an individual's right to equal protection of the law. Discrimination is not allowed merely for the sake of fiscal health. Heisler v. Hines Motor Co., 282 M 270, 937 P2d 45, 54 St. Rep. 345 (1997), distinguishing Stratemeyer v. Lincoln County, 259 M 147, 855 P2d 506 (1993), and Chiropractors for Justice v. Alaska, 895 P2d 962 (Alaska 1995).

Case Notes

Policy Definitions Conflicting With Incontestability Provision — Assertion of Forman Defense Violative of Montana Law: An insured brought an action against Deonier, an insurance agent, and Paul Revere Life Insurance Company (Revere) to recover benefits and damages after the insured's claim was denied on grounds of a preexisting condition, despite the incontestability clause in the policy. The agent cross-claimed against the company for indemnity and breach of fiduciary duty, contending that Revere planned to assert the Forman defense in Montana (see Mass. Cas. Ins. Co. v. Forman, 516 F2d 425 (5th Cir. 1975), in which an insurer asserts a legal defense to the incontestability clause based on its definition of sickness as excluding disabilities that manifested themselves prior to the date of issue of the policy). The District Court declined to decide the issue of the legality of Revere's disability policy, holding that Revere was entitled to assert the Forman defense and that any opinion concerning the interpretation of the policy would be an inappropriate advisory opinion. The Supreme Court found that the question of whether the policy definitions conflicted with the statutorily required incontestability clause was a question of law on which Deonier's punitive damages claim rested and thus did not constitute an inappropriate advisory opinion. Because the incontestability clause is required by statute, interpretation of language in the clause must be construed to effectuate legislative intent, not the intent of the parties, and the incontestability clause takes precedence over other language in the policy. In this case, the definitional and coverage provisions purported to limit available coverage to disabilities caused by sickness or disease that first manifested after the date on which the policy was issued and to exclude coverage for preexisting conditions that were not disclosed on the application; at the same time, the incontestability clause barred the insurer from denying coverage because a sickness or physical condition had existed before the date on which the policy was issued, creating a conflict in which the incontestability clause must control. Consequently, Revere's assertion of the Forman defense violated Montana law, and denial of coverage for a disability, whether or not the causative sickness first manifested itself before the policy's date of issue, was barred by the incontestability clause. Deonier & Associates v. Paul Revere Life Ins. Co., 2000 MT 238, 301 M 347, 9 P3d 622, 57 St. Rep. 989 (2000), following Galanty v. Paul Revere Life Ins. Co., 1 P3d 658 (Calif. 2000).

Case Notes

Forman Defense — Issues of Material Fact Regarding Whether Insurance Company Breached Duty to Inform Agent of Litigation Risks in Sale of Policy — Summary Judgment Inappropriate: An insured brought an action against Deonier, an insurance agent, and Paul Revere Life Insurance Company (Revere) to recover benefits and damages after the insured's claim was denied on grounds of a preexisting condition, despite the incontestability clause in the policy. The agent cross-claimed against the company for indemnity and breach of fiduciary duty, contending that there was a significant amount of evidence that Revere planned to assert the Forman defense in Montana (see Mass. Cas. Ins. Co. v. Forman, 516 F2d 425 (5th Cir. 1975), in which an insurer asserts a legal defense to the incontestability clause based on its definition of sickness as excluding disabilities that manifested themselves prior to the date of issue of the policy) and that Revere's failure to inform Deonier of its intention to invoke the defense was a clear breach of Revere's duty to inform its agents of a risk of pecuniary loss from potential lawsuits. Revere asserted that, pursuant to Doettl v. Colonial Life & Accident Ins. Co., 505 F. Supp. 127 (D.C. Mont. 1981), in which a Montana federal District Court endorsed the Forman defense, it had no reason to believe that its policy interpretation might be in violation of Montana law and therefore did not breach its duty to inform its agents of risk of pecuniary loss. The District Court found that Revere owed Deonier a fiduciary duty pursuant to Restatement (Second) of Agency 435 (1958), but, apparently applying 33-18-242, determined that Revere did not breach that duty and dismissed the breach of fiduciary duty action by summary judgment. On appeal, the Supreme Court found the application of 33-18-242 to be misplaced, the proper analysis being simply whether Revere breached Restatement (Second) of Agency 435 (1958). The Supreme Court agreed that a principal has no duty to inform its agent of unknown future legal positions, but in this case, the potential consequences of applying the Forman defense were not unknown, having been the subject of a Revere corporate counsel paper published in 1987, years before the disability policy at issue in this case was issued. The court also found Revere's argument based on Doettl to be without merit. Although Doettl applied some Montana law, it was not binding on the Montana Supreme Court. Because the issue was still one of first impression in Montana, Revere could not rely on Doettl to support its position that as a matter of uncontroverted fact and law, it had no knowledge of risk to its agents. Thus, the question of whether Revere breached its duty to inform Deonier of the risks of litigation involved issues of material fact, so the District Court's award of summary judgment to Revere was reversible error. Deonier & Associates v. Paul Revere Life Ins. Co., 2000 MT 238, 301 M 347, 9 P3d 622, 57 St. Rep. 989 (2000).

the intent of the parties, and the incontestability clause takes precedence over other language in the policy. In this case, the definitional and coverage provisions purported to limit available coverage to disabilities caused by sickness or disease that first manifested after the date on which the policy was issued and to exclude coverage for preexisting conditions that were not disclosed on the application; at the same time, the incontestability clause barred the insurer from denying coverage because a sickness or physical condition had existed before the date on which the policy was issued, creating a conflict in which the incontestability clause must control. Consequently, Revere's assertion of the Forman defense violated Montana law, and denial of coverage for a disability, whether or not the causative sickness first manifested itself before the policy's date of issue, was barred by the incontestability clause. Deonier & Associates v. Paul Revere Life Ins. Co., 2000 MT 238, 301 M 347, 9 P3d 622, 57 St. Rep. 989 (2000), following Galanty v. Paul Revere Life Ins. Co., 1 P3d 658 (Calif. 2000).

Case Notes

Material Misrepresentation on Application for Credit Life and Disability Insurance — Denial of Coverage Warranted: Schlemmer applied to the North Central Life Insurance Company (North Central) for credit life and disability insurance but misrepresented his health history. If he had answered correctly on the application, he would have been ineligible for the insurance. Nevertheless, he averred by his signature that he understood the form and that his application statements were true, so the policy was issued. Schlemmer later filed a claim for disability payments. North Central investigated, found that Schlemmer had been treated within the previous 2 years for hypertension, chronic obstructive lung disease, and disease or disorder of the kidneys, contrary to his statements in the application, and denied the claim and refunded Schlemmer's premiums. Schlemmer sued for damages, claiming that the application and underwriting procedures used by North Central violated 33-18-201, commonly known as the unfair claims settlement practices law, breached the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and constituted fraud. Schlemmer also maintained that the District Court erred in failing to rule on whether North Central's agent had knowledge of Schlemmer's condition, which might have created a question of material fact. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's rulings that: (1) Schlemmer's claim of ignorance of the contents of the written application could not prevail because the application language was clear and unambiguous and Schlemmer did not deny signing it; (2) Schlemmer materially misrepresented his health on the application; (3) the material misrepresentation was legally sufficient to allow North Central to deny coverage under the policy; and (4) Schlemmer's argument that North Central's agent knew or should have known about Schlemmer's health was mere speculation insufficient to create an issue of fact to defeat North Central's properly supported motion for summary judgment. Further, the Supreme Court declined to consider Schlemmer's argument that the misrepresentation could not serve as a basis to rescind the policy because he did not apply for benefits until more than 2 years after applying for the insurance, pursuant to this section, because Schlemmer never raised the issue at the District Court level. Schlemmer v. N. Cent. Life Ins. Co., 2001 MT 256, 307 M 203, 37 P3d 63 (2001).

Forman Defense — Issues of Material Fact Regarding Whether Insurance Company Breached Duty to Inform Agent of Litigation Risks in Sale of Policy — Summary Judgment Inappropriate: An insured brought an action against Deonier, an insurance agent, and Paul Revere Life Insurance Company (Revere) to recover benefits and damages after the insured's claim was denied on grounds of a preexisting condition, despite the incontestability clause in the policy. The agent cross-claimed against the company for indemnity and breach of fiduciary duty, contending that there was a significant amount of evidence that Revere planned to assert the Forman defense in Montana (see Mass. Cas. Ins. Co. v. Forman, 516 F2d 425 (5th Cir. 1975), in which an insurer asserts a legal defense to the incontestability clause based on its definition of sickness as excluding disabilities that manifested themselves prior to the date of issue of the policy) and that Revere's failure to inform Deonier of its intention to invoke the defense was a clear breach of Revere's duty to inform its agents of a risk of pecuniary loss from potential lawsuits. Revere asserted that, pursuant to Doettl v. Colonial Life & Accident Ins. Co., 505 F. Supp. 127 (D.C. Mont. 1981), in which a Montana federal District Court endorsed the Forman defense, it had no reason to believe that its policy interpretation might be in violation of Montana law and therefore did not breach its duty to inform its agents of risk of pecuniary loss. The District Court found that Revere owed Deonier a fiduciary duty pursuant to Restatement (Second) of Agency 435 (1958), but, apparently applying 33-18-242, determined that Revere did not breach that duty and dismissed the breach of fiduciary duty action by summary judgment. On appeal, the Supreme Court found the application of 33-18-242 to be misplaced, the proper analysis being simply whether Revere breached Restatement (Second) of Agency 435 (1958). The Supreme Court agreed that a principal has no duty to inform its agent of unknown future legal positions, but in this case, the potential consequences of applying the Forman defense were not unknown, having been the subject of a Revere corporate counsel paper published in 1987, years before the disability policy at issue in this case was issued. The court also found Revere's argument based on Doettl to be without merit. Although Doettl applied some Montana law, it was not binding on the Montana Supreme Court. Because the issue was still one of first impression in Montana, Revere could not rely on Doettl to support its position that as a matter of uncontroverted fact and law, it had no knowledge of risk to its agents. Thus, the question of whether Revere breached its duty to inform Deonier of the risks of litigation involved issues of material fact, so the District Court's award of summary judgment to Revere was reversible error. Deonier & Associates v. Paul Revere Life Ins. Co., 2000 MT 238, 301 M 347, 9 P3d 622, 57 St. Rep. 989 (2000).

Policy Definitions Conflicting With Incontestability Provision — Assertion of Forman Defense Violative of Montana Law: An insured brought an action against Deonier, an insurance agent, and Paul Revere Life Insurance Company (Revere) to recover benefits and damages after the insured's claim was denied on grounds of a preexisting condition, despite the incontestability clause in the policy. The agent cross-claimed against the company for indemnity and breach of fiduciary duty, contending that Revere planned to assert the Forman defense in Montana (see Mass. Cas. Ins. Co. v. Forman, 516 F2d 425 (5th Cir. 1975), in which an insurer asserts a legal defense to the incontestability clause based on its definition of sickness as excluding disabilities that manifested themselves prior to the date of issue of the policy). The District Court declined to decide the issue of the legality of Revere's disability policy, holding that Revere was entitled to assert the Forman defense and that any opinion concerning the interpretation of the policy would be an inappropriate advisory opinion. The Supreme Court found that the question of whether the policy definitions conflicted with the statutorily required incontestability clause was a question of law on which Deonier's punitive damages claim rested and thus did not constitute an inappropriate advisory opinion. Because the incontestability clause is required by statute, interpretation of language in the clause must be construed to effectuate legislative intent, not the intent of the parties, and the incontestability clause takes precedence over other language in the policy. In this case, the definitional and coverage provisions purported to limit available coverage to disabilities caused by sickness or disease that first manifested after the date on which the policy was issued and to exclude coverage for preexisting conditions that were not disclosed on the application; at the same time, the incontestability clause barred the insurer from denying coverage because a sickness or physical condition had existed before the date on which the policy was issued, creating a conflict in which the incontestability clause must control. Consequently, Revere's assertion of the Forman defense violated Montana law, and denial of coverage for a disability, whether or not the causative sickness first manifested itself before the policy's date of issue, was barred by the incontestability clause. Proof of Loss Distinguished: The terms "notice" and "proof of loss", within the meaning of a life insurance policy requiring both from one claiming disability benefits, are frequently used interchangeably, but they are distinct, proof of loss being more formal and definite. This is made clear in the case of Da Rin v. Cas. Co. of Am., 41 M 175, 108 P 649 (1910), but prompt proof of loss may answer for notice. Conlon v. N. Life Ins. Co., 108 M 473, 92 P2d 284 (1939).

Case Notes

Form of Proof: "Due proof of loss" as a condition precedent to the right of recovery of any loss arising under a life insurance policy providing for disability benefits does not require any particular form or proof which the insurer might arbitrarily demand, but such a statement of facts which, if established, would prima facie require payment of the claim. Conlon v. N. Life Ins. Co., 108 M 473, 92 P2d 284 (1939).

Insufficient Proof of Loss: A letter received by an insurance company on the date of insured's death advising of insured's illness, one received on the following day asking for blanks on which to submit proof of loss of time due to sickness, and one advising the company of insured's death were held insufficient as formal proof of disability required under sick benefit provisions of life insurance policy. Conlon v. N. Life Ins. Co., 108 M 473, 92 P2d 284 (1939).

Temporary Disability — Recovery Through Presumption of Permanent Disability: Under a life insurance policy covering disability losses and declaring that total disability should be presumed to be permanent, inter alia, if it had existed for 90 days, the insured was entitled to receive disability payments so long as his disability continued even though he was gainfully employed when he instituted the action, as against the contention of insurer that benefits were payable only in case of absolutely permanent disability. DeVore v. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 103 M 599, 64 P2d 1071 (1937).

Degree of Proof Required: Where preliminary proof is required under an insurance policy, the insured is not bound to give such proof as is necessary in a court of justice, the best evidence within his power to give at the time being sufficient to put the insurer upon inquiry to determine whether he is liable. Caldwell v. Wash. Fidelity Nat'l Ins. Co., 94 M 431, 23 P2d 257 (1933); Wick v. W. Life & Cas. Co., 60 M 553, 199 P 272 (1921).

Failure to Object to Insufficient Proof — Waiver of Defects: Where the insured has attempted to make proof of loss, even though it be insufficient or defective, the burden is cast upon the insurance company to make objection thereto, or it will be considered to have waived the defect or insufficiency. Caldwell v. Wash. Fidelity Nat'l Ins. Co., 94 M 431, 23 P2d 257 (1933).

Case Notes

Exemplary and Punitive Damages — Insurer Maliciously Avoids Payment: If insurance company stalled payment on claim deliberately, and ultimately failed to pay, breach of insurance contract was also violation of insurance code, and punitive damages could be awarded. Helton v. Reserve Life Ins. Co., 399 F. Supp. 1322 (D.C. Mont. 1975).

Criminal Penalty: Separate penalty provided in 33-1-104 is applicable to violation of this section where insurer's acts or omissions in avoiding prompt payment are oppressive, malicious, or fraudulent. State ex rel. Larson v. District Court, 149 M 131, 423 P2d 598 (1967), distinguished in State ex rel. Cashen v. District Court, 157 M 40, 482 P2d 567 (1971).

Tort Liability for Failure to Promptly Pay: See First Sec. Bank v. Goddard, 181 M 407, 593 P2d 1040 (1979).

Credit Disability Insurance — Punitive Damages Not Barred: The District Court erred in granting the defendant insurer's motion to strike the plaintiff's claim for punitive damages arising out of the defendant's refusal to pay on a credit disability insurance policy. The general rule that exemplary damages are not allowed in actions arising out of breach of contract would not preclude award of exemplary damages where acts constituting alleged breach of contract also violated state law. State ex rel. Larson v. District Court, 149 M 131, 423 P2d 598 (1967), distinguished in State ex rel. Cashen v. District Court, 157 M 40, 482 P2d 567 (1971).

Case Notes

Intoxication Exclusion Inapplicable Absent Evidence of Influence Upon Death: Caster's life insurance policy excluded coverage if death was caused in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, from the influence of any intoxicant. Evidence was submitted that Caster had been drinking the night before he died, but the physician who examined Caster after he died testified that Caster had aspirated food, causing respiratory arrest and then cardiac arrest. The insurance company bore the burden of proving that the exclusionary clause applied, but because of a lack of substantial credible evidence that the influence of alcohol had any relationship to Caster's death, the trial court properly held that the intoxication exclusion in the policy did not apply to Caster's accidental death. Ike v. Jefferson Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 267 M 396, 884 P2d 471, 51 St. Rep. 1097 (1994).

Group Disability Insurance

33-22-501. Group disability insurance defined — eligible groups.

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 375 in (2), near beginning after "union", deleted "which shall have a constitution and bylaws"; inserted (5) allowing issuance of a policy to a voluntary purchasing pool formed solely to obtain insurance; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Car Rental Policy as Individual Disability Policy: A car rental agreement that provided a renter with coverage for accidental death arising from operation during the rental period contained a provision excluding coverage if the renter suffered a loss caused directly or indirectly by intoxicants. Because the policy was characterized as an individual rather than group disability insurance policy, the "intoxicants exclusion" was rendered ineffective because the language was not approved by the Insurance Commissioner as required by 33-22-221. Rodli v. Am. Bankers Ins. Co. of Fla., 44 St. Rep. 1888 (D.C. Mont. 1987) (apparently not reported in Federal Supplement).

Insurer May Not Decide Group Eligibility: An insurer may not unilaterally determine the eligibility of a purported group for treatment as a group under the Montana Insurance Code. Rather, this section ensures that only those nonenumerated groups expressly sanctioned by the Insurance Commissioner are eligible for treatment as a group. Rodli v. Am. Bankers Ins. Co. of Fla., 44 St. Rep. 1888 (D.C. Mont. 1987) (apparently not reported in Federal Supplement).

33-22-502. Required provisions of group policies.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

1991 Amendment: Near beginning substituted "delivered or issued for delivery in this state must" for "shall"; inserted (4) requiring policy to contain a provision relating to conformity with Montana statutes; and made minor changes in style.

Administrative Rules

Title 6, chapter 6, subchapter 24, ARM Group coordination of benefits.

Case Notes

Notice Requirement of Exclusionary Clause Added to Later Group Contract: Where group medical insurer added an exclusionary clause to group policy, in subsequent year, that "experimental" and "unacceptable medical practice" would not be covered but did not notify beneficiaries, a denial of a claim under that clause was improper and in effect revived terms of prior contract without exclusionary clause based on simple fairness and equity to beneficiaries. Severability: Section 11, Ch. 579, L. 1981, was a severability section.

33-22-508. Conversion on termination of eligibility.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 227 at beginning of (1) after "insurance" deleted "delivered or issued for delivery or renewed after October 1, 1981"; in (6) deleted former second sentence that read: "If the insurer or conversion carrier is not a small employer carrier under part 18, the insurer shall make available a conversion policy, certificate, or membership contract that provides equivalent benefits to a basic health benefit plan as provided in 33-22-1827"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 2011.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 469 in (6) at beginning of second sentence after "insurer" inserted "or conversion carrier" and at end after "plan" inserted "as provided in 33-22-1827" and inserted fourth sentence providing that subsection (6) does not apply to disability plans that provide only excepted benefits; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 227 in (1) near beginning after "policy ceases because of termination" substituted "of the person's membership in a group eligible for coverage under the policy, because of termination of the person's employment" for "of the person's employment or of the person's membership in the class or classes eligible for coverage under the policy", near middle substituted "group disability coverage or an individual disability policy" for "group coverage or an individual policy", and after "absence of an individual" substituted "disability policy issued by the insurer, a group disability policy issued by the insurer" for "policy issued by the insurer, a group policy issued by the insurer, of hospital or medical service insurance"; inserted (2) regarding conversion carriers; in (3) near middle of second sentence after "insurer" inserted "or conversion carrier"; in (4) at end of first sentence substituted "group policy being terminated at the time of the conversion" for "coverage of the individual or group policy" and at end of second sentence after "rate" inserted "of the policy being terminated at the time of the conversion"; inserted (5) requiring a conversion carrier to offer an individual or group conversion policy that provides the same schedule of benefits and covers the same eligible expenses as those being terminated; in (6) at beginning after "The insurer" inserted "or conversion carrier"; inserted (7) regarding the effective date and time of the conversion policy; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 228 inserted second sentence in (3) prohibiting premium in excess of 150% of customary rate if person entitled to conversion has been insured for more than 3 years. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 228, L. 1999, provided: "[This act] applies to a policy, certificate, or contract of disability insurance and a health service membership contract entered into or renewed on or after January 1, 2000."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 531 in (4), in first sentence after "shall", inserted "also", after "available" substituted "a" for "an individual", after "policy" inserted "certificate, or membership contract", and after "provides" inserted "at least" and in second sentence, after "available", substituted "a" for "an individual" and after "policy" inserted "certificate, or membership contract".

1995 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 379 in (1), near beginning before "or renewed", substituted "policy or certificate of insurance delivered or issued for delivery" for "policy issued" and near middle, after "individual policy", deleted "issued by the insurer"; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 527 in (2) inserted last sentence referring to conversion policy; in (3), in first sentence, substituted "must be at no more than 200% of the insurer's then customary rate" for "must be at the insurer's then customary rate" and inserted second sentence defining customary rate; inserted (4) requiring individual conversion policy; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1996.

Style changes in the chapters were slightly different. In each case, the codifier chose the most appropriate.

Severability: Section 99, Ch. 379, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Applicability: Section 10, Ch. 579, L. 1981, provided: "Sections 3 through 9 [33-22-507 through 33-22-511, and 33-30-1006 through 33-30-1009 and 33-30-1021] shall apply only to disability insurers and health service corporations."

Severability: Section 11, Ch. 579, L. 1981, was a severability section.

Case Notes

Accidental Death Coverage Considered Life Insurance for Purposes of Conversion Rights: Golt worked as a civilian employee of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) until he was discharged from employment in 1994 for cause. Thirty days after termination, Golt died of carbon monoxide poisoning. As a benefit of employment, Golt was covered by an accident insurance policy issued by General American Life Insurance Company (General), which provided that if he died while covered by the policy, his estate was eligible to receive $200,000. The policy also provided that coverage would terminate on the first premium due date after Golt ceased to be an employee, which in this case was 6 days after Golt was terminated from employment. The General policy also allowed the group accident policy to be converted to an individual policy within 31 days of discharge upon written application and payment of the first premium. In addition to the General policy, Golt was also insured by Aetna Life Insurance Company (Aetna) under a group life and accident and health insurance policy, which provided a life insurance benefit of $32,000 if Golt died from any cause while insured, plus an accidental death benefit of $32,000 in the event of Golt's accidental death. The Aetna policy provided that coverage ceased upon termination of employment, but allowed the group life insurance policy to be converted to individual life insurance within 31 days of discharge and provided that if Golt died during that period, benefits would be payable. AAFES transmitted the Aetna claim, which paid $32,000 under the life insurance provisions but denied the claim for accidental death benefits on grounds that the coverage ended when employment was terminated. AAFES did not transmit the General claim. A subsequent request for benefits from General was denied because the claim was not submitted within 20 days after the covered loss occurred. Golt's wife commenced an action in 1996 in federal court, seeking accidental death benefits from both Aetna and General. The federal District Court concluded that there was no coverage under either policy and entered final judgment in favor of the insurers. In 1999, the Supreme Court agreed to address three questions certified by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals pursuant to former Rule 44, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), regarding the Montana statutory definitions of life insurance for purposes of determining an insured's conversions rights. The Supreme Court held that under 33-1-205, an insurance coverage may come within the definition of two kinds of insurance. Therefore, although accidental death coverage is disability insurance, for purposes of conversion rights, it is also life insurance as defined in 33-1-208. As life insurance, accidental death coverage is subject to a 31-day conversion right upon termination of coverage pursuant to 33-20-1209 and, in the event of death within the 31-day conversion period, is subject to automatic conversion under 33-20-1211. With regard to Golt's policies, the accidental death policy remained in effect, even when Golt died during the 31-day grace period without exercising the right to convert the policy by making application and paying the first premium. Golt v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 2000 MT 155, 300 M 142, 2 P3d 841, 57 St. Rep. 613 (2000).

Choice of Conversion Policies Limited to Policies Offered in State: Greany argued that the District Court's construction of the conversion statute essentially added "in the State of Montana" after "customarily issued". The Ninth Circuit Court held that the interpretation was reasonable, otherwise an insurer would be required to offer policies that potentially could subject the insurer to liability for not being in compliance with applicable Montana Law. Greany v. W. Farm Bureau Life Ins. Co., 973 F2d 812 (1992).

Case Notes

Preemption — State HIPAA and Unfair Trade Practices Act Claims: Plaintiff insureds claimed that the defendant insurer's premium increases violated Montana's Unfair Trade Practices Act, specifically 33-18-206, and 33-22-526, Montana's "little HIPAA" law. The federal District Court denied the plaintiffs' motion to remand to state court and granted the defendant summary judgment on both claims. On appeal, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that the state unfair insurance practices law was not preempted by federal law because it creates a separate right that cannot be remedied under federal law, but that federal HIPAA law preempted the Montana HIPAA law, both jurisdictionally and on the merits, because Montana's HIPAA provision is identical to and expressly relies on federal law. Blanket Disability Insurance 33-22-601. Blanket disability insurance defined.

Case Notes

Car Rental Policy as Individual Disability Policy: A car rental agreement that provided a renter with coverage for accidental death arising from operation during the rental period contained a provision excluding coverage if the renter suffered a loss caused directly or indirectly by intoxicants. Because the policy was characterized as an individual rather than group disability insurance policy, the "intoxicants exclusion" was rendered ineffective because the language was not approved by the Insurance Commissioner as required by 33-22-221. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1987 Amendments: Chapter 98 substituted definitions of inpatient benefits, outpatient benefits, and chemical dependency treatment center for former (1) through (3) that read: "(1) "Inpatient hospital benefits" means benefits payable for charges made by a hospital or freestanding inpatient facility, as defined in the policy or contract, for the necessary care and treatment of mental illness, alcoholism, or drug addiction furnished to a covered person while confined as an inpatient and, with respect to major medical policies or contracts, also includes those benefits payable for charges made by a physician, as defined in the policy or contract, for the necessary care and treatment of mental illness, alcoholism, or drug addiction furnished to a covered person while confined as a hospital inpatient.

(2) "Outpatient benefits" means benefits payable for:

(a) reasonable charges made by a hospital for the necessary care and treatment of mental illness, alcoholism, or drug addiction furnished to a covered person while not confined as a hospital inpatient;

(b) reasonable charges for services rendered or prescribed by a physician for the necessary care and treatment for mental illness, alcoholism, or drug addiction furnished to a covered person while not confined as a hospital inpatient;

(c) reasonable charges made by a mental health, alcoholism, or drug addiction treatment center for the necessary care and treatment of a covered person provided in the treatment center; and

(d) reasonable charges for services rendered by a licensed psychiatrist, psychologist, or social worker.

(3) "Alcoholism treatment center" and "drug addiction treatment center" mean a treatment facility which provides a program for the treatment of alcoholism or drug addiction pursuant to a written treatment plan approved and monitored by a physician or chemical dependency counselor certified by the state, and which facility is also:

(a) affiliated with a hospital under a contractual agreement with an established system for patient referral; or

(b) licensed or approved as an alcoholism or drug addiction treatment center by the alcohol authority of the state."

Chapter 606 in (2)(d) inserted "licensed professional counselor" and before "social worker" inserted "licensed". This language was codified in 33-22-705 pursuant to sec. 12, Ch. 606, L. 1987.

1985 Amendment: At end of (2)(d) added "or social worker".

1983 Amendment: Near beginning of (1), after "hospital" inserted "or freestanding inpatient facility"; near middle of (1), after "confined as" deleted "a hospital" and inserted "an"; inserted (2)(d) referring to services rendered by a licensed psychiatrist or psychologist; in (3) after "physician" inserted "or chemical dependency counselor certified by the state"; in (3)(b) after "licensed" deleted "certified", and before "state" inserted "alcohol authority of the".

1981 Amendment: Inserted "mental illness" after "treatment of" in (1) (two places) and (2)(a) and after "treatment for" in (2)(b); substituted "a mental health, alcoholism, or drug addiction treatment center" for "an alcoholism or drug addiction treatment center" in (2)(c); and added definitions of "mental health treatment center" and "mental illness".

Medicare Supplement Insurance Minimum Standards

Part Compiler's Comments

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 241 (Ch. 298, L. 1981) provided: "This bill is adopted to enable the State of Montana to meet the requirements of Public Law 96-265, the Social Security Disability Amendments of 1980 (the Baucus Amendment). Public

Law 96-265 establishes a program of federal certification of medicare supplemental insurance policies and provides that medicare supplemental policies issued in a state with an approved regulatory program shall be certified under the federal certification program. [In order to be approved, a state's medicare supplemental insurance policy regulatory program must provide for the application of standards with respect to such policies equal to or more stringent than the NAIC Model Regulation to Implement the Individual Accident and Sickness Insurance Minimum Standards Act, adopted by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners on June 6, 1979; include a requirement at least as stringent as the federal provision requiring that such policies return to policyholders in the form of aggregate benefits under the policy, at least 75% of the aggregate amount of premiums collected in the case of group policies and at least 60% of the aggregate amount of premiums collected in the case of individual policies; and apply these standards and requirements to all medicare supplemental policies issued in the state.]

A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the Commissioner of Insurance. This bill is intended to give the Commissioner of Insurance the authority to adopt rules establishing minimum standards for benefits, contents, and sale of medicare supplemental insurance policies in the State of Montana to insure the implementation of a regulatory program which meets the minimum standards of Public Law 96-265, the Social Security Disability Amendments of 1980.

It is contemplated that such rules should address the following:

(a) prohibited policy provisions including the kinds of coverage that may be excluded from coverage in a medicare supplemental policy;

(b) minimum standards for medicare supplement policy provisions and minimum benefit standards;

(c) required disclosure provisions such as provisions regarding renewal, continuation, and nonrenewal, definition and explanation of terms, preexisting condition limitations, "free-look" provisions and forms for a buyer's guide and an outline of policy coverage; and

(d) replacement requirements, including a form for notice to an applicant regarding replacement of disability insurance.

First adopted by the Public Health Committee on the 9th day of February, 1981.

It is the intent of the Legislature in enacting Senate Bill 241 to enable the Insurance Commissioner to implement a program for control of Medicare supplemental policies which will enable Montana to be exempted from the voluntary certification program for such policies established by Public Law 96-265. It is also the intent of the Legislature that policies supplementing Medicare be available to as broad a segment of senior citizens as possible. To that end, Senate Bill 241 should not be construed so as to prohibit the sale of Medicare supplemental policies with benefit levels less than those established by Public Law 96-265, if the Insurance Commissioner finds that such sales would not prevent Montana from obtaining the aforementioned exemption."

Severability: Section 11, Ch. 298, L. 1981, was a severability section.

Long-Term Care Insurance Act

Part Compiler's Comments

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 355, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because section 14 [33-22-1121(1)] authorizes the commissioner of insurance of the state of Montana to promulgate rules relating to the disclosure of policy provisions, coverage, marketability, and prohibited practices in the solicitation of long-term care insurance. The legislature intends that the rules which the commissioner adopts to implement this bill be designed principally to protect the insurance-buying public in Montana by requiring insurers who offer long-term care insurance to accurately describe coverages provided by the insurance product and to prohibit certain practices regarding coverage, renewal, and eligibility. The legislature further intends that the commissioner adopt those rules in accordance with 33-1-313, which grants the commissioner general rulemaking authority and which permits the commissioner:

(1) to make only reasonable rules that do not extend, modify, or conflict with any laws of this state or with any reasonable implication of those laws; and

(2) to make or amend those rules only after a hearing of which notice has been given as required by 33-1-703 [now repealed]."

Applicability: Section 18, Ch. 355, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] [codified as Title 33, ch. 22, part 11] applies to policies delivered or issued for delivery in this state on or after October 1, 1989. [This act] [Title 33, ch. 22, part 11] is not intended to supersede the obligations of entities subject to [this act] [Title 33, ch. 22, part 11] to comply with the substance of other applicable insurance laws insofar as they do not conflict with [this act] [Title 33, ch. 22, part 11], except that laws and regulations designed and intended to apply to medicare supplement insurance policies may not be applied to long-term care insurance. A policy that is not advertised, marketed, or offered as long-term care insurance or nursing home insurance need not meet the requirements of [this act] [Title 33, ch. 22, part 11]. A policy that contains long-term care insurance benefits of a duration of at least 6 months must meet the requirements of [this act] [Title 33, ch. 22, part 11] if the premium allocable to the long-term care benefits is greater than 25% of the total policy premium."

Class Certification — Numerosity, Commonality, Typicality Requirements — No Abuse of Discretion: The District Court certified a class whose members had been subject to agreements with a pool of health plans containing exclusion clauses in violation of 2-18-902. The health plan pool and the plan administrator appealed. The Supreme Court held that the District Court did not abuse its discretion when it certified the class action because although the appellants' search of medical records did not turn up further class members, the numerosity requirement under Rule 23, M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20), may focus on other factors in specific circumstances, and the plaintiff established that sufficient potential class members will be found who did not file claims. The appellants argued that the District Court's notification of absent class members to inform them that the illegal exclusion had been removed was improper because the plaintiff used it to satisfy the numerosity requirement. However, the requirement had already been satisfied, and the notification was used as an appropriate tool to manage the litigation process. Further, although the appellants argued that the plaintiff was an inappropriate representative of the class because of the plaintiff's bad faith claim and that the plaintiff's bad faith claim destroyed the commonality and typicality requirements, the District Court did not abuse its discretion because declaratory and injunctive relief was uniform and nothing in the bad faith claim implicated issues in the class action. Lastly, the District Court did not abuse its discretion by defining the class too broadly because it appropriately narrowed the class to individuals enrolled in plans administered by the appellants containing the unlawful exclusion. Roose v. Lincoln County Employee Group Health Plan, 2015 MT 324, 381 Mont. 409, 362 P.3d 40.

Case Notes

Statute of Limitations Applicable to Subrogee in Insurance Claim: St. Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Company (St. Paul), as subrogee, sought to recover from Glassing a payment made to its insured Lynn for underinsured motorist coverage, interest, and costs. Montana has no statutory authority extending the statute of limitations for subrogation claims in such cases. Because an insurer's claim is derived from that of the insured, St. Paul's claim was subject to the same defenses, including the statute of limitations, as though the action were sued upon by the insured and St. Paul had no claim for its damages independent of Lynn's claim. An insurer's right to subrogation attaches upon paying an insured's loss; thus, the 3-year statute of limitations in 27-2-204 applied to St. Paul's claim in the same manner that the original action brought by Lynn and, when raised after the 3-year limit, was time-barred. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Glassing, 269 M 76, 887 P2d 218, 51 St. Rep. 1437 (1994), followed in Nimmick v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 270 M 315, 891 P2d 1154, 52 St. Rep. 208 (1995). Attorney General's Opinions

Competitive Bidding Requirements Inapplicable to Health Maintenance Organizations, Except When Entering Preferred Provider Agreement: Definitions applicable to the Preferred Provider Agreements Act (PPA Act) under Title 33, ch. 22, part 17, and the Montana Health Maintenance Organization Act (HMO Act) under Title 33, ch. 31, are distinctive in the methods by which health services are contracted for in a preferred provider context and the traditional HMO context. The PPA Act applies to a limited class of provider agreements, not including those typically entered into by HMOs. By its passage of the PPA Act and the HMO Act, the Legislature provided two alternative health care delivery systems that would maximize options for health care cost savings. The two acts are independent. Nothing in the applicable statutes supports mandatory application to HMO provider contracts of an otherwise voluntary competitive bidding process under the PPA Act. Therefore, a health maintenance organization is not bound by the competitive bidding requirements of 33-22-1704 in contracting with health care providers, except when entering into a preferred provider agreement. 46 A.G. Case Notes

Allegation of Unequal Treatment and Unequal Opportunity Sufficient for Standing: A plaintiff's allegation that a hospital's billing practices and the Montana Preferred Provider Agreements Act violated Montana antitrust laws and the Montana Constitution by discriminating against her on the basis of uninsured status was sufficient for plaintiff to pursue her claim. The Supreme Court reasoned that alleged unequal treatment and unequal opportunity to obtain a benefit is an injury for standing purposes. Gazelka v. St. Peter's Hosp., 2015 MT 127, 379 Mont. 142, 347 P.3d 1287.

Willing Provider Amendment Not Retroactive: The 1991 willing provider amendment added to this section was a substantive rather than procedural change in insurance law and, as such, absent specific legislative intent under 1-2-109, did not apply retroactively. (See 1993 amendment.) Saint Vincent Hosp. & Health Center v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Mont., 261 M 56, 862 P2d 6, 50 St. Rep. 1190 (1993).

Small Employer Health Insurance Availability Act

Part Compiler's Comments

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 606, L. 1993, provided: "(1) A statement of legislative intent is required for this bill because:

(a) [section 4] [50-4-202, now repealed] authorizes the Montana health care authority [now abolished] to adopt rules necessary to implement [sections 1 through 20] [Title 50, ch. 4, parts 1 through 5]. In addition to those rulemaking matters addressed below, the authority may adopt rules governing such matters as its meetings, public hearings, and rules of procedure and rules of ethical conduct governing its members.

(b) [section 17] [50-4-401, now repealed] requires the Montana health care authority [now abolished] to adopt rules to establish regional health care planning boards within the health care planning regions established in [section 17] [50-4-401, now repealed] and to establish a procedure for selection of regional board members. The rules establishing the boards must specify the number of members, any relevant qualifications, and the operations and duties of the boards and must provide for a funding mechanism by grant from the authority. In addition, the rules must provide for consideration of a balance between rural and urban interests in the selection of regional board members. The procedure for selection of the board members must provide for public notice of the selection process.

(c) [section 10] [50-4-501, now repealed] grants the commissioner of insurance the authority to adopt rules specifying uniform health insurance claim forms and procedures. The forms should be based upon existing formats, be as short as possible, and be compatible with electronic data transmission.

(d) [section 19] [50-4-502, now repealed] requires the authority to adopt rules relating to the unified health care data base. The authority's rules must specify in comprehensive detail what information is required to be provided by health care providers and the times at which the information is to be provided. The rules must also provide for audit procedures to determine the accuracy of the filed data. The confidentiality provisions must be consistent with other state laws governing the confidentiality of public records, including medical records, and must apply to employees of the authority and to others receiving or using records in the data base.

(e) [sections 23, 26, 27, 30, 31, and 34 through 36] [33-22-1802, 33-22-1808, 33-22-1809, 33-22-1812 through 33-22-1814, 33-22-1818, 33-22-1819, and 33-22-1822] [33-22-1812, 33-22-1818, and 33-22-1819 now repealed] require the commissioner of insurance to adopt rules governing small employer group health plans. In determining the basic benefits package, the commissioner shall make objective determinations, supported by available data, concerning the type of benefits required and shall determine that the benefits to be required are cost-effective pursuant to the Small Employer Health Insurance Availability Act. The commissioner may adopt rules providing for a transition period to allow small employer carriers to comply with certain provisions of the act. The commissioner may approve the establishment of additional classes of businesses only if the commissioner determines that the additional classes would enhance the efficiency and fairness of the small employer health insurance market. The commissioner is required under the act to adopt rules to implement and administer the act.

(f) [section 44] [50-4-612] requires the authority to adopt rules implementing [sections 37 through 44] [Title 50, ch. 4, part 6]. The rules adopted by the authority must specify the form and content of applications for certificates of public advantage; details of the reconsideration, revocation, hearing, and appeal processes; and other matters as the authority determines necessary. The rules that are adopted by the authority must also provide the authority with direct supervision and control over the implementation of cooperative agreements between facilities.

(2) In preparing the plan required by [section 5] [50-4-301, now repealed], the authority shall consider the following matters for the following features of the plan:

(a) a unified health care budget. The authority shall consider the development of a state health care budget based upon the budgets submitted by the regional health care planning boards.

(b) caps for provider expenditures. The authority shall consider a process for adopting mandatory limits on provider expenses, including fees and salaries.

(c) global budgeting for all health care spending. The authority shall consider adopting a budgeting process, with public involvement, by which a unified health care budget is determined.

(d) controlled capital expenditures. The authority shall consider adopting a system to control capital expenditures.

(e) binding cap on overall expenditures. The authority shall consider adopting mandatory limits on all types of expenditures of health care providers, including capital expenditures, small equipment purchases, personnel costs, and all other types of operating costs."

33-22-1803. Definitions.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 227 in definition of basic health benefit plan at end deleted "and that provides the benefits required by 33-22-1827"; and in definition of standard health benefit plan at end deleted "and that contains the provisions required pursuant to 33-22-1828". Amendment effective April 20, 2011.

Severability: Section 25, Ch. 227, L. 2011, was a severability clause.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 356 in definition of dependent in (b) after "child" deleted "under 19 years of age" and substituted "under 25 years of age" and (b)(i) through (b)(iv) specifying criteria for an unmarried child under 25 years of age for "an unmarried child, under 23 years of age, who is a full-time student and who is financially dependent on the insured"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2008.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 469 in definition of health benefit plan near middle of second sentence after "benefits" inserted "as defined in 33-22-140"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

1999 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 103 deleted definition of board that read: ""Board" means the board of directors of the program established pursuant to 33-22-1818"; deleted definition of plan of operation that read: ""Plan of operation" means the operation of the program established pursuant to 33-22-1818"; deleted definition of program that read: ""Program" means the Montana small employer health reinsurance program created by 33-22-1818"; deleted definition of reinsuring carrier that read: ""Reinsuring carrier" means a small employer carrier participating in the reinsurance program pursuant to 33-22-1819"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Chapter 472 in definition of bona fide association deleted former (f) that read: "(f) meets any additional requirements required by law"; in definition of eligible employee inserted third sentence to include persons eligible for coverage under 2-18-704; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Saving Clause: Section 72, Ch. 472, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 416 deleted definition of benefit equivalency that read: ""Benefit equivalency" means a method developed by the small employer carrier for comparing the types of health care services and articles covered under a health benefit plan with the types of health care services required to be covered under a uniform, basic, or standard health benefit plan"; in definition of benefit value, after "means", substituted current language for "an actuarially based method developed by the small employer carrier for comparing the value of determinable contingencies covered under a health benefit plan with the value of determinable contingencies required under a uniform, basic, or standard health benefit plan"; inserted definition of bona fide association; in definition of health benefit plan, in second sentence after "does not include", substituted "coverage of excepted benefits if coverage is provided under a separate policy, certificate, or contract of insurance" for "(a) accident-only, credit, dental, vision, specified disease, medicare supplement, long-term care, or disability income insurance;

(b) coverage issued as a supplement to liability insurance, workers' compensation insurance, or similar insurance; or

(c) automobile medical payment insurance"; deleted definition of late enrollee (see 1997 Session Law for former text); deleted definition of qualifying previous coverage (see 1997 Session Law for former text); in definition of small employer, near beginning, inserted "bona fide", substituted "with respect to a calendar year and a plan year" for "on at least 50% of its working days during the preceding calendar quarter", after "employed at least" substituted "2 but not more than 50" for "3 but not more than 25", and substituted "during the preceding calendar year and employed at least two employees on the first day of the plan year. In the case of an employer that was not in existence throughout the preceding calendar year, the determination of whether the employer is a small or large employer must be based on the average number of employees reasonably expected to be employed by the employer in the current calendar year" for "the majority of whom were employed within this state or were residents of the state", in (c) inserted "bona fide", and deleted (c)(i), (c)(ii), and (c)(iii) that read: "(i) has been in existence for 1 year prior to January 1, 1994;

(ii) provides a health benefit plan to employees of its members as a group; and

(iii) does not deny coverage to any small employer member of its association or any employee of its small employer members who applies for coverage as part of a group"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Applicability: Section 52, Ch. 416, L. 1997, provided: "(1) Except as provided in subsection (2), sections 1, 5 through 8, 17 through 40 [section 21 is 33-22-1803], and 42 through 45] apply to group health plans and health insurance coverage offered in connection with group health plans for group health plan and group health insurance coverage contracts issued or renewed after June 30, 1997.

(2) [Section 36] [33-22-142] applies to events occurring after June 30, 1996."

Coordination — Amendment Void: The amendment to this section made by sec. 34, Ch. 531, L. 1997, was rendered void by sec. 51, Ch. 416, L. 1997, which provided: "If House Bill No. 131 is passed and approved and if it amends 33-22-1803(15), then 33-22-1803(15), amending the definition of "health benefit plan", must read as provided in [section 21 of this act]." House Bill No. 131 was approved as Ch. 531, L. 1997, and amended 33-22-1803(15); therefore, the amendment to 33-22-1803(15) contained in Ch. 531, L. 1997, is void and the definition of health benefit plan in Ch. 416, L. 1997, applies.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 377 in definition of assessable carrier, near beginning before "carriers", deleted "individual" and after "insurance" substituted "including excess of loss and stop-loss disability insurance" for "and all carriers of group disability insurance, excluding the state group benefits plan provided for in Title 2, chapter 18, part 8, the Montana university system health plan, and any self-funded disability insurance plan provided by a political subdivision of the state"; substituted present definition of basic health benefit plan for former definition that read: ""Basic health benefit plan" means a lower cost health benefit plan developed pursuant to 33-22-1812"; inserted definitions of benefit equivalency and benefit value; in definition of carrier, in second sentence after "organization", deleted "and, to the extent permitted by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, a multiple employer welfare arrangement"; deleted definition of committee that read: ""Committee" means the health benefit plan committee created pursuant to 33-22-1812"; in definition of eligible employee, at end of first sentence, inserted language concerning an employee who works between 20 hours and 40 hours per week; in definition of qualifying previous coverage, in (b) and (c) before "basic", inserted "minimum"; in definition of small employer, in two places in (c)(iii), inserted "small employer"; substituted present definition of standard health benefit plan for former definition that read: ""Standard health benefit plan" means a health benefit plan developed pursuant to 33-22-1812"; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 379 in definition of case characteristics, after "provided that", inserted "gender"; in definition of late enrollee, in (a), substituted "the individual requests enrollment within 30 days after termination of the qualifying previous coverage and" for "the individual meets each of the following conditions", at end of (a)(i) inserted "or", and deleted (a)(iii) that read: "(iii) the individual requests enrollment within 30 days after termination of the qualifying previous coverage"; and made minor changes in style.

Coordination Instruction: Section 15, Ch. 377, L. 1995, provided: "If House Bill No. 533 is passed and approved and contains a section implementing a uniform health benefit plan, then the bracketed phrases in 33-22-1803 must be included." House Bill No. 533 was passed and approved containing such a section; therefore, the bracketed phrases were included in the text of this section.

Severability: Section 99, Ch. 379, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

2013 Amendment: Chapter 169 in (1)(a) deleted former last sentence that read: "One plan must be a basic health benefit plan, and one plan must be a standard health benefit plan"; and deleted former (1)(c) that read: "(c) A small employer carrier that elects not to comply with the requirements of subsections (1)(a) and (1)(b) may continue to provide coverage under health benefit plans previously issued to small employers in this state for a period of no more than 7 years from October 1, 1995, if the carrier:

(i) complies with all other applicable provisions of this part, except 33-22-1810, 33-22-1813, and subsections (2) through (4) of this section;

(ii) does not amend or alter the benefits and coverages of the previously issued health benefit plans unless required to do so by law or rule; and

(iii) complies with all applicable provisions of Public Law 104-191." Amendment effective April 9, 2013.

1999 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 87 in (3)(d)(i) inserted second and third sentences providing that a small employer carrier may not consider employees who waive coverage because they are covered under another health plan with respect to minimum participation requirements for groups of four or more and allowing the carrier to require that at least two eligible employees participate in a plan. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Chapter 472 in (1)(b)(i) in first sentence after "issue" substituted "all plans marketed under this part" for "a basic health benefit plan or a standard health benefit plan" and after "applies for" substituted "a" for "either" and deleted former second sentence that read: "If, pursuant to Public Law 104-191, an agency of the United States or a court does not prohibit a small employer carrier from doing so, a small employer carrier may offer and issue a group health benefit plan other than a basic or standard plan on an underwritten basis"; in (1)(b)(ii) in first sentence after "employers" substituted "all plans marketed under this part" for "at least one basic health benefit plan and at least one standard health benefit plan"; inserted (1)(c)(iii) requiring compliance with Public Law 104-91; in (3)(a)(i) near middle of first sentence after "following the" substituted "individual's enrollment date" for "effective date of the individual's coverage"; in (3)(b) inserted second sentence regarding waiver of time periods applicable to preexisting condition exclusions or limitations; in (3)(e)(ii) near beginning after "modify a" substituted "plan marketed under this part" for "basic or standard health benefit plan"; and made minor changes in style. Obstetricians and Gynecologists — Primary Care Physicians

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 198, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the specialty of obstetrics and gynecology is devoted to primary and preventative health care of women throughout their lifetime; and

WHEREAS, significant numbers of women view their obstetrician and gynecologist as their primary or only physician; and

WHEREAS, for many women, an obstetrician or gynecologist is often the only physician they see regularly during their reproductive years; and

WHEREAS, a general medical examination was the second most frequently cited purpose for patient visits to obstetricians and gynecologists in 1989 and 1990; and

WHEREAS, obstetricians and gynecologists refer their patients less frequently than other primary care physicians, thus avoiding costly and time-consuming referrals to specialists."

CHAPTER 23
CASUALTY INSURANCE

Chapter Case Notes

Plain Language of Policies Providing Insurance on Rental Car Construed — Primary Versus Excess Coverage: Hudson used a credit card to rent a 1995 Ford Mustang convertible from P.C. Rental, Inc. (P.C.). Three days later, Hudson lost control of the car, resulting in damages rendering the vehicle a total loss. At the time of the accident, P.C. had a commercial lines policy through Empire Fire and Marine Insurance Company (Empire) that included liability and physical damage coverage. Hudson did not own a vehicle and was not covered under a personal policy, but auto rental insurance was provided by the company whose credit card Hudson used for the rental. Empire paid P.C. the agreed actual cash value of the vehicle, minus a $1,000 policy deductible, then sold the damaged vehicle for salvage and received an additional $1,108. The credit card company, Visa U.S.A. (Visa), also paid P.C. about $7,800 to cover P.C.'s deductible and lost rental fees. P.C. then brought a breach of contract action against Hudson for failing to return the vehicle in the same condition in which it was rented, as required by the rental agreement. Hudson alleged that Chase Manhattan Bank (Chase), as issuer of the credit card, was responsible for damages sustained to the rental car under the terms of the rental insurance. Hudson subsequently filed for bankruptcy and assigned all rights in the third-party action against Chase to P.C. P.C. then amended the complaint to include the credit card company as defendant, alleging that the rental insurance provided coverage on a 24-hour basis for damage to a car rented with the credit card up to the full value of the car. Visa denied P.C.'s allegations regarding the rental insurance, alleged that Visa had met its obligations under the policy by covering P.C.'s deductible and lost rental fees, and moved for summary judgment, which was granted. The District Court concluded that Hudson was an insured under the liability policy provided to P.C. by Empire and thus Empire was not entitled to subrogate against its own insured. The court determined that because both policies provided damage coverage for the same vehicle, it was necessary to look to the "other insurance" clauses of the policies. The Empire policy stated that its coverage was primary, while the Visa policy stated that its coverage was excess coverage, so Empire was not entitled to recover any of the amount that it paid to P.C. from Visa. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Given the nature of the coverage available, no determination of whether Hudson was an insured under Empire's physical damage coverage was necessary or possible under the policies. The District Court did not err when it concluded that, based on the clear language of the policies, P.C.'s physical damage coverage was primary and Visa's rental insurance was excess. P.C. Rental, Inc. v. Chase Manhattan Bank, 2000 MT 106, 299 M 315, 998 P2d 1168, 57 St. Rep. 430 (2000).

Gradual Accumulation of Smoke and Soot — "Sudden and Accidental" Construed — Damage Not Covered Under Pollution Exception to All-Risk Homeowner's Policy: During a 4- or 5-week holiday season, the Sokoloskis burned scented candles in their home, which caused a discharge of smoke and soot, damaging their home and belongings. Their insurer denied coverage under a pollution exclusion because smoke and soot were defined as pollutants in the policy. The District Court held that coverage was barred under the exclusion and that the damages were not sudden and accidental. The Supreme Court affirmed on both issues. The very use of the words "sudden" and "accidental" reveals a clear intent to state two separate requirements, so that "sudden" means more than "unexpected". "Sudden", even if it includes the concept of unexpectedness, also encompasses a temporal element because unexpectedness is already expressed by the word "accidental". Having determined that the damage was not sudden, the Supreme Court did not address the additional requirement of being accidental. Under the clear language of the policy definitions and exclusion clause, coverage was properly barred and summary judgment proper. Sokoloski v. Am. W. Ins. Co., 1999 MT 93, 294 M 210, 980 P2d 1043, 56 St. Rep. 392 (1999), citing N. Ins. Co. of N.Y. v. Aardvark Assoc., Inc., 942 F2d 189 (3rd Cir. 1991), and followed in Travelers Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Ribi Immunochem Research, Inc., 2005 MT 50, 326 M 174, 108 P3d 469 (2005).

Liability Coverage of Newly Acquired Vehicle — Date of Delivery Determinative: Powell purchased a truck from his brother and sister-in-law, making monthly payments to his brother. During the time that Powell made payments, the truck remained in the possession of Powell's brother, who continued to use the truck as in the past. In January, Powell's brother executed a title in Powell's name, but the intent of both parties was that the truck would be owned by Powell after the payments were completed. When all of the payments were completed, Powell's brother executed a bill of sale and canceled his insurance policy on the truck. Several days later, Powell struck and killed a pedestrian with the truck. The pedestrian's insurance company claimed that title to the truck passed more than 30 days prior to the accident and that because Powell had failed to give notice to the company of his new ownership of the truck, the truck was not a "newly acquired car" within the meaning of the insurance policy. The Supreme Court held that "delivery" of the truck, as contemplated by the insurance policy, would be construed in the ordinary sense of the word to mean the passage of physical possession of the truck. Because that occurred on July 10, when the payments were completed and the bill of sale signed, the period for notification of a newly acquired car had not yet expired and the policy was therefore construed to apply to the truck. St. Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Powell, 274 M 92, 906 P2d 198, 52 St. Rep. 1138 (1995).

Business Pursuits — Steer-Roping Contest: Insured's policy on his ranch excluded business pursuits other than, among other things, farming. For 3 years he held three or four steer-roping contests a year in an arena he built. Nonprofessionals paid a fee and there was prize money, with insured keeping some of the fee money. Insured's own testimony showed he was regularly engaged in the contests for profit and thus was engaged in a business pursuit excluded from policy coverage. A summary judgment for insurer was therefore proper in insured's suit for failure to defend insured and pay an injured steer roper because there was no issue of material fact. Heggen v. Mtn. W. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 220 M 398, 715 P2d 1060, 43 St. Rep. 475 (1986).

"Business Pursuit" — Definition: Montana has not adopted criteria for determining what is a business pursuit for purposes of an insurance policy clause excluding a business pursuit from coverage. The presence of a profit motive (not actual profit) is one characteristic of a business pursuit, and continually or regularly conducted activity may be a business pursuit even though it is not the primary occupation of the insured. In this case, insured's testimony that he had income and expenses relating to the pursuit and claimed them on his tax returns established a profit motive. Heggen v. Mtn. W. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 220 M 398, 715 P2d 1060, 43 St. Rep. 475 (1986).

Liability Insurance — Recovery on Policy Not Defeated by Negligence of Insured: Insurer brought declaratory judgment action against insured for indemnity on basis that gasoline leakage was not covered by policy. In Town Pump, Inc. v. Diteman, 622 P2d 212, 38 St. Rep. 54 (1981), the insured had been denied indemnity coverage against its contractor for the same gasoline leakage because of the insured's own negligence. The District Court found insured 50% negligent and ordered recovery on that basis. The Supreme Court reversed the District Court decision and ordered full recovery for insured against insurer on the basis that mere negligence of a policyholder is not a defense to enforcement of a policy and full recovery by an insured is in order in the absence of a cooperation clause or allegations of intentional wrongdoing. Gen. Ins. Co. of Am. v. Town Pump, Inc., 214 M 27, 692 P2d 427, 41 St. Rep. 2292 (1984).

No Liability Coverage for Expected or Intentional Damage: The insurer issued a manufacturers' and contractors' liability policy to insured, a volunteer fire company. The insured made the purposeful decision to cease fighting a residential fire because the dwelling owners were not members of the fire company. The insured sought coverage under the policy as to damages claimed by the dwelling owners when their home was destroyed by the fire. The insured's decision to stop fighting the fire was intentional, and the resulting harm was predictable. Therefore, the insured was not covered under the policy, which included coverage for an "occurrence", meaning an accident that causes damage neither expected nor intended. USF&G v. Rae Volunteer Fire Co., 212 M 450, 688 P2d 1246, 41 St. Rep. 1857 (1984), followed in Burns v. Underwriters Adjusting Co., 234 M 508, 765 P2d 712, 45 St. Rep. 2089 (1988), distinguishing NW. Nat'l Cas. Co. v. Phalen, 182 M 448, 597 P2d 720 (1979).

Policy Language Unambiguous: The insurer issued a liability policy to the insured, a volunteer fire company. The insured made the purposeful decision to cease fighting a residential fire because the dwelling owners were not members of the fire company. The insured sought coverage under the policy as to damages claimed by the dwelling owners when their home was destroyed by the fire. The insured fire company claimed the policy language was ambiguous as it did not name the specific person who could activate the provision concerning the expectations or intentions of the company; therefore, the doubt should be resolved in favor of the insured. The policy language was not ambiguous, and the insured's board chairman had authority to activate the exclusion provisions. As a consequence, the insured can have an "expectation" of property damage through its authorized officer, a cause of damage not covered by the terms of the policy. USF&G v. Rae Volunteer Fire Co., 212 M 450, 688 P2d 1246, 41 St. Rep. 1857 (1984).

Statute of Limitations — Applicability to Subrogation: A subrogation claim by insurance company is derived from the claim of the insured and is subject to the same defenses, including the Statute of Limitations, as though the action were sued upon by the insured. Beedie v. Shelley, 187 M 556, 610 P2d 713 (1980).

General Provisions

33-23-102. Existence of insurance not to be made evident.

Case Notes

No Prejudicial Mention of Insurance Coverage: The trial court is charged with determining if any particular mention of liability insurance is sufficiently prejudicial to warrant a new trial. This determination depends upon the circumstances and manner in which the subject of insurance is brought into the case. In this case, the court did not abuse its discretion when it denied plaintiffs' posttrial motion for a new trial because of the alleged interjection of insurance. In the first claim relating to an improper mention, a question was posed to demonstrate the witness's general lack of judgment and thereby undermine his credibility as a witness. It therefore falls within the exception to Rule 411, M.R.Ev. (Title 26, ch. 10). The other alleged improper references did not directly indicate to the jury that the plaintiff had insurance and therefore are without merit. Massman v. Helena, 237 M 234, 773 P2d 1206, 46 St. Rep. 764 (1989).

Motor Vehicle Liability

Part Case Notes

Dismissal of Insurer Improper in Light of Dispute Over Amount of Damages Owing in Excess of Liability Limits: Following a vehicle accident, a couple sought recovery for injuries and loss of consortium and also alleged that the damages exceeded the limits of defendants' coverage, entitling them to recover from their own policy. The District Court bifurcated the claims and then sua sponte dismissed the insurer from the action without prejudice. The couple sought to reverse the dismissal order, and the Supreme Court obliged. The District Court held that because a jury had not determined the couple's damages and because the insurer had agreed to pay the amount of the verdict up to the policy limits, there was no dispute between the couple and the insurer. However, the Supreme Court noted that the couple and the insurer disagreed on the amount of damages in excess of the amount that was payable under the liability limits of the policy. This was a dispute that the couple was entitled to litigate, so dismissal of the insurer was improper, and the case was remanded for further proceedings. State ex rel. Gadbaw v. District Court, 2003 MT 127, 316 M 25, 75 P3d 1238 (2003), following Dill v. District Court, 1999 MT 85, 294 M 134, 979 P2d 188 (1999). See also Dias v. Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies, Inc., 2002 MT 323, 313 M 172, 60 P3d 986 (2002).

Accident Involving Multiple Liable Insureds — Maximum Insurance Coverage Limited to Policy Amount: In a case of first impression, the Supreme Court was asked to determine whether persons insured under one policy, who are both found legally liable for causing one accident, must each be covered by the mandatory limits in 61-6-103. The District Court found that Montana's vehicle insurance omnibus statutes do not require separate, full coverage for multiple insureds when each insured is liable for independent acts of negligence arising from one accident. The court reasoned that 61-6-103 refers to each accident, not each separate act of negligence that may have contributed to causing the accident, and held that as a matter of law, once the injured person's damages resulting from the one accident exhaust the $50,000 policy limit, the insurer's obligation to cover any further claims ceases. The Supreme Court noted that if the Legislature ever intended to allow a double recovery system, it never expressly provided the language necessary for such an interpretation, but also noted that the language of 61-6-103 does not expressly prohibit double recovery. Rather, the clear statutory language provides that an owner's policy must provide a base amount of coverage, subject to limits exclusive of interest and costs, with respect to each motor vehicle, not each insured, in the event that the vehicle causes damage to persons or property, regardless of who is behind the wheel. The legislative history provided no evidence that the Legislature ever contemplated or wished to require that the minimum amounts of liability could or should be increased depending on the number of insureds found liable for causing one accident, and the Supreme Court, declining to construe the statute in any way that would insert a particular and precise meaning that had been omitted, affirmed the District Court's conclusion that the insurer was obligated under these circumstances to pay the policy limit on behalf of its insureds, and no more. Infinity Ins. Co. v. Dodson, 2000 MT 287, 302 M 209, 14 P3d 487, 57 St. Rep. 1196 (2000).

Motor Vehicle Liability Policy Language Not Ambiguous in Failing to Define "Accident" — Maximum Coverage in Accident Involving Multiple Liable Insureds: Appellants argued that an insured's policy was ambiguous in that it did not define the word "accident", contending that alleged negligent driving that caused a rollover accident and another person's alleged negligence in permitting the driver to use the vehicle constituted two separate accidents under the policy, giving rise to separate coverage, each with a $50,000 limit. The policy provided that regardless of the number of insured vehicles, insured persons, claims or policies, or vehicles involved in the accident, the insurer would pay no more than the limit of liability for each person injured in any one accident. The District Court concluded, and the Supreme Court agreed, that under the terms of the policy, the maximum amount paid by the insurer remained constant and the fact that an accident involved multiple liable insureds was inconsequential. Although "accident" was not defined, a reasonable person in the position of an insured would understand that the word refers to a singular event in which bodily injury or property damage results from the ownership, maintenance, or use of a vehicle. There was only one accident, and the District Court correctly concluded that although more than one act of negligence may have contributed, the maximum amount of coverage under the policy remained constant. Infinity Ins. Co. v. Dodson, 2000 MT 287, 302 M 209, 14 P3d 487, 57 St. Rep. 1196 (2000).

Doctrine of Reasonable Expectations Inapplicable When Policy Language Excludes Coverage — Liability Coverage on Borrowed Horse Trailer Limited to Policy Terms: Babcock borrowed a horse trailer from her neighbor, and even though the trailer ball on Babcock's truck was too small for the trailer hitch, she attempted to tow the trailer anyway. The trailer came unhooked, left the road, and struck a fence. Farmers Insurance Exchange (Farmers) paid Babcock the full cost of the fence repair. Babcock requested that Farmers also pay for damages to the trailer. Farmers paid $500 toward the trailer, which constituted Babcock's policy limit for collision and comprehensive coverage. Babcock sued, claiming that Farmers was required to pay for the trailer damage under the liability coverage. The District Court granted summary judgment for Farmers, concluding that the plain policy language limited coverage to $500. Babcock appealed, asserting that the policy language was ambiguous but nevertheless created a reasonable expectation that a trailer was covered and that the exclusion for damage "to property owned or being transported by an insured person" did not apply because the trailer was not being "transported" when it was damaged, having separated from the truck. Farmers argued that, under Babcock's interpretation, a passenger ejected from a car would have no claim for medical payments because the passenger did not "occupy" the vehicle at the time of injury. The Supreme Court agreed. The doctrine of reasonable expectations does not apply to create coverage when the terms of the policy clearly demonstrate an intent to exclude particular coverage. In this case, the policy language clearly excluded liability coverage for the borrowed trailer because it was in Babcock's charge and she was transporting it at the time of the accident. Babcock v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 2000 MT 114, 299 M 407, 999 P2d 347, 57 St. Rep. 479 (2000).

Question of Fault and Question of Entitlement to Collect Damages Separate: Dill suffered damages after being hit as a pedestrian by a vehicle operated by Jardine. State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company (State Farm) provided both liability insurance for Jardine and underinsured motorist coverage for Dill. Meeting all the conditions precedent in the policy, Dill recovered the maximum policy amount from Jardine pursuant to Jardine's policy, then, consistent with the general release executed on Dill's behalf in settling with Jardine, Dill demanded underinsured motorist benefits under Dill's policy, which State Farm refused to pay. The District Court held that Dill's claim against State Farm would not be ripe for adjudication until after Jardine's fault was established and damages assessed in a negligence action. However, the question of whether anyone was at fault and the question of whether an insured is legally entitled to collect damages from an underinsured driver are not the same. A person can be legally entitled to collect damages without first proving fault in court, as Dill did here; conversely, an insured might prove fault on the part of the defendant and yet not be entitled to collect damages. Once an insured demonstrates a legal entitlement to damages, principles of contract law define the coverage afforded by an underinsured motorist policy; tort law is relevant only as far as fault is concerned. Under a writ of supervisory control, the Supreme Court looked to the clear language of the policy and found no issues of fault for a factfinder to resolve. The only questions remaining were whether Dill was legally entitled to collect damages and, if so, in what amount. Regardless of whether anyone was at fault, having already received money from State Farm, Dill was obviously legally entitled to receive damages. Thus, the case was reversed for a trial to determine the amount of damages, if any, that Dill was entitled to under the underinsured motorist policy. Dill v. District Court, 1999 MT 85, 294 M 134, 979 P2d 188, 56 St. Rep. 350 (1999).

"No Prejudice" Rule Adopted in Montana With Respect to Underinsured Motorist Insurance Coverage: Sorensen was injured in a two-vehicle accident and, after settling with the liability carrier for the other driver, also tried to recover damages under the underinsured coverage with her own carrier. The District Court held that she was precluded from recovering under her own policy because she had settled with the other driver without informing her insurer, thereby prejudicing the insurer's subrogation rights and violating the terms of the insurance contract. The Supreme Court held that it was adopting the "no prejudice" rule with respect to underinsured motorist coverage, meaning that an insurer has the burden to prove that it was prejudiced by the settlement of the tort claim in order to rely on the subrogation provisions of the policy. The Supreme Court reversed the lower court on the basis that the evidence presented in the lower court showed that the other driver was "judgment proof" and therefore the insurer could not have been prejudiced by Sorensen's entering into a settlement. Sorensen v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 279 M 291, 927 P2d 1002, 53 St. Rep. 1155 (1996), followed in Augustine v. Simonson, 283 M 259, 940 P2d 116, 54 St. Rep. 589 (1997).

No Implied Permission by Insured for Son to Drive Another's Automobile — Insurer Not Liable: When the insured stated in his affidavit that he did not and would not have given his son permission to drive another's automobile on the day in question and when the son stated in his affidavit that he believed his father would have denied him permission to drive the vehicle on that day, the District Court did not err in determining that there was no express or implied permission by the insured for his son to drive the vehicle. The District Court did not err in granting summary judgment for the insurer. Allstate Ins. Co. v. Hankinson, 249 M 237, 815 P2d 145, 48 St. Rep. 662 (1991).

Pro Rata Clause — Excess Coverage Clause — Effect: An insurance policy that provided excess coverage did not constitute "other insurance" within the meaning of a pro rata clause. In an action for contribution involving a residence destroyed by fire, the home owner's pro rata policy provided primary coverage and the bank lender's excess coverage policy provided only excess coverage. The home owner's carrier was not entitled to contribution from the bank's carrier. Mtn. W. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Credit Gen. Ins. Co., 247 M 161, 805 P2d 569, 48 St. Rep. 138 (1991).

Dismissal Proper — Suit Filed Prior to Compliance With Policy Terms: The plaintiffs' insurance policy contained a clause that required implementing an appraisal procedure if the parties could not agree on the amount of loss. The policy also stated that no legal action could be initiated until there was full compliance with the terms of the policy. The insurer invoked the appraisal clause, but the plaintiffs refused to submit to the procedure and instead filed suit for damages and bad faith against the insurer. The Supreme Court held that summary judgment in favor of the insurer was appropriate in light of the clear language of the policy, and the court further held that the terms of the policy were a negative defense and did not have to be affirmatively set out in the defendants' answer. Dunn v. Way, 241 M 208, 786 P2d 649, 47 St. Rep. 213 (1990).

Additional Omnibus Insured — Tort Claims Act Not Shield — Employer's Insurance Secondary: When an employee of Butte-Silver Bow was involved in an auto accident while acting in the course and scope of his employment and driving his own car, Butte-Silver Bow was an additional omnibus insured under the employee's auto policy. The employee's personal insurance carrier was not shielded from liability by the state tort claims act. The employee's insurer was the primary insurer, and Butte-Silver Bow's insurer was the excess insurer. Guar. Nat'l Ins. Co. v. State Farm Ins. Co., 238 M 324, 777 P2d 353, 46 St. Rep. 1303 (1989).

Settlement by Secondary Carrier Binding on Primary Carrier: Secondary carrier had a fiduciary duty to settle the case. When primary carrier was aware of the settlement negotiations, the secondary carrier will not be considered a volunteer and is entitled to indemnification and subrogation by the primary insurer. Guar. Nat'l Ins. Co. v. State Farm Ins. Co., 238 M 324, 777 P2d 353, 46 St. Rep. 1303 (1989).

Award of Attorney Fees in Declaratory Judgment Insurance Action — Distinction Between Third-Party Claimant and Insured: As a general rule, an insured is not entitled to recover attorney fees and expenses incurred in defending a declaratory judgment action brought by an insurer to determine the existence of coverage under a liability insurance policy. However, recovery is appropriate where it is ultimately determined by the court that the insurer was not acting in good faith in contesting coverage and instituting declaratory judgment proceedings. A third-party claimant is not entitled to recover attorney fees incurred in a declaratory judgment proceeding, even if the claimant arguably falls within the policy definition of "insured". Iowa Mut. Ins. Co. v. Davis, 689 F. Supp. 1028, 45 St. Rep. 1361 (D.C. Mont. 1988).

Determination of Vehicle Ownership — Installment Sales Contract Not Indicative of Ownership for Insurance Purposes: Jordet, an adult, jointly purchased a vehicle for the exclusive use of his minor sister-in-law, who made the downpayment, repaid registration and license fees, made the only installment payment, purchased separate insurance, possessed the only keys, and maintained sole use and control of the vehicle. The District Court decided that the term "owned vehicle" in Jordet's automobile policy included the jointly owned vehicle and that Jordet's signature on the installment sales contract conclusively placed the vehicle under his policy. The Supreme Court reversed, noting that the purchase of property and the insurance of property are distinct transactions and that Jordet's signature on the sales contract did not establish ownership for insurance purposes. Implicit in ownership is the ability to control how, when, where, and by whom the property will be used. Since Jordet never exercised any of the indicia of ownership that would be compatible with his insuring the vehicle, it was not an "owned vehicle" under the terms of his policy. Truck Ins. Exch. v. Nelson, 228 M 233, 743 P2d 572, 44 St. Rep. 1482 (1987).

Ambiguous Insurance Policy Provision — Summary Judgment Reversed: An insurance policy that did not clearly state whether it provided uninsured motor vehicle coverage when the driver was insured but the ownership of the vehicle was not was held to be ambiguous; therefore, under the rationale that an ambiguous provision is construed against the insurance company, the policy was interpreted to provide coverage. The District Court grant of summary judgment holding that the policy did not provide uninsured motor vehicle coverage was reversed. St. Farm Mut. Auto.

Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 223 M 215, 725 P2d 821, 43 St. Rep. 1667 (1986), distinguished in Meyer v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co, 2000 MT 323, 303 M 1, 15 P3d 899, 57 St. Rep. 1363 (2000).

Invalidity of No-Consent-to-Settlement Clause: A no-consent-to-settlement clause in an insurance policy, disallowing coverage if the insured settled with any person or organization who may have been liable for the bodily injury without obtaining written consent of the insurance company, was held to be void because enforcement of the clause would result in a backing away from the mandatory offering requirement of 33-23-201 and would place control of efforts to collect from the responsible party in the hands of the insurer. While not denying the insurer's right to subrogation, the court would not allow the right to subrogation to negate the required offering of uninsured motor vehicle coverage. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 223 M 215, 725 P2d 821, 43 St. Rep. 1667 (1986).

Construction of Exclusionary Clause — Findings Not Clearly Erroneous: District Court determined that arrangement by which insured purchased truck for use of son-in-law in exchange for free hauling of insured's hay and cattle was on a share expense basis, and as such not excluded from coverage under insurance policy provision that excluded coverage for lease or rental. Supreme Court affirmed District Court judgment and held that the policy clause was ambiguous, capable of at least two interpretations, and as such capable of construction against the insurance company. The District Court findings were not clearly erroneous and therefore must be sustained. Bauer Ranch, Inc. v. Mtn. W. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 215 M 153, 695 P2d 1307, 42 St. Rep. 255 (1985), followed in Dagel v. Farmers Ins. Group, 273 M 402, 903 P2d 1359, 52 St. Rep. 1023 (1995).

Liability Dispute Between Insurers — Costs and Fees: In a proceeding that was essentially between two insurers to determine which of two overlapping policies covered auto accident, the winner was not entitled to costs and attorney fees. Bill Atkin Volkswagen, Inc. v. McClafferty, 213 M 99, 689 P2d 1237, 41 St. Rep. 1981 (1984).

Pro Rata Coverage When Two Insurers Liable — Excess Coverage Clauses — Effect: Driver left his car at dealer's for repair, and while driving a car dealer had loaned driver, he hit a parked car. Driver admitted fault, tendered defense of a suit by damaged car's owner against driver to dealer's insurer, and coverage was denied. Driver's insurer settled the claim. Dealer's insurer partially reimbursed dealer for damage to the loaned vehicle. Dealer sued driver on its insurer's behalf for damage to the loaned vehicle, and driver sued dealer's insurer as a third-party defendant claiming to be insured under dealer's policy. Driver sought, on behalf of his insurer, recovery of the amount paid by driver's insurer to settle the claim of the owner of the parked car and also sought attorney fees and costs. Both the dealer and the driver had a policy stating that it provided only excess insurance over and above any other valid and collectible insurance applicable to a particular event. Each insurer therefore argued that the other insurer was the primary insurer and must pay until the limits of the primary insurer were reached, at which time the excess policy would operate to pay up to its limits. The court held that in such an instance each insurer is liable for a pro rata share of the loss, calculated on the basis of the ratio of the insurer's policy limit to the total of both insurers' policy limits. Bill Atkin Volkswagen, Inc. v. McClafferty, 213 M 99, 689 P2d 1237, 41 St. Rep. 1981 (1984).

Required Insurance — Necessity of Primary Coverage — Excess Coverage Clause Often Adequate: That a policy is procured to satisfy the requirements of a motor vehicle financial responsibility or mandatory liability protection law does not require that policy to provide primary coverage in all events. Between that policy and another policy applicable to a particular event, an excess coverage provision will be given effect. The excess coverage clause does not defeat the purpose of the law, because it provides coverage unless there is other adequate coverage. The loss is thus covered in any event. Moreover, the Montana law simply does not specify that the vehicle owner's insurer is the primary insurer as a matter of law. Bill Atkin Volkswagen, Inc. v. McClafferty, 213 M 99, 689 P2d 1237, 41 St. Rep. 1981 (1984).

Contract Language Not Preventing Payment of Punitive Damage Award — No Public Policy Against Payment: Following the award of general, special, and punitive damages to the plaintiff for injuries suffered in a car accident, the insurance company refused to pay the punitive damages, whereupon the plaintiff sued the insurance company. On appeal from a summary judgment for the plaintiff, the Supreme Court held that the language in the insurance policy relied on by the company to deny the payment of punitive damages was ambiguous and should be construed against the company to allow payment of those damages. The court also held, under the rationale of First Bank (N.A.) Billings v. Transamerica Ins. Co., 209 M 93, 679 P2d 1217, 41 St. Rep. 573 (1984), that there was no public policy against the payment of punitive damages by an insurance company. Fitzgerald v. W. Fire Ins. Co., 209 M 213, 679 P2d 790, 41 St. Rep. 654 (1984).

Overlapping Coverage for Concurrent Causes: When the negligent operation of a Pierce Packing Company garbage truck damaged a stored transformer, causing PCBs to leak from the transformer and contaminate Pierce's feed products, both Pierce's primary and excess liability insurance carriers were liable for the maximum limits under both the general liability and automobile coverage provisions of their policies. Ambiguity in the contracts as to coverage or limits is to be construed against the insurers. Unigard Mut. Ins. Co. v. Abbott, 732 F2d 1414 (9th Cir. 1984).

Partnership — Coverage of Individual Partners' Automobile: When policy extended liability coverage to any automobile owned by the named insured, which was the partnership, without any limitations to vehicles listed on the policy and when endorsement extending coverage to the individual partners provided that coverage for them would be the same as for the partnership, the policy provided coverage to the automobile owned by one of the partners but not listed on the policy. USF&G v. Newman, 656 F2d 457 (9th Cir. 1981).

Oral Contract for Insurance: Since there was no evidence that an automobile insurance agent and his prospective client were dealing for temporary insurance, the case must be judged, not as a possible oral binder, but as one involving a regular insurance policy. Assuming, without deciding, that there may be an oral insurance policy in Montana, it is required by case law that an oral contract must contain the essential elements of a contract. There was no meeting of minds in this case. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Lee, 35 St. Rep. 1508 (D.C. Mont. 1978) (apparently not reported in Federal Supplement).

Insurance Contract Choice of Law Provision — Montana Law Incorrectly Applied to Nevada Policy: The District Court conducted a conflict of law analysis and concluded that Montana law governed Tenas's entitlement to damages for an accident that occurred in Montana under a personal auto policy that Tenas's mother obtained in Nevada. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. Nevada was determined to have a materially greater interest than Montana based on the fact that: (1) Nevada was the place of contracting; (2) although Montana represented a place of performance under the policy, place of performance weighed heavily toward Nevada because Tenas and her mother were mere visitors to Montana; (3) Tenas and her mother resided in Nevada, so that state had a greater interest regarding domicile, residence, nationality, place of incorporation, and place of business of the parties; and (4) a policy choice of law provision required application of Nevada law to resolve any disputes. Given Nevada's greater interest, the District Court improperly applied Montana law to the dispute. Tenas v. Progressive Preferred Ins. Co., 2008 MT 393, 347 M 133, 197 P3d 990 (2008). See also Casarotto v. Lombardi, 268 M 369, 886 P2d 931, 51 St. Rep. 1350 (1994), Mitchell v. St. Farm Ins. Co., 2003 MT 102, 315 M 281, 68 P3d 703 (2003), Wamsley v. Nodak Mut. Ins. Co., 2008 MT 56, 341 M 467, 178 P3d 102 (2008), and Modroo v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 2008 MT 275, 345 M 262, 191 P3d 389 (2008).

Farmowners Policy Construed to Cover Individuals, Not Partnership: Modroo's daughter was killed in an auto accident, and Modroo sought coverage under a farmowners policy that listed Modroo (and by definition Modroo's family members) as insureds. The insurer asserted that the policy was for the family farming partnership and covered only insureds who were driving a vehicle insured under the policy, which the daughter was not. The District Court agreed and held that the policy did not cover Modroo individually or family members. On appeal, the Supreme Court determined that the insurer's interpretation was reasonable but was not the only interpretation.

Another reasonable interpretation was that the policy granted Modroo coverage as an individual because the named insured block on the form listed Modroo, not the partnership. If the insurer intended to cover only the partnership, that entity could have been listed as the named insured, but no reason existed for the insurer to list individuals as insureds unless it intended coverage to apply to them. Construing the ambiguity against the insurer, the policy was held to cover Modroo individually, and the daughter as a family member as well. Modroo was entitled to medical payments under the farmowners policy and the District Court decision was reversed. Modroo v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 2008 MT 275, 345 M 262, 191 P3d 389 (2008). See also Mitchell v. St. Farm Ins. Co., 2003 MT 102, 315 M 281, 68 P3d 703 (2003).

Ohio Law Applied to Disallow Stacking of Coverages — Offsets Allowed: The District Court conducted a conflict of law analysis and concluded that Ohio law governed Modroo's entitlement to damages for an accident that occurred in Montana under a personal auto policy that Modroo obtained in Ohio. Under Ohio law, stacking of policy coverages is disallowed and offsets are allowed. Citing Csulik v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 723 NE 2d 90 (Ohio 2000), Modroo contended that the policy's multiple choice-of-law provisions resulted in ambiguity and that Montana law should have applied because it is more favorable to the insured. The Supreme Court disagreed and noted that although the policy provided for payment of compensatory damages under Montana tort law while also providing that Ohio law governed interpretation of the contract, the presence of two choice-of-law provisions did not necessarily create an ambiguity. The issue of stacking policies was a question of contract law rather than tort law, so the Ohio law applied. Likewise, the provisions in the policy that any amounts available under uninsured motorist coverage would be offset by any amounts available for payment by or on behalf of any liable parties also presented a question of contract law, so Ohio law applied to that issue as well. The Supreme Court declined to overrule its choice of law principles. The District Court did not err in applying Ohio law to the stacking and offset issues. Modroo v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 2008 MT 275, 345 M 262, 191 P3d 389 (2008). The Modroo choice of law rationale was also applied in Tucker v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 2009 MT 247, 351 M 448, 215 P3d 1 (2009). In Tidyman's Management Serv. v. Davis, 2014 MT 201, 376 Mont. 72, 330 P.3d 1135, the Supreme Court overruled Tucker to the extent it suggested that the "materially greater interest" factors supplant the rule from Mitchell v. St. Farm Ins. Co., 2003 MT 102, 315 Mont. 281, 68 P.3d 703, when an insurance contract does not contain a choice-of-law provision.

Retroactive Applicability of Decision Prohibiting Antistacking of Insurance Provisions to Pending Cases: In Hardy v. Progressive Specialty Ins. Co., 2003 MT 85, 315 M 107, 67 P3d 892 (2003), the Supreme Court decided that antistacking provisions in an underinsured motorist policy were unconstitutional. Plaintiffs brought a class action in federal court claiming that Hardy entitled them to additional payments from past insurance claims that were not previously allowed because their policies did not allow for stacking. The federal court certified the question to the Supreme Court as to whether Hardy applied prospectively only or retroactively to qualified claims arising before the Hardy decision. The Supreme Court agreed with the decision in Harper v. Va. Dept. of Taxation, 509 US 86 (1993), that limiting a rule of law to its prospective application creates an arbitrary distinction between litigants based merely on the timing of their claims and that in the interests of fairness and finality, the line should be drawn between claims that are final and claims that are not. The Supreme Court then decided that the retroactivity test in Chevron Oil Co. v. Huson, 404 US 97 (1971), still applies to Montana civil decisions if all three Chevron factors are met: (1) the decision to be applied nonretroactively must establish a new principle of law, either by overruling clear past precedent on which litigants may have relied or by deciding an issue of first impression whose resolution was not clearly foreshadowed; (2) the court must weigh the merits and demerits in each case by looking at the prior history of the rule in question, its purpose and effect, and whether retroactive application will further or retard its operation; and (3) the inequity imposed by retroactive application has been weighed. However, the retroactive effect of a decision does not apply to cases that became final or that were settled prior to a decision's issuance. Thus, Hardy applies retroactively in qualifying circumstances on open claims arising before its issuance and is limited to cases pending on direct appeal or not yet final. Dempsey v. Allstate Ins. Co., 2004 MT 391, 325 M 207, 104 P3d 483 (2004). See also LaMere v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 2011 MT 272, 362 Mont. 379, 265 P.3d 617, holding that under Dempsey, a settled case is considered final.

Bodily Injury Not Inclusive of Emotional or Psychological Injury Within Terms of Uninsured Motorist Policy: Jacobsen was driving a car insured by defendant when he stopped to assist another motorist who was unconscious with a bleeding head wound. Despite Jacobsen's ministrations, the motorist died a few days later, and the cause was determined to be suicide. The next year, Jacobsen began seeking treatment for emotional distress suffered as a result of the incident and filed a claim with defendant to recover uninsured motorist benefits and medical pay benefits. The District Court granted summary judgment for defendant, and Jacobsen appealed on grounds that his policy for uninsured motorist coverage included damages for bodily injury sustained by the insured caused by an accident. The Supreme Court held that the term "bodily injury" was not ambiguous and was limited to physical injury caused by an accident but did not include emotional or psychological injuries. Thus, Jacobsen's emotional injury, including resulting physical manifestations, did not constitute bodily injury as defined in the insurance contract and was not compensable. Jacobsen v. Farmers Union Mut. Ins. Co., 2004 MT 72, 320 M 375, 87 P3d 995 (2004), following Bain v. Gleason, 223 M 442, 726 P2d 1153 (1986), and Aetna Life & Cas. Co. v. First Sec. Bank of Bozeman, 662 F. Supp. 1126 (D.C. Mont. 1987). Jacobsen was overruled in Allstate Ins. Co. v. Wagner-Ellsworth, 2008 MT 240, 344 M 445, 188 P3d 1042 (2008), to the extent that bodily injuries include mental or psychological injuries that are accompanied by physical manifestations.

No Recovery of Wrongful Death Stipulated Judgment From Employer's Insurer — Workers' Compensation Act Exclusive Remedy: Plaintiff's wife was killed in an automobile accident in the course of her employment, striking a vehicle driven by a coemployee of the same employer. Plaintiff received workers' compensation benefits under the employer's coverage. The employer settled for $1,250,000 in a stipulated judgment, which included $500,000 for wrongful death. Plaintiff then sued the employer's insurer to collect the $500,000 wrongful death judgment under an uninsured motorist policy. The District Court granted summary judgment to the insurer, holding that plaintiff could not recover a stipulated judgment from the insurer because plaintiff's exclusive remedy was under the Workers' Compensation Act. On appeal, plaintiff asserted that Sullivan v. Doe, 159 M 50, 495 P2d 193 (1972), precluded the offset of uninsured motorist benefits by workers' compensation benefits. The Supreme Court applied Hubbel v. W. Fire Ins. Co., 218 M 21, 706 P2d 111 (1985), and affirmed. To recover under this section, two conditions must be met: (1) a claimant must be legally entitled to recover damages from the owner or operator of the uninsured vehicle; and (2) the driver of the vehicle must be uninsured. Under 39-71-411, an employer is not liable for the death of an employee covered by the Workers' Compensation Act, so plaintiff was barred from recovering from the coemployee and the employer. Because plaintiff was not legally entitled to recover damages under this section, plaintiff's exclusive remedy was under the Worker's Compensation Act, and recovery was limited to damages received under the Act. Okuly v. USF&G Ins. Co., 2003 MT 291, 318 M 88, 78 P3d 877 (2003).

Underinsured Motorist Coverage Included With Uninsured Motorist Coverage — Reasonable Consumer Expectation of Additional Coverage: Rather than paying a separate premium for independent underinsured motorist coverage, Mitchell's underinsured motorist coverage was part of the uninsured motorist coverage, no separate premium was paid for the underinsured coverage, and the declarations pages did not list underinsured motorist coverage separately. Nevertheless, Mitchell was still entitled to a reasonable expectation that the underinsured motorist coverage provided additional coverage. As in Hardy v. Progressive Specialty Ins. Co., 2003 MT 85, 315 M 107, 67 P3d 892 (2003), the underinsured motorist definition in Mitchell's policy contravened that expectation and thus violated Montana's public policy. Mitchell v. St. Farm Ins. Co., 2003 MT 102, 315 M 281, 68 P3d 703 (2003).

Offset Provision in Underinsured Motorist Policy Violative of State Policy — Antistacking Provisions Unconstitutional: Hardy paid separate premiums for underinsured motorist (UIM) coverage of $50,000 a person and $100,000 an accident for each of three vehicles. Hardy was injured when the vehicle that he was riding in was negligently struck by another car. Hardy recovered $50,000 from the other driver's liability insurer, but that amount was insufficient to cover Hardy's injuries, so Hardy sought compensation pursuant to the UIM coverage on his vehicles. Hardy believed that the policies could be stacked to aggregate $150,000 of UIM coverage. Defendant insurance company denied coverage, and Hardy sued in federal District Court. The insurer raised three arguments in its defense, contending that: (1) the tortfeasor's vehicle was not underinsured, as defined in the policy, because the total liability coverage for the tortfeasor's vehicle was equal to the highest single UIM coverage limit in Hardy's policy; (2) the policy required Hardy's UIM coverage for one vehicle to be offset by all amounts recovered from the tortfeasor; and (3) Hardy's UIM coverages could not be stacked or aggregated for purposes of either comparing limits or affording $150,000 of UIM coverage. The federal District Court certified the three questions to the Montana Supreme Court, which determined that the UIM definition and offset clause in Hardy's policy violated Hardy's reasonable expectation of coverage when a tortfeasor's insurance provided inadequate indemnity. The policy declarations page suggested coverage in an amount that was actually not available; therefore, the terms of the UIM coverage were ambiguous in violation of Montana public policy and rendered the coverage that the insurer promised to provide illusory. Further, the provisions of 33-23-203 that allow insurers to charge premiums for nonexistent coverage are not rationally related to the objective of maintaining affordable insurance in Montana and constitute an arbitrary and capricious legislative action that is unconstitutionally violative of due process. A Montanan should reasonably expect coverage up to the aggregate limits of separate policies when a separate premium for UIM coverage was charged for each policy. Antistacking provisions that allow an insurer to receive valuable consideration for coverage that is not provided are against public policy. Hardy v. Progressive Specialty Ins. Co., 2003 MT 85, 315 M 107, 67 P3d 892 (2003), followed in Mitchell v. St. Farm Ins. Co., 2003 MT 102, 315 M 281, 68 P3d 703 (2003), and distinguished in Parish v. Morris, 2012 MT 116, 365 Mont. 171, 278 P.3d 1015. The Hardy decision was applied retroactively to open claims arising before its issuance and was limited to cases pending on direct appeal or not yet final in Dempsey v. Allstate Ins. Co., 2004 MT 391, 325 M 207, 104 P3d 483 (2004), which was followed in LaMere v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 2011 MT 272, 362 Mont. 379, 265 P.3d 617, holding that under Dempsey, a settled case is considered final. See also Chaffee v. USF&G Co., 181 M 1, 591 P2d 1102 (1979), and Bennett v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 261 M 386, 862 P2d 1146 (1993).

Government-Owned Exclusion in Insurance Policy Impermissibly Restrictive of Mandatory Uninsured Vehicle Coverage: The Supreme Court received a certified question from federal District Court as to whether a provision in defendant's uninsured vehicle insurance policy excluding coverage on any government-owned vehicle or equipment was violative of this section, Montana's mandatory uninsured vehicle coverage statute. The Supreme Court held that this section does not specifically exclude any class of vehicle, so the government-owned exclusion impermissibly restricted the broad and mandatory coverage required by the statute and was repugnant to the clear public policy in Montana in favor of uninsured motorist coverage and against any limitations upon complete protection. Therefore, any automobile policy issued in Montana with respect to a motor vehicle registered and maintained in Montana that provides that a vehicle or equipment owned by a governmental unit or agency may not be an uninsured vehicle violates this section and the public policy of this state. Bartell v. Am. Home Assurance Co., 2002 MT 145, 310 M 276, 49 P3d 623 (2002).

Question of Fault and Question of Entitlement to Collect Damages Separate: Dill suffered damages after being hit as a pedestrian by a vehicle operated by Jardine. State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company (State Farm) provided both liability insurance for Jardine and underinsured motorist coverage for Dill. Meeting all the conditions precedent in the policy, Dill recovered the maximum policy amount from Jardine pursuant to Jardine's policy, then, consistent with the general release executed on Dill's behalf in settling with Jardine, Dill demanded underinsured motorist benefits under Dill's policy, which State Farm refused to pay. The District Court held that Dill's claim against State Farm would not be ripe for adjudication until after Jardine's fault was established and damages assessed in a negligence action. However, the question of whether anyone was at fault and the question of whether an insured is legally entitled to collect damages from an underinsured driver are not the same. A person can be legally entitled to collect damages without first proving fault in court, as Dill did here; conversely, an insured might prove fault on the part of the defendant and yet not be entitled to collect damages. Once an insured demonstrates a legal entitlement to damages, principles of contract law define the coverage afforded by an underinsured motorist policy; tort law is relevant only as far as fault is concerned. Under a writ of supervisory control, the Supreme Court looked to the clear language of the policy and found no issues of fault for a factfinder to resolve. The only questions remaining were whether Dill was legally entitled to collect damages and, if so, in what amount. Regardless of whether anyone was at fault, having already received money from State Farm, Dill was obviously legally entitled to receive damages. Thus, the case was reversed for a trial to determine the amount of damages, if any, that Dill was entitled to under the underinsured motorist policy. Dill v. District Court, 1999 MT 85, 294 M 134, 979 P2d 188, 56 St. Rep. 350 (1999).

"Arising Out of the Use of" Construed in Context of Uninsured Motorist Law: For purposes of uninsured motorist coverage, an insured's injuries arise out of the use of an uninsured vehicle if the injuries originate from, grow out of, or flow from the use of the uninsured vehicle. The phrase should be broadly interpreted to effect the remedial purposes of the uninsured motorist law. Wendell v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 1999 MT 17, 293 M 140, 974 P2d 623, 56 St. Rep. 73 (1999), following Ins. Co. of N. Am. v. Dorris, 288 SE 2d 856 (Ga. App. Ct. 1982), and Ulrich v. United Serv. Auto. Ass'n, 839 P2d 942 (Wyo. 1992), and followed, with regard to the use of the phrase in a commercial general liability insurance policy, in Pablo v. Moore, 2000 MT 48, 298 M 393, 995 P2d 460, 57 St. Rep. 231 (2000). See also Akerley v. Hartford Ins. Group, 616 A2d 511 (N.H. 1992), and Cannon v. Maine Bonding & Cas. Co., 639 A2d 270 (N.H. 1994).

Intentional Assault Considered Accident in Context of Uninsured Motorist Law: Wendell was assaulted by a group of people after they followed him in a car, he stopped, and they approached his car. Wendell's uninsured motorist claim was denied because his injuries were not caused by an accident involving the vehicle. Neither the uninsured motorist law nor the uninsured motorist provision at issue defined "accident" or excluded from coverage injuries caused by intentional, as opposed to negligent, acts of the insured. Because the term was subject to more than one interpretation, it was considered ambiguous. The question of ambiguity in insurance contract language is examined from the viewpoint of a consumer with average intelligence who is not trained in law or the insurance business. The average insured reasonably expects that as long as an injury-producing event is unforeseen and unprovoked by the insured, injuries caused by uninsured motorists will be covered by uninsured motorist coverage regardless of whether they were caused negligently or intentionally. Absent contract language to the contrary, an intentional act may be considered an accident for purposes of uninsured motorist coverage. Thus, in this case, an intentional assault on Wendell, viewed from his standpoint as the insured, was an accident and was subject to coverage. Wendell v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 1999 MT 17, 293 M 140, 974 P2d 623, 56 St. Rep. 73 (1999).

"No Prejudice" Rule Adopted in Montana With Respect to Underinsured Motorist Insurance Coverage: Sorensen was injured in a two-vehicle accident and, after settling with the liability carrier for the other driver, also tried to recover damages under the underinsured coverage with her own carrier. The District Court held that she was precluded from recovering under her own policy because she had settled with the other driver without informing her insurer, thereby prejudicing the insurer's subrogation rights and violating the terms of the insurance contract. The Supreme Court held that it was adopting the "no prejudice" rule with respect to underinsured motorist coverage, meaning that an insurer has the burden to prove that it was prejudiced by the settlement of the tort claim in order to rely on the subrogation provisions of the policy. The Supreme Court reversed the lower court on the basis that the evidence presented in the lower court showed that the other driver was "judgment proof" and therefore the insurer could not have been prejudiced by Sorensen's entering into a settlement. Sorensen v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 279 M 291, 927 P2d 1002, 53 St. Rep. 1155 (1996), followed in Augustine v. Simonson, 283 M 259, 940 P2d 116, 54 St. Rep. 589 (1997).

Required Coverages: Under Montana's statutory scheme, the minimum third-party liability coverages under 61-6-103 and the minimum first-party uninsured motorist coverage under this section are required coverages. Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holeman, 278 M 274, 924 P2d 1315, 53 St. Rep. 904 (1996), distinguishing Grier v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 248 M 457, 812 P2d 347 (1991). See also Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holeman, 1998 MT 155, 289 M 312, 961 P2d 114, 55 St. Rep. 601 (1998).

Use of Insured Vehicle by Uninsured Driver — Denial of Coverage by Insurer — Uninsured Motorist Coverage Applicable: Sobieck crashed a car belonging to her boyfriend that was insured by Employers Mutual. Nimmick was a passenger and was injured. Nimmick's parents were insured by State Farm at the time of the accident, and the policy defined an uninsured motor vehicle as one uninsured as to its ownership, maintenance, or use and the ownership, maintenance, or use of which is insured or bonded for bodily injury liability at the time of the accident but the insuring company denies coverage or is or becomes insolvent. Employers Mutual initially denied coverage of Sobieck's use of the vehicle; therefore, in regard to any claim against Sobieck, the vehicle was uninsured under the State Farm policy. Even though ownership of the vehicle was insured, the vehicle was uninsured pursuant to Nimmick's policy if Sobieck's use of the vehicle was not insured. Nimmick v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 270 M 315, 891 P2d 1154, 52 St. Rep. 208 (1995).

No Offset Possible When Underinsured Provision Part of Uninsured Coverage of Policy: In response to a certified question from federal court, the Supreme Court reviewed the plaintiff's insurance policy to determine if the insurance company was due an offset for payments made by a third party to the plaintiff for injuries suffered by the plaintiff in an automobile accident. The Supreme Court held that the language in the policy pertaining to underinsurance was part of the policy dealing with uninsured coverage and that public policy prohibited any offset for coverage carried by the third-party tortfeasor. Grier v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 248 M 457, 812 P2d 347, 48 St. Rep. 510 (1991), distinguished in Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holeman, 1998 MT 155, 289 M 312, 961 P2d 114, 55 St. Rep. 601 (1998), and followed in Mitchell v. St. Farm Ins. Co., 2003 MT 102, 315 M 281, 68 P3d 703 (2003).

Umbrella Policy Not Automobile or Motor Vehicle Policy That Must Include Uninsured Motorist Coverage: The statutory definition of motor vehicle liability policy in 61-6-103 does not include excess insurance, such as an umbrella policy. Therefore, an umbrella policy does not constitute a motor vehicle liability policy as envisioned by this section, the uninsured motorist statute. Read together, these statutes clearly apply only to primary automobile insurance, not to a commercial umbrella policy issued to protect the insured from liability to third parties. However, this does not mean that an insurer may not offer additional uninsured motorist coverage as part of a primary policy or umbrella policy. Rowe v. The Travelers Indem. Co., 245 M 413, 800 P2d 157, 47 St. Rep. 1946 (1990).

Towing of Insured Vehicle by Uninsured Vehicle as Constituting "Use" for Uninsured Motorist Coverage; or "When Is an Uninsured Motorist Not an Uninsured Motorist?": The towing of an insured motor vehicle by an uninsured motor vehicle constitutes use of the insured vehicle for purposes of recovery under the uninsured motorist coverage law. Defendant who had no insurance did not qualify as an uninsured motorist when the use of his vehicle to tow another from a ditch was insured by coverage of the towed vehicle. Olmstead v. Hubert, 230 M 383, 751 P2d 160, 45 St. Rep. 290 (1988).

Conditions of Uninsured Motorist Not Met — Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy: The decedent employee was killed in an automobile accident while in the course of his employment. It was alleged that his coemployee's negligence was the sole cause of the accident. The decedents' heirs applied for and received workers' compensation benefits. In an action by the employee's heirs to recover damages from the coemployee's insurance company under a policy's uninsured motorist provisions, the trial court improperly held that the negligent driver was an uninsured motorist. The court reasoned, first, that 39-71-411 required that the heirs' exclusive remedy was the Workers' Compensation Act, thus the driver's insurance was not applicable and the driver was operating an uninsured vehicle. Second, the insurer's refusal to provide coverage under the "bodily injury" portion of its policy qualified the driver as an uninsured motorist. However, the Supreme Court reversed, holding that the driver was an insured motorist as he had coverage under legally adequate insurance policies, but recovery from him was dependent on and denied by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act. Hubbel v. W. Fire Ins. Co., 218 M 21, 706 P2d 111, 42 St. Rep. 1365 (1985).

Insurers of Persons Injured by Uninsured Motorist Not Treated as Joint Tortfeasors for Purposes of Liability: When accident and injury are caused by uninsured motorist, insurance companies providing uninsured motorist coverage to parties involved cannot be held jointly and severally liable because an insurer's relationship to the uninsured motorist is based on contract, not tort. Guiberson v. Hartford Cas. Ins. Co., 217 M 279, 704 P2d 68, 42 St. Rep. 1196 (1985). See also Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holeman, 1998 MT 155, 289 M 312, 961 P2d 114, 55 St. Rep. 601 (1998).

Restrictions on Uninsured Motorist Coverage Strictly Construed in Favor of Insured: The Supreme Court does not support provisions placed on uninsured motorist coverage that restrict or thwart available liability coverage which the insured would be entitled to in an accident. The language of an uninsured motorist provision is nullified where it gives less coverage for acts of the uninsured than it would to the insured, thus defeating the purpose of providing such coverage. Guiberson v. Hartford Cas. Ins. Co., 217 M 279, 704 P2d 68, 42 St. Rep. 1196 (1985). See also St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 223 M 215, 725 P2d 821, 43 St. Rep. 1667 (1986), Nimmick v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 270 M 315, 891 P2d 1154, 52 St. Rep. 208 (1995), and Dagel v. Farmers Ins. Group, 273 M 402, 903 P2d 1359, 52 St. Rep. 1023 (1995).

Use of Insured Vehicle by Uninsured Driver — Denial of Coverage by Insurer — Uninsured Motorist Coverage Applicable: Sobieck crashed a car belonging to her boyfriend that was insured by Employers Mutual. Nimmick was a passenger and was injured. Nimmick's parents were insured by State Farm at the time of the accident, and the policy defined an uninsured motor vehicle as one uninsured as to its ownership, maintenance, or use and the ownership, maintenance, or use of which is insured or bonded for bodily injury liability at the time of the accident but the insuring company denies coverage or is or becomes insolvent. Employers Mutual initially denied coverage of Sobieck's use of the vehicle; therefore, in regard to any claim against Sobieck, the vehicle was uninsured under the State Farm policy. Even though ownership of the vehicle was insured, the vehicle was uninsured pursuant to Nimmick's policy if Sobieck's use of the vehicle was not insured. Nimmick v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 270 M 315, 891 P2d 1154, 52 St. Rep. 208 (1995).

Hit-and-Run Synonymous With Cause-and-Run — Physical Contact of Vehicles Not Required: While approaching a bridge, insured swerved to avoid a vehicle that had crossed the centerline into insured's lane. Insured hit a bridge abutment, his passenger was injured, and the other driver continued on and was never found. The insured's uninsured motorist coverage required physical contact between the two vehicles, though 33-23-201 did not. The court held, in a case of first impression, that the physical contact requirement defeated the purpose of and was repugnant to the statute and that coverage attached. The court also stated that, in other states in which the issue had arisen, there had been no flood of fraudulent claims involving so-called phantom vehicles and that the terms "hit-and-run" and "cause-and-run" were synonymous in this context, the former being a baseball colloquialism used to describe violation of a statute requiring a motorist involved in an accident to stop and render assistance and identification whether or not there was physical contact. The court cited with approval Hammon v. Farmers Ins. Group, 692 P2d 1202 (Idaho App. 1984), which ruled a physical contact requirement void as contrary to a statute strikingly similar to and in pertinent part the same as 33-23-201. McGlynn v. Safeco Ins. Co. of America, 216 M 379, 701 P2d 735, 42 St. Rep. 882 (1985).

Subrogation Under Uninsured Motorist Provision: An insurance company that pays an insured for personal injury under an uninsured motorist provision can subrogate and collect from the tortfeasor the amount paid to the insured. Farmers Ins. Exch. v. Christenson, 211 M 250, 683 P2d 1319, 41 St. Rep. 1342 (1984).

Meaning of "Uninsured Motorist" Under Specific Contract Provision: Under an uninsured motorist clause that defined an uninsured motor vehicle as a land motor vehicle "of which there is, in at least the amount specified by the financial responsibility law of the state . . . no bodily injury liability insurance", a motorist carrying less than the amount of liability insurance specified by 61-6-103 is an uninsured motorist. Oleson v. Farmers Ins. Group, 185 M 164, 605 P2d 166 (1980).

Insolvent Insurer — Not Uninsured Motorist Coverage: Plaintiff settled with tortfeasor's insurance company for injuries sustained in an auto accident, but the company became insolvent before making payment. Plaintiff's own company was not liable under its "uninsured automobile" clause because there was no affirmative act by the insolvent insurer whereby it "denied coverage". Application of the Montana Insurance Guaranty Association Act, Title 33, ch. 10, part 1, protects plaintiff as effectively as a strained judicial construction of the uninsured motorist policy terms. Murray v. Mont. Ins. Guar. Ass'n, 175 M 220, 573 P2d 196 (1977).

Recovery From Primary Insurer: Recovery from primary insurer under uninsured motorist coverage, though applied against the total judgment, does not reduce the amount of coverage provided by secondary insurer. Sullivan v. Doe, 159 M 50, 495 P2d 193 (1972).

Workers' Compensation: Since uninsured motorist coverage is intended to place the injured policyholder in the same position he would have been if the uninsured motorist had liability insurance, the amount of plaintiff's recovery from uninsured motorist coverage cannot be reduced by any workers' compensation benefits received by him and the Insurance Commissioner had no authority to approve a policy providing for such reduction. Sullivan v. Doe, 159 M 50, 495 P2d 193 (1972).

UNINSURED MOTORIST COVERAGE — "STACKING" COVERAGE
(Decided Prior to 1997 Amendment to 33-23-203)

Multiple Vehicles Under One Policy: An insured had three vehicles covered under one policy. Under the policy, three premiums were paid for uninsured motorist coverage on the three vehicles. The son of the insured died of injuries received while riding in an uninsured vehicle. When sued for the maximum liability under each of the three uninsured motorist provisions, the insurer attempted to limit coverage. The attempt to limit the coverage under one policy to prevent combining of the coverage is in violation of Montana law and public policy. The insured bought insurance and paid premiums on three vehicles and may combine the coverage in the same fashion as is permitted if the vehicles were insured under three policies. [Decided prior to enactment of 33-23-203.] Chaffee v. USF&G Co., 181 M 1, 591 P2d 1102 (1979), distinguished in Chilberg v. Rose, 273 M 414, 903 P2d 1377, 52 St. Rep. 1038 (1995). Chilberg was distinguished in Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holeman, 1998 MT 155, 289 M 312, 961 P2d 114, 55 St. Rep. 601 (1998).

Sum of Coverages — Multiple Vehicles: In applying Montana law, the Supreme Court determined that uninsured motorist coverages are to be "stacked"; that is, in policies of insurance which cover two or more vehicles, if a separate premium has been charged and collected on each vehicle for uninsured vehicle coverage, the insured is entitled to recover under uninsured motorist coverage sums found legally recoverable up to the aggregate sum of the coverages on all the vehicles so insured. [Decided prior to enactment of 33-23-203.] Kemp v. Allstate Ins. Co., 183

M 526, 601 P2d 20 (1979), following Chaffee v. USF&G Co., 181 M 1, 591 P2d 1102 (1979), and distinguished in Chilberg v. Rose, 273 M 414, 903 P2d 1377, 52 St. Rep. 1038 (1995). Chilberg was distinguished in Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holeman, 1998 MT 155, 289 M 312, 961 P2d 114, 55 St. Rep. 601 (1998).

Separability Clause — Construction: Stacking of uninsured motorist coverage limits in a single policy based on number of vehicles was proper where provisions of policy's separability clause was contradictory to liability clause, thus ambiguous, permitting judicial construction in favor of insured. [Decided prior to enactment of 33-23-203.] Mtn. W. Farm Bureau v. Neal, 169 M 317, 547 P2d 79 (1976).

1997 Amendment: Chapter 71 at end inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style.

Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 71, L. 1997, provided: "The amendments in [section 2] [33-23-202] apply to motor vehicle insurance policies issued or renewed after [the effective date of this act]." Effective October 1, 1997.

1987 Amendment: Following "Each" substituted "motor vehicle" for "automobile" and made minor changes in phraseology.

Case Notes

Dismissal Proper — Suit Filed Prior to Compliance With Policy Terms: The plaintiffs' insurance policy contained a clause that required implementing an appraisal procedure if the parties could not agree on the amount of loss. The policy also stated that no legal action could be initiated until there was full compliance with the terms of the policy. The insurer invoked the appraisal clause, but the plaintiffs refused to submit to the procedure and instead filed suit for damages and bad faith against the insurer. The Supreme Court held that summary judgment in favor of the insurer was appropriate in light of the clear language of the policy, and the court further held that the terms of the policy were a negative defense and did not have to be affirmatively set out in the defendants' answer. Dunn v. Way, 241 M 208, 786 P2d 649, 47 St. Rep. 213 (1990).

33-23-203. Limitation of liability under motor vehicle liability policy.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 201 in (1)(c) at end inserted "if the premiums charged for the coverage by the insurer actuarially reflect the limiting of coverage separately to the vehicles covered by the policy and the premium rates have been filed with the commissioner"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 17, 2007.

Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 201, L. 2007, provided: "[This act] applies to motor insurance policies issued or renewed on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 17, 2007.

1997 Amendments: Chapter 263 in (2), near beginning after "reductions of coverage", inserted "or subrogation clauses" and after "loss" inserted "under the motor vehicle liability policy or under another casualty policy that provides coverage for an injury that necessitates damages or benefit payments"; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 495 substituted current text in (1) and (2) concerning limits of policy coverage for previous provisions that applied formula in former (1)(a) through (1)(c) in cases of multiple policies written on same insured or multiple premiums paid by same insured and authorized policy language prohibiting stacking of limits of multiple policies (see 1997 Session Law for former text); and inserted (3) and (4) concerning premium for specified coverage and excluding coverage for uninsured vehicle. Amendment effective May 2, 1997.

Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 495, L. 1997, provided: "[This act] [33-23-203 and 33-23-204] applies to all motor vehicle liability policies issued or renewed after [the effective date of this act]." Effective May 2, 1997.

1987 Amendment: Throughout section, before "vehicle" or "vehicles", inserted "motor" and made minor changes in phraseology.

Case Notes

Duplicate Payments Allowed Under Insurance Policy Language: Plaintiff was injured while working on his vehicle. He had a medical insurance policy and a separate motor vehicle policy with a medical payment provision. The medical insurer paid most of the claim. The plaintiff then sought payment of the entirety of the claim from the motor vehicle insurer, who denied the claim. The plaintiff alleged breach of contract and unfair trade practices. The Supreme Court found that the policy language did not limit the plaintiff from receiving a duplicate payment of medical expenses and that there was no basis in contract law, insurance law, or public policy that would prohibit such recovery. Winter v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 2014 MT 168, 375 Mont. 351, 328 P.3d 665.

Exhaustion of Other Coverage Requirement Before Benefits Triggered — No Violation of Public Policy on Subrogation: A driver was in an accident while driving a business vehicle insured by the business through an insurer, and the driver incurred medical and other expenses. The driver sought recovery of medical payment benefits and underinsured motorist benefits through another insurer, her personal insurance company, Safeco. The driver argued that Safeco's policy unlawfully subrogated her claims because it required medical payment coverage and underinsured motorist coverage to be exhausted under any other applicable policy before triggering Safeco's concurrent duty to pay benefits. The Supreme Court held that this case was not a de facto subrogation case because Safeco had not attempted subrogation and had not rejected the driver's insurance claims. Safeco's policy merely stated that it was only a secondary insurer and that excess benefits would be available only after the first insurer had paid full benefits. Scheafer v. Safeco Ins. Co., 2014 MT 73, 374 Mont. 278, 320 P.3d 967.

Insured Made Whole for Property Damage Under Separate Collision Coverage — Subrogation Available: The U.S. District Court certified to the Montana Supreme Court the question of whether an insurer is prohibited from exercising its rights of subrogation when payment had been made for property damage under one coverage but the insured asserted he was not made whole for bodily injury damages paid under a different coverage. The plaintiff had purchased his auto insurance policy from the defendant, including separate, optional collision coverage, and was subsequently involved in an accident in which another driver was at fault. As a result of the accident, the plaintiff suffered both property damage and bodily injury; he recovered money for his bodily injury damages under the original policy from the defendant and from the other driver's insurance company but claimed that his bodily injury damages exceeded both the payments he received and the policy limits. The defendant also paid the costs for the property damage under the provisions of the collision coverage policy, then sought subrogation for these expenses from the other driver's insurance company. The plaintiff brought suit alleging that the defendant violated Montana law by seeking subrogation for the property damage before he had been made whole for the related personal injuries. The Supreme Court held that the defendant was entitled to seek subrogation because the insured had been made whole for the element of damage for which he purchased insurance under the separate property damage policy. Van Orden v. United Serv. Auto. Ass'n, 2014 MT 45, 374 Mont. 62, 318 P.3d 1042.

Insurance Contract Choice of Law Provision — Montana Law Incorrectly Applied to Nevada Policy: The District Court conducted a conflict of law analysis and concluded that Montana law governed Tenas's entitlement to damages for an accident that occurred in Montana under a personal auto policy that Tenas's mother obtained in Nevada. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. Nevada was determined to have a materially greater interest than Montana based on the fact that: (1) Nevada was the place of contracting; (2) although Montana represented a place of performance under the policy, place of performance weighed heavily toward Nevada because Tenas and her mother were mere visitors to Montana; (3) Tenas and her mother resided in Nevada, so that state had a greater interest regarding domicile, residence, nationality, place of incorporation, and place of business of the parties; and (4) a policy choice of law provision required application of Nevada law to resolve any disputes. Given Nevada's greater interest, the District Court improperly applied Montana law to the dispute. Tenas v. Progressive Preferred Ins. Co., 2008 MT 393, 347 M 133, 197 P3d 990 (2008). See also Casarotto v. Lombardi, 268 M 369, 886 P2d 931, 51 St. Rep. 1350 (1994), Mitchell v. St. Farm Ins. Co., 2003 MT 102, 315 M 281, 68 P3d 703 (2003), Wamsley v. Nodak Mut. Ins. Co., 2008 MT 56, 341 M 467, 178 P3d 102 (2008), and Modroo v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 2008 MT 275, 345 M 262, 191 P3d 389 (2008).

Farmowners Policy Construed to Cover Individuals, Not Partnership: Modroo's daughter was killed in an auto accident, and Modroo sought coverage under a farmowners policy that listed Modroo (and by definition Modroo's family members) as insureds. The insurer asserted that the policy was for the family farming partnership and covered only insureds who were driving a vehicle insured under the policy, which the daughter was not. The District Court agreed and held that the policy did not cover Modroo individually or family members. On appeal, the Supreme Court determined that the insurer's interpretation was reasonable but was not the only interpretation.

Another reasonable interpretation was that the policy granted Modroo coverage as an individual because the named insured block on the form listed Modroo, not the partnership. If the insurer intended to cover only the partnership, that entity could have been listed as the named insured, but no reason existed for the insurer to list individuals as insureds unless it intended coverage to apply to them. Construing the ambiguity against the insurer, the policy was held to cover Modroo individually, and the daughter as a family member as well. Modroo was entitled to medical payments under the farmowners policy and the District Court decision was reversed. Modroo v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 2008 MT 275, 345 M 262, 191 P3d 389 (2008). See also Mitchell v. St. Farm Ins. Co., 2003 MT 102, 315 M 281, 68 P3d 703 (2003).

Ohio Law Applied to Disallow Stacking of Coverages — Offsets Allowed: The District Court conducted a conflict of law analysis and concluded that Ohio law governed Modroo's entitlement to damages for an accident that occurred in Montana under a personal auto policy that Modroo obtained in Ohio. Under Ohio law, stacking of policy coverages is disallowed and offsets are allowed. Citing Csulik v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 723 NE 2d 90 (Ohio 2000), Modroo contended that the policy's multiple choice-of-law provisions resulted in ambiguity and that Montana law should have applied because it is more favorable to the insured. The Supreme Court disagreed and noted that although the policy provided for payment of compensatory damages under Montana tort law while also providing that Ohio law governed interpretation of the contract, the presence of two choice-of-law provisions did not necessarily create an ambiguity. The issue of stacking policies was a question of contract law rather than tort law, so the Ohio law applied. Likewise, the provisions in the policy that any amounts available under uninsured motorist coverage would be offset by any amounts available for payment by or on behalf of any liable parties also presented a question of contract law, so Ohio law applied to that issue as well. The Supreme Court declined to overrule its choice of law principles. The District Court did not err in applying Ohio law to the stacking and offset issues. Modroo v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 2008 MT 275, 345 M 262, 191 P3d 389 (2008). The Modroo choice of law rationale was also applied in Tucker v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 2009 MT 247, 351 M 448, 215 P3d 1 (2009). In Tidyman's Management Serv. v. Davis, 2014 MT 201, 376 Mont. 72, 330 P.3d 1135, the Supreme Court overruled Tucker to the extent it suggested that the "materially greater interest" factors supplant the rule from Mitchell v. St. Farm Ins. Co., 2003 MT 102, 315 Mont. 281, 68 P.3d 703, when an insurance contract does not contain a choice-of-law provision.

Policy Modification Reducing Uninsured Motorist Coverage Constituting Less Favorable Terms Requiring Notice to Insured — Adequacy of Notice: Prior to 1996 and in anticipation of Supreme Court antistacking decisions, the insurer converted Robertus's uninsured/underinsured motorist policy to charge Robertus a single premium for all seven of Robertus's vehicles instead of requiring Robertus to pay a separate amount for each vehicle, which resulted in a total coverage of $300,000. However, the insurer did not send a separate notice of the change to Robertus. When Robertus was subsequently injured in one of the vehicles, Robertus sought to recover the total policy amount for all seven vehicles in the amount of $2.1 million, but the insurer agreed to pay only $300,000. Robertus sued on grounds that because the insurer failed to provide notice of the policy change, Robertus was entitled to up to $2.1 million. The District Court held that Robertus was effectively notified of the change because of the significant reduction in the price of the policy and the changes noted on the declarations page. Robertus appealed. The Supreme Court concluded that Robertus would have been entitled to stack the seven policies under the law in effect at the time of the accident and prior to the policy change, that the insurer's attempt to avoiding stacking by revising the policy to reduce Robertus's coverage by nearly $2 million constituted less favorable terms requiring the insurer to provide notice to Robertus pursuant to the 1995 version of 33-15-1106, and that the District Court erred in concluding otherwise. Robertus v. Farmers Union Mut. Ins. Co., 2008 MT 207, 344 M 157, 189 P3d 582 (2008).

Insurance Subrogation Prior to Insured Being Made Whole — Requirements for Class Action Certification Met: Ferguson sought class action certification of a case involving an insurer that subrogated against the tortfeasor's insurance carrier before Ferguson was made whole. The District Court denied certification on grounds that under Swanson v. Hartford Ins. Co. of the Midwest, 2002 MT 81, 309 M 269, 46 P3d 584 (2002), the legal duty for insurers taking subrogation eliminated the common issue and on grounds that because Ferguson's case required fact-specific determinations of "made whole" entitlements, class action was not appropriate. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. As in Sieglock v. Burlington N. Santa Fe Ry. Co., 2003 MT 355, 319 M 8, 81 P3d 495 (2003), the District Court failed to consider whether the plaintiff class presented common issues of fact, particularly the common issues of fact arising from the insurer's subrogation program. The existence of the well-established duty on the part of the insurer to make the insured whole prior to subrogation, as set out in Swanson, did not eliminate the common fact issue of whether the insurer programmatically breached that duty, and when a common scheme of deceptive conduct is alleged, common questions of law or fact will exist (see Powers v. Gov't Employees Ins. Co., 192 FRD 313 (S.D. Fla. 1998)). Thus, Ferguson satisfied the commonality issue. The District Court further erred in reasoning that Ferguson failed to demonstrate that any common issues predominate over questions affecting only individual members of the affected class. Ferguson's challenge was not to an error in the insurer's application of the "made whole" rule to any given insured, but rather to the procedures of a program of subrogation that systematically deprived all class members of any consideration of their "made whole" rights, so predominance was not required for class certification in this case. Lastly, the efficient remedy of classwide declaratory relief was appropriate because the size of the average claim was so small that relief for the average class member was not economically available outside of class litigation. The case was remanded for further proceedings as a class action. Ferguson v. Safeco Ins. Co. of America, 2008 MT 109, 342 M 380, 180 P3d 1164 (2008).

Failure of Insured to Timely Notify Insurer of Claim — Coverage Precluded: Lee's insurance policy with Great Divide Insurance Company (Great Divide) required Lee to promptly send Great Divide copies of legal papers if a suit was brought. Lee never sent Great Divide a copy of a complaint alleging uninsured motorist coverage against a different insurer and did not provide Great Divide with a copy of a second amended complaint until 2 ½ years after the initial complaint. Notice of the suit did not disclose that the uninsured driver could not be found, that default judgment of over $1 million would be sought against the uninsured driver, and that Lee would pursue a suit against Great Divide. These omissions were a material breach of Lee's policy obligations and were independently sufficient to deny coverage to Lee. Great Divide was entitled to summary judgment. Lee v. Great Divide Ins. Co., 2008 MT 80, 342 M 147, 182 P3d 41 (2008).

No Corporate Policy Coverage for Person Occupying Vehicle Not Listed in Policy: Lee's corporate insurance policy covering company vehicles limited coverage to the corporation and to anyone else occupying a covered auto or temporary substitute for a covered auto. Lee was injured while driving a vehicle that was not listed in the policy or considered a substitute vehicle, but claimed that the policy should nevertheless be interpreted to provide coverage. The District Court determined that no coverage existed under the policy and granted summary judgment to the insurer. On appeal, the Supreme Court declined to expand corporate policy coverage to injured persons involved in the corporation who were not occupying a vehicle covered under the policy at the time of the accident. Summary judgment was affirmed. Lee v. Great Divide Ins. Co., 2008 MT 80, 342 M 147, 182 P3d 41 (2008), following Chilberg v. Rose, 273 M 414, 903 P2d 1377 (1995), and Lierboe v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 2003 MT 174, 316 M 382, 73 P3d 800 (2003).

Policy Limiting Medical Coverage to Only Vehicle Being Driven Despite Coverage on Multiple Vehicles Violative of Public Policy — Lierboe Clarified: Gibson insured three vehicles with State Farm. Each policy provided medical payment coverage in the amount of $5,000. Gibson was injured while driving one of the vehicles, and medical expenses exceeded $5,000, so Gibson sought to stack the policies and recover under all three policies. However, each policy contained language that medical expenses would be paid only under the policy on the vehicle that was involved in an accident, so State Farm declined to pay more than $5,000. The District Court relied on Lierboe v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 2003 MT 174, 316 M 382, 73 P3d 800 (2003), for the holding that no stacking question exists when coverage is applicable to only one policy and granted State Farm a declaratory judgment on grounds that Gibson could not stack the policies because only the policy on the vehicle involved in the accident applied. Gibson appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. State Farm's policy language violated public policy by allowing State Farm to recover valuable consideration for coverage that was not provided. Public policy favors adequate compensation, even for nonmandatory coverage. The Supreme Court also clarified Lierboe by limiting its analysis to instances in which a claimant seeks to stack coverages from a vehicle that the claimant does not own and from an insurance policy that the claimant did not purchase. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Gibson, 2007 MT 153, 337 M 509, 163 P3d 387 (2007), following Ruckdaschel v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 285 M 395, 948 P2d 700 (1997), and Hardy v. Progressive Specialty Ins. Co., 2003 MT 85, 315 M 107, 67 P3d 892 (2003).

Underinsured Motorist Coverage Applied to Vehicle Rather Than Owner or Operator: Plaintiffs' vehicle was struck by a rental truck driven by an intoxicated driver. Plaintiffs obtained a default judgment against the driver and settled with the truck rental company and then sought benefits from their own insurer under their underinsured motorist policy. The policy provided for payment only after the limits of liability under any applicable bodily injury bonds or policies were exhausted. Thus, application of underinsured coverage was dependent on the available coverage on the vehicle at issue, which, in this case, was the rental truck that was covered by a $7 million bodily injury policy. That amount exceeded plaintiffs' damages, so the rental truck could not be considered underinsured, and plaintiffs were therefore not entitled to remuneration from their insurer. Mecca v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 2005 MT 260, 329 M 73, 122 P3d 1190 (2005), distinguishing Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holeman, 1998 MT 155, 289 M 312, 961 P2d 114 (1998).

Retroactive Applicability of Decision Prohibiting Antistacking of Insurance Provisions to Pending Cases: In Hardy v. Progressive Specialty Ins. Co., 2003 MT 85, 315 M 107, 67 P3d 892 (2003), the Supreme Court decided that antistacking provisions in an underinsured motorist policy were unconstitutional. Plaintiffs brought a class action in federal court claiming that Hardy entitled them to additional payments from past insurance claims that were not previously allowed because their policies did not allow for stacking. The federal court certified the question to the Supreme Court as to whether Hardy applied prospectively only or retroactively to qualified claims arising before the Hardy decision. The Supreme Court agreed with the decision in Harper v. Va. Dept. of Taxation, 509 US 86 (1993), that limiting a rule of law to its prospective application creates an arbitrary distinction between litigants based merely on the timing of their claims and that in the interests of fairness and finality, the line should be drawn between claims that are final and claims that are not. The Supreme Court then decided that the retroactivity test in Chevron Oil Co. v. Huson, 404 US 97 (1971), still applies to Montana civil decisions if all three Chevron factors are met: (1) the decision to be applied nonretroactively must establish a new principle of law, either by overruling clear past precedent on which litigants may have relied or by deciding an issue of first impression whose resolution was not clearly foreshadowed; (2) the court must weigh the merits and demerits in each case by looking at the prior history of the rule in question, its purpose and effect, and whether retroactive application will further or retard its operation; and (3) the inequity imposed by retroactive application has been weighed. However, the retroactive effect of a decision does not apply to cases that became final or that were settled prior to a decision's issuance. Thus, Hardy applies retroactively in qualifying circumstances on open claims arising before its issuance and is limited to cases pending on direct appeal or not yet final. Dempsey v. Allstate Ins. Co., 2004 MT 391, 325 M 207, 104 P3d 483 (2004). See also LaMere v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 2011 MT 272, 362 Mont. 379, 265 P.3d 617, holding that under Dempsey, a settled case is considered final.

No Stacking Question When Coverage Applicable to Only One Policy: Plaintiff contended that she should be allowed to stack the personal medical payment coverage on a vehicle that she was driving with the corporate medical payment coverage on a company vehicle that she was not driving, citing Ruckdaschel v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 285 M 395, 948 P2d 700 (1997). However, the policy on the company vehicle clearly excluded coverage for plaintiff's accident in another vehicle, and the medical payment coverage for plaintiff's vehicle followed only the listed vehicle and not other vehicles. Therefore, because plaintiff's vehicle was covered by only a single policy, there was no second policy to stack, so Ruckdaschel did not apply. Rather, as in Chilberg v. Rose, 273 M 414, 903 P2d 1377 (1995), coverage was excluded under the second policy because plaintiff did not occupy the vehicle covered by that policy, so plaintiff could not have reasonable expectations of coverage under a policy for which she was not qualified as an insured. Lierboe v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 2003 MT 174, 316 M 382, 73 P3d 800 (2003), clarified in St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Gibson, 2007 MT 153, 337 M 509, 163 P3d 387 (2007), to apply to instances in which a claimant seeks to stack coverages from a vehicle that the claimant does not own and from an insurance policy that the claimant did not purchase.

Offset Provision in Underinsured Motorist Policy Violative of State Policy — Antistacking Provisions Unconstitutional: Hardy paid separate premiums for underinsured motorist (UIM) coverage of $50,000 a person and $100,000 an accident for each of three vehicles. Hardy was injured when the vehicle that he was riding in was negligently struck by another car. Hardy recovered $50,000 from the other driver's liability insurer, but that amount was insufficient to cover Hardy's injuries, so Hardy sought compensation pursuant to the UIM coverage on his vehicles. Hardy believed that the policies could be stacked to aggregate $150,000 of UIM coverage. Defendant insurance company denied coverage, and Hardy sued in federal District Court. The insurer raised three arguments in its defense, contending that: (1) the tortfeasor's vehicle was not underinsured, as defined in the policy, because the total liability coverage for the tortfeasor's vehicle was equal to the highest single UIM coverage limit in Hardy's policy; (2) the policy required Hardy's UIM coverage for one vehicle to be offset by all amounts recovered from the tortfeasor; and (3) Hardy's UIM coverages could not be stacked or aggregated for purposes of either comparing limits or affording $150,000 of UIM coverage. The federal District

Court certified the three questions to the Montana Supreme Court, which determined that the UIM definition and offset clause in Hardy's policy violated Hardy's reasonable expectation of coverage when a tortfeasor's insurance provided inadequate indemnity. The policy declarations page suggested coverage in an amount that was actually not available; therefore, the terms of the UIM coverage were ambiguous in violation of Montana public policy and rendered the coverage that the insurer promised to provide illusory. Further, the provisions of this section that allow insurers to charge premiums for nonexistent coverage are not rationally related to the objective of maintaining affordable insurance in Montana and constitute an arbitrary and capricious legislative action that is unconstitutionally violative of due process. A Montanan should reasonably expect coverage up to the aggregate limits of separate policies when a separate premium for UIM coverage was charged for each policy. Antistacking provisions that allow an insurer to receive valuable consideration for coverage that is not provided are against public policy. (See 2007 amendment.) Hardy v. Progressive Specialty Ins. Co., 2003 MT 85, 315 M 107, 67 P3d 892 (2003), followed in Mitchell v. St. Farm Ins. Co., 2003 MT 102, 315 M 281, 68 P3d 703 (2003), and distinguished in Parish v. Morris, 2012 MT 116, 365 Mont. 171, 278 P.3d 1015. The Hardy decision was applied retroactively to open claims arising before its issuance and was limited to cases pending on direct appeal or not yet final in Dempsey v. Allstate Ins. Co., 2004 MT 391, 325 M 207, 104 P3d 483 (2004), which was followed in LaMere v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 2011 MT 272, 362 Mont. 379, 265 P.3d 617, holding that under Dempsey, a settled case is considered final. See also Chaffee v. USF&G Co., 181 M 1, 591 P2d 1102 (1979), and Bennett v. Two Rules of Subrogation — Colorado Subrogation Choice of Law Provision Violative of Montana Public Policy: The Swansons were part-time residents of Montana and Colorado. They paid their automobile insurance premiums through Hartford Insurance Company (Hartford) in Colorado, but were involved in an accident in Montana with a truck owned by USF/Reddaway, incurring over $50,000 in medical expenses. Their policy included: (1) a Colorado statutorily required type of no-fault insurance called personal injury protection, or PIP, under which Hartford was required to pay certain losses and expenses, including medical expenses, lost wages, and rehabilitation expenses; (2) a subrogation clause granting Hartford the right to recover any payments made under PIP in the event that the Swansons recovered damages from the party responsible for the bodily injury; and (3) a choice of law provision providing that any dispute concerning the denial or delay of PIP benefits or subrogation rights would be governed by Colorado law. Hartford paid some claims but denied others, and later learned that USF/Reddaway's insurer intended to pay the Swansons, so Hartford decided to pursue subrogation to recover money that it had paid. The Swansons settled with USF/Reddaway's insurer, but USF/Reddaway's limits of liability exceeded the amount of the settlement. The Swansons eventually sued Hartford for breach of contract and unfair claim settlement. Hartford had the case removed to Montana federal District Court, which certified three questions to the Montana Supreme Court. The Supreme Court cited Skauge v. Mtn. St. Tel. & Tel., 172 M 521, 565 P2d 628 (1977), for the doctrine that an insured must be made whole before an insurer may assert its subrogation rights, which means that not only must the insured recover all losses, but costs of recovery as well, including attorney fees and litigation costs. The 1997 amendments to this section allowed for reasonable subrogation, but did not include a specific "made whole" requirement. Nevertheless, common law and the statute jointly establish two rules of subrogation. First, an insured should not receive duplicate payments for the same element of loss, and second, the insurer may not assert subrogation rights until the insured has been fully compensated for damages, regardless of any contract language to the contrary. The Colorado provision providing a choice of law would allow subrogation before the insured is made whole, and is therefore a violation of Montana public policy. Swanson v. Hartford Ins. Co. of the Midwest, 2002 MT 81, 309 M 269, 46 P3d 584 (2002), following Youngblood v. Am. St. Ins. Co., 262 M 391, 866 P2d 203 (1993). See also DeTienne Associates Ltd. Partnership v. Purchase of Separate, Specific Motor Vehicle Policy Not Considered to Terminate Coverage as After-Acquired Vehicle Under Prior Policy: Prior to purchasing a Ford Escort, Fitzpatrick had a liability policy (policy one) in effect that provided coverage of $500,000 per occurrence, identified three vehicles as insured, and provided similar coverage for any newly acquired car obtained during the policy period, but only until Fitzpatrick asked for insurance on the newly acquired vehicle and paid any required additional premium or within 30 days of purchase, whichever was shorter. After buying the Escort and within the required time, Fitzpatrick requested a separate policy (policy two) for that vehicle, with coverage of $100,000 per occurrence, but was never billed for any additional premium. Both policies were in effect when Christensen was injured while riding in the Escort. The insurer claimed that $100,000 was available under policy two and tendered that amount to pay health care providers and the various claimants. Christensen asked the District Court to conclude that additional coverage was available under the "after-acquired vehicle" provision in policy one, asserting that both policies should be stacked to provide a total of $600,000 of coverage. The District Court relied on Bramlett v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 468 P2d 157 (Kans. 1970), and Beck v. Aetna Cas. & Surety Co., 553 P2d 397 (Colo. 1976), in holding that the purpose of after-acquired vehicle coverage is to provide automatic coverage only until coverage on the new vehicle is obtained, that because a separate, specific policy had been requested, the Escort was not an after-acquired vehicle under policy one, and that therefore coverage should be limited to $100,000. The Supreme Court distinguished Bramlett and Beck because the policy language in those cases was not the same and found the reasoning in Carey v. St. Farm Mut. Ins. Co., 367 F2d 938 (4th Cir. 1966), to be more persuasive. In the present case, the policy did not require Fitzpatrick to elect coverage if more than one policy was applicable, as it did in Bramlett and Beck. Rather, as in Carey, the clear policy language expressly extended coverage to all after-acquired vehicles, provided that notice was timely. Therefore, the District Court erred when it concluded that the purchase of specific coverage under policy two terminated coverage as an after-acquired vehicle under policy one. If other conditions of after-acquired vehicle coverage are met, coverage on the newly acquired vehicle attaches at the time of acquisition and for the policy period unless the insured refuses to pay any additional premium that is requested, which she was not. Further, Fitzpatrick's policy limiting the maximum amount recoverable to the highest applicable limit under any one policy, when more than one company policy applied to the same occurrence, was found to comport with Montana's antistacking provisions in this section. The highest applicable limit in this case was $500,000 under policy one, of which $400,000 remained, and the case was reversed to make the additional money available. Christensen v. Mtn. W. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 2000 MT 378, 303 M 493, 22 P3d 624, 57 St. Rep. 1608 (2000).

Uninsured and Underinsured Motorist Coverage Mutually Exclusive — Stacking of Uninsured Coverage Allowed Under 1991 Version of Statute: Plaintiff insurer issued one policy covering two vehicles owned by the Oies. Separate premiums were paid for each vehicle for uninsured and underinsured motorist endorsements. After an accident involving an uninsured vehicle, the insurer filed a declaratory judgment action in federal court to determine its duties under the policy. The federal court certified certain questions to the Montana Supreme Court to resolve under Montana law. The Supreme Court held that a motorist who carries both uninsured and underinsured motor vehicle coverage has two distinct and mutually exclusive coverages. Since a tortfeasor cannot be both uninsured and underinsured, the injured party cannot invoke both types of coverage. The court distinguished prior cases and further held that the 1991 version of this section, which focused only on vehicles insured rather than the number of premiums paid, did not apply in this case in which the insured had paid separate premiums for uninsured motorist coverage and that an insured who paid separate premiums for uninsured motorist coverage may stack the uninsured motorist coverages available within the policy. (See 1997 amendment.) Dak. Fire Ins. Co. v. Oie, 1998 MT 288, 291 M 486, 968 P2d 1126, 55 St. Rep. 1179 (1998).

Release of Third-Party Tortfeasor Does Not Preclude Recovery of Auto Medical and Underinsured Motorist Benefits — Passenger in Covered Vehicle Is "Insured" — Stacking of Benefits Allowed: The U.S. District Court certified to the Montana Supreme Court the question of whether Holeman's general release of the third-party tortfeasor barred recovery from Farmers under the underinsured motorist provisions of its policy and, if not, whether benefits could be stacked under the policy. The Montana Supreme Court concluded that: (1) an insurer's liability for underinsured motorist benefits arises from the terms of the contract and its contractual relationship with its insured and that reading the policy as a whole, construing ambiguities against the insurer, the release does not bar Holeman from recovering under the underinsured motorist provisions of the Farmers policy; and (2) the reasonable expectations doctrine and overriding public policy mandate that Holeman be permitted to stack the underinsured motorist coverages and auto medical payment coverages under the policy at issue in this case, in which multiple vehicles are insured under one policy and in which a premium is charged for coverage of each motor vehicle listed within the policy. Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holeman, 1998 MT 155, 289 M 312, 961 P2d 114, 55 St. Rep. 601 (1998).

Statutory Changes Not Applied Retroactively: In an earlier referral in the same case, the Montana Supreme Court held that the antistacking provisions of this section, before its amendment in 1997, did not apply to underinsurance and medical payment coverage when a premium was charged for coverage of each vehicle. In a subsequent referral from the U.S. District Court, the Montana Supreme Court refused to retroactively apply the 1997 statutory changes that prohibited all stacking, and the public policy embodied in the changes, and allowed stacking of underinsured and medical payment provisions of one policy covering multiple vehicles. Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holeman, 1998 MT 155, 289 M 312, 961 P2d 114, 55 St. Rep. 601 (1998).

Antistacking Provisions Violate Public Policy — Holding Applicable to Optional Types of Coverage: The plaintiffs sued to obtain medical payments under three policies with the insurer after Tami was injured as a pedestrian. The insurer allowed coverage under only one policy pursuant to an amendatory endorsement to each policy that limited liability under all policies to that of the policy with the highest liability. The District Court granted the plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment as to coverage issues. On appeal, the Supreme Court allowed stacking of medical payment coverage in spite of the endorsement language. The court rejected the insurer's argument that Montana's public policy against antistacking provisions applies only to coverage that insurance companies are required by statute to offer to all customers and not to optional types of coverage, such as medical payment and underinsured motorist coverage. The court held that the absence of a statutory requirement for that type of coverage is irrelevant because the public policy considerations that invalidate contractual antistacking provisions in mandatory insurance coverage also support invalidating those provisions in an optional type of insurance coverage. Ruckdaschel v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 285 M 395, 948 P2d 700, 54 St. Rep. 1210 (1997).

Stacking of Optional Motor Vehicle Coverages Not Allowed — Underinsurance and Medical Payment Coverage Not Included: The U.S. District Court certified to the Montana Supreme Court the question of whether this section prohibits the stacking of underinsured motorist coverage and medical payment coverage available under a policy of motor vehicle liability insurance when a premium is charged for coverage of each motor vehicle listed within the policy. The Supreme Court answered in the negative, noting that this section does not allow stacking unless a liability policy provides otherwise. The antistacking provisions apply to any policy of motor vehicle insurance against liability now or hereafter required under 33-23-201 or Title 61, ch. 6, parts 1 and 3. However, the antistacking provision does not apply to underinsurance and medical payment coverage when a premium is charged for coverage of each motor vehicle listed within the policy because those coverages do not qualify as liability insurance. (See 1997 amendment.) Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holeman, 278 M 274, 924 P2d 1315, 53 St. Rep. 904 (1996), distinguishing Grier v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 248 M 457, 812 P2d 347 (1991). See also Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holeman, 1998 MT 155, 289 M 312, 961 P2d 114, 55 St. Rep. 601 (1998).

Choice of Applicable State Law — Application of Motor Vehicle Insurance Policy Stating Oregon Subrogation Law: Generally, the law of the place where an insurance contract was made governs questions of execution and validity of the contract, while the law of the place of performance controls the legal construction and effect of the contract. In a motor vehicle insurance contract made in Oregon and performed in Montana, a choice of law provision that required application of Oregon subrogation law violated Montana public policy and was unenforceable. Youngblood v. Am. St. Ins. Co., 262 M 391, 866 P2d 203, 50 St. Rep. 1601 (1993).

Subrogation of Medical Payments Under Motor Vehicle Insurance Policy — Against Public Policy: Subrogation is an equitable doctrine that is not dependent on privity or on a contractual relationship between the parties. Its purpose is to prevent injustice by compelling the ultimate payment of a debt by the one who, in justice, equity, and good conscience, should pay it, and it is an appropriate means of preventing unjust enrichment. Subrogation is distinguishable from assignment of a claim. With some exceptions, subrogation between an insurer and an insured up to the amount the insurer actually paid is allowed if the insured has been fully compensated, including compensation for costs and attorney fees. One exception is a motor vehicle insurance medical payments subrogation clause, which violates public policy because the insured paid a premium for medical coverage, the insured is the one likely to suffer most if medical payments received must be repaid out of a third-party recovery, and the tortfeasor's insurer may believe that the injured insured has already been paid medical expenses and that the insurer can thus make a smaller offer on the basis that medical payments have already been made. Youngblood v. Am. St. Ins. Co., 262 M 391, 866 P2d 203, 50 St. Rep. 1601 (1993).

Subrogation Under Motor Vehicle Insurance Policy: "Subrogation" is a term of art, and had the Legislature intended to include it in subsection (2) of this section, the Legislature could easily have done so. The court is not persuaded that subrogation was intended to be in or should be read into the subsection. (See 1997 amendment.) Youngblood v. Am. St. Ins. Co., 262 M 391, 866 P2d 203, 50 St. Rep. 1601 (1993).

Stacking Underinsured Coverage Provided by Separate Policies From the Same Insurer: Bennett was injured in a pedestrian crosswalk when struck by a vehicle driven by Wind. Wind's insurance was not sufficient to cover Bennett's damages, which were alleged to be in excess of $200,000. Bennett argued that she was entitled to stack the underinsured coverage in a State Farm policy issued to her that insured one vehicle and the underinsured coverage in a State Farm policy issued to her husband. State Farm resisted on the basis that the statute allowing stacking specifically referred to uninsured coverage and therefore public policy limited stacking to uninsured coverage, which an insurer was required to offer to customers in Montana. The Supreme Court held that the absence of a statutory requirement was irrelevant. The policy language makes underinsured coverage personal to the insured and does not depend on the insured occupying an insured vehicle, thus the insured is entitled to reasonably expect to recover damages up to the limit of both policies and to exclude stacking would violate Montana's public policy. (See 1997 amendment.) Bennett v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 261 M 386, 862 P2d 1146, 50 St. Rep. 1371 (1993), followed in Ruckdaschel v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 285 M 395, 948 P2d 700, 54 St. Rep. 1210 (1997), and Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holeman, 1998 MT 155, 289 M 312, 961 P2d 114, 55 St. Rep. 601 (1998), and distinguished in Chilberg v. Rose, 273 M 414, 903 P2d 1377, 52 St. Rep. 1038 (1995). Chilberg was distinguished in Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holeman, 1998 MT 155, 289 M 312, 961 P2d 114, 55 St. Rep. 601 (1998).

Insurer's Liability Not Subject to Canadian Tort Law: The plaintiff, relying on the policy's underinsurance clause, sought reimbursement from the insurer for injuries suffered in an automobile accident in Canada. The insurer argued that it was only liable for those damages allowed under the restrictive Canadian tort laws. The Supreme Court held that those damages that the plaintiff could not obtain reimbursement for under Canadian law could be recovered under the underinsurance clause because the policy was governed by the contract laws of the place where it was created and not by tort law. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Estate of Braun, 243 M 125, 793 P2d 253, 47 St. Rep. 1043 (1990), followed in Wellcome v. Home Ins. Co., 257 M 354, 849 P2d 190, 50 St. Rep. 305 (1993).

Insurers of Uninsured Motorist Not Treated as Joint Tortfeasors for Purposes of Liability: When accident and injury are caused by uninsured motorist, insurance companies providing uninsured motorist coverage to parties involved cannot be held jointly and severally liable because an insurer's relationship to the uninsured motorist is based on contract, not tort. Guiberson v. Hartford Cas. Ins. Co., 217 M 279, 704 P2d 68, 42 St. Rep. 1196 (1985). See also St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 223 M 215, 725 P2d 821, 43 St. Rep. 1667 (1986), and Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holeman, 1998 MT 155, 289 M 312, 961 P2d 114, 55 St. Rep. 601 (1998).

Primary Insurance Company Solely Responsible for Liability: While making a delivery for his employer, Roach and Smith Distributors, Guiberson parked a delivery truck outside the Warm Springs store, leaving the keys in the ignition. Tintinger, a patient at Warm Springs state hospital, and another patient got in the truck and began to drive it away. Guiberson jumped in the truck and unsuccessfully attempted to persuade Tintinger to stop the truck. Eventually the truck overturned and Guiberson was injured. Guiberson sued Hartford Casualty Insurance, his personal insurer, under an uninsured motorist provision. Hartford joined, as third-party defendants, State Farm, Roach and Smith Distributors' insurer, and the state of Montana. State Farm's policy also contained uninsured motorist coverage. The jury returned a verdict in favor of Guiberson for $600,000, finding Tintinger and the state equally responsible for Guiberson's injuries. Based on the insurance policies, the court apportioned Tintinger's portion of the judgment between Hartford and State Farm. The Supreme Court reversed, ruling that the insurance policies indicated that Hartford contracted to be an excess insurer only, that State Farm was a primary insurer, and that under a "stacking" approach (now abolished, 33-23-203) State Farm's insurance adequately covered Tintinger's liability. Section Not Retroactive: This section is not retroactive. Guiberson v. Hartford Cas. Ins. Co., 217 M 279, 704 P2d 68, 42 St. Rep. 1196 (1985). See also St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 223 M 215, 725 P2d 821, 43 St. Rep. 1667 (1986).

Motor Vehicle Liability Insurance — Implied Consent Construed: Plaintiff owned and insured a fleet of vehicles. One of the vehicles was used primarily by the wife and son of plaintiff's president. The president's son and a school friend, McArthur, had an understanding that allowed McArthur to use the car. In the early morning hours of March 23, 1980, the son and a friend went to a truckstop for breakfast. McArthur and another friend stayed in the car to play the radio. A police officer investigated the youths in the car for a possible curfew violation. McArthur, not wanting to receive a citation, decided to leave in the car. While McArthur was backing out, the officer grabbed the car in an attempt to stop it. The officer became caught on the car, and McArthur unwittingly drove over him while leaving the lot. At trial the jury found that McArthur was using the car with the son's implied permission and that plaintiff's insurance covered the incident. Defendant appealed, contending that implied consent to use the car did not exist as the son had told McArthur not to leave. The court found that a complete and unreasonable departure from intended use or an intentionally dangerous and wrongful operation could support a ruling that the use was outside the scope of permitted use. However, under the facts of this case, there was no absolute revocation of consent. The jury could find that the intervening circumstances required immediate action rendering the temporary prohibition on use inapplicable. Coverage was extended to McArthur. Mtn. W. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Farmers Ins. Exch. Co., 209 M 467, 680 P2d 330, 41 St. Rep. 829 (1984).

Family Exclusion Clause Void: A parent is not immune from a negligence action brought against him by a child under the age of emancipation injured in the operation of a motor vehicle. Therefore, a family exclusion clause in an automobile insurance policy obtained under the mandatory liability insurance law is void and unenforceable because 61-6-301 requires motorists to carry insurance against loss resulting from liability imposed by law for injury suffered by any person. If the policy had been certified under the Motor Vehicle Safety-Responsibility Act, the exclusion clause would have been invalid because liability under that act is "absolute". Transamerica Ins. Co. v. Royle, 202 M 173, 656 P2d 820, 40 St. Rep. 12 (1983), contrasted in Stutzman v. Safeco Ins. Co. of America, 284 M 372, 945 P2d 32, 54 St. Rep. 925 (1997).

Responsibility for Coverage: When two insurers have each obligated themselves to provide primary coverage, the coverage should be prorated between them in accordance with the limits of liability applicable in each policy. Truck Ins. Exch. v. Transport Indem. Co., 180 M 419, 591 P2d 188 (1979).

Right of Subrogation: There is no right of subrogation in favor of an insurance company against its own insured. This is true both as to the named insured and any party to whom coverage is extended under the terms of the policy. Truck Ins. Exch. v. Transport Indem. Co., 180 M 419, 591 P2d 188 (1979).

Punitive Damages for Intentional Act — Auto Insurance: Where the owner of a car, arriving on the scene of an accident involving his car driven by another with his permission, intentionally tampered with physical evidence at the scene and was thereafter found liable for punitive damages by a state court, but neither he nor the driver were liable for actual damages, under the policy in question the insurance company was not liable for either the punitive damages or attorney's fees. Lee v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 39 St. Rep. 1761 (D.C. Mont. 1982) (apparently not reported in Federal Supplement).

Case Notes

Antistacking Statutes Applicable to Specific Types of Coverage — Section Interpreted: In interpreting this section, the Supreme Court clarified three points regarding the statute: (1) it is directed at insurance against liability; (2) it is directed at insurance coverage that is required by law; and (3) it is concerned with liability insurance that is not only required but that is required by both parts 1 and 3 of Title 61, ch. 6. There are only three variations of coverage that meet these criteria, and those coverages are the per person, per vehicle, and property damage coverages. Underinsurance coverage and medical payment coverage do not qualify as insurance against liability but rather are excess or additional coverage designed to protect the first party insured; therefore, the prohibition against stacking in 33-23-203 (see 1997 amendment) does not apply to underinsurance and medical payment coverage. Case Notes

Written Notice to Insured to Pay Renewal Premium — Failure to Timely Pay — No Coverage for Subsequent Accident: The plaintiff sued the defendant insurance company for failing to provide him coverage for an automobile accident. The defendant argued that the plaintiff had not timely paid his renewal premium and therefore was not covered at the time of the accident. The District Court determined that the defendant had sent the plaintiff clear written notice of its intent to cancel the policy if the premium was not received by a certain date and that the plaintiff had not paid the premium by that date. On that basis, the District Court granted summary judgment in favor of the defendant. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, ruling that the defendant properly canceled the policy prior to the accident based on the plaintiff's failure to pay the renewal premium in time. Finn v. Dakota Fire Ins. Co., 2015 MT 253, 380 Mont. 481, 356 P.3d 13.

PROPERTY INSURANCE

Chapter Case Notes

Cost of Asbestos Removal Covered in Policy — Narrow Construction of Policy Exclusions: A "code exclusion" clause in a policy issued on a commercial building relieved insurer of any obligation to pay additional costs for the removal of debris from a fire-damaged building when the cost of removal was increased because of regulatory restrictions. Insurer claimed exemption when the cost of removal was increased because the debris contained asbestos, a substance subject to legal regulation. However, coverage exclusions are contrary to the fundamental protective purpose of an insurance policy and are therefore subject to a rule of narrow construction. Noting that the policy as drafted affirmatively extended coverage for debris removal and that the asbestos in question was considered debris as a result of fire damage, the Supreme Court held that insurer was liable contractually and that the exclusion was inapplicable. Farmers Union Mut. Ins. Co. v. Oakland, 251 M 352, 825 P2d 554, 49 St. Rep. 72 (1992), following Garnett v. Transamerica Ins. Serv., 800 P2d 656 (Idaho 1990).

Hearing Aid Protection Plan Considered Insurance: A hearing aid protection plan that provided for loss against physical damage to the hearing aid caused by external sources, such as theft, fire, accidental breakage, water, auto accident, and mysterious disappearance, and that specifically stated that it was separate and distinct from the factory warranty and did not cover repair service normally covered by the factory warranty was considered insurance within the meaning of Montana law. Ward v. Vibrasonic Laboratories, Inc., 236 M 314, 769 P2d 1229, 46 St. Rep. 387 (1989).

"Business Pursuit" — Definition: Montana has not adopted criteria for determining what is a business pursuit for purposes of an insurance policy clause excluding a business pursuit from coverage. The presence of a profit motive (not actual profit) is one characteristic of a business pursuit, and continually or regularly conducted activity may be a business pursuit even though it is not the primary occupation of the insured. In this case, insured's testimony that he had income and expenses relating to the pursuit and claimed them on his tax returns established a profit motive. Heggen v. Mtn. W. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 220 M 398, 715 P2d 1060, 43 St. Rep. 475 (1986).

Business Pursuits — Steer-Roping Contest: Insured's policy on his ranch excluded business pursuits other than, among other things, farming. For 3 years he held three or four steer-roping contests a year in an arena he built. Nonprofessionals paid a fee and there was prize money, with insured keeping some of the fee money. Insured's own testimony showed he was regularly engaged in the contests for profit and thus was engaged in a business pursuit excluded from policy coverage. A summary judgment for insurer was therefore proper in insured's suit for failure to defend insured and pay an injured steer roper because there was no issue of material fact. Heggen v. Mtn. W. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 220 M 398, 715 P2d 1060, 43 St. Rep. 475 (1986).

General Provisions

33-24-101. Measure of the indemnity — rescission for fraud.

Case Notes

Property Insurance Not Intended to Give Insured Windfall — Actual Cash Value Used for Property Slated for Demolition: An insurer and an insured disputed whether an insurance policy should cover actual cash value or replacement costs for a building that was damaged by a fire. The District Court allowed replacement costs, even though portions of the building were slated for demolition prior to the fire. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the District Court and held that the insured should not receive replacement costs for the portion of the building that was slated for demolition, reasoning that replacement cost would give the insured far more than it had contemplated under the policy. Lincoln County Port Authority v. Allianz Global Risks US Ins. Co., 2013 MT 365, 373 Mont. 60, 315 P.3d 934.

Reliance by Insurer on Lesser Estimate of Repair Costs in Absence of Witnesses: Testimony relating to replacement value of a burned horse arena valued the property at $135,000 to $182,600. Witnesses for the insurer testified that they had obtained repair estimates for $25,000 to $98,000; however, none of the persons making the repair estimates were present at trial, and the insurer presented no witnesses to testify as to the value of the fire damage. On appeal, the Supreme Court found no basis in the record for the jury or court to determine whether the insurer was justified in relying on lesser estimates of cost of repair than the stated value in the policy because no witnesses testified to justify the lesser estimates. Britton v. Farmers Ins. Group, 221 M 67, 721 P2d 303, 43 St. Rep. 641 (1986).

Deterioration Deduction: Where policy contained no valuation but insurer agreed to indemnify insured by either restoring the part destroyed to the condition it was in before the fire or paying insured a sum equal to cost of restoration, insured was entitled to judgment for the amount found by the appraisers as the cost of repairing the building and deduction from such amount for deterioration was unwarranted, under the facts presented. McIntosh v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 106 M 434, 78 P2d 82 (1938).

Judicial Review of Award: Courts should never interfere with an award in a fire insurance case except to prevent a manifest injustice or set it aside unless made without authority or the result of fraud, mistake, or of misfeasance or malfeasance of the appraisers, and where questioned, courts may consider the method by which the appraisers reached their decision even though the award may be fair on its face. McIntosh v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 106 M 434, 78 P2d 82 (1938).

Section Read Into Policy: Section 40-904, R.C.M. 1947 (predecessor to this section, since repealed), as to measure of indemnity was as much a part of the policy as though written into it. McIntosh v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 106 M 434, 78 P2d 82 (1938).

Measure of Indemnity: Indemnity is the basis or foundation of fire insurance law; unless there is a valuation given in the policy, the measure of indemnity is the expense, at the time the loss is payable, of replacing the thing insured or destroyed, in the condition in which it was at the time of the fire, not in excess of the amount specified in the policy. Lee v. Providence Wash. Ins. Co., 82 M 264, 266 P 640 (1928).

33-24-102. Insuring improvements — insurance equal to true value.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "against loss or damage and the property insured is considered to be a total loss" for "against loss by fire, tornado, or lightning and the property insured shall be wholly destroyed" in the first sentence.

Case Notes

"Other Insurance" Clause Upheld to Deny Unjust Enrichment: Summers purchased a homeowner's policy from American and 2 years later purchased an additional policy from National without canceling his first policy. The home was subsequently burned, and Summers filed a claim with American. When American learned of the policy with National, National filed an interpleader action with the District Court and deposited its policy limit of $77,000, to which both American and Summers claimed entitlement. The American policy contained explicit language that the policy terminated upon the purchase of the subsequent policy by Summers. Relying on the public policy enunciated in automobile insurance stacking cases, Summers argued that the "other insurance" clause in American's policy was void as a matter of public policy. See Bennett v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 261 M 386, 862 P2d 1146 (1993). The Supreme Court disagreed, holding that stacking automobile policies was allowed in order to ensure that victims receive adequate compensation but that in the case before it, Summers could not demonstrate that the compensation received from National did not fully cover his loss and therefore American did not have to pay the homeowner a second time for the loss and was only liable to Summers for the premiums collected after Summers obtained the National policy. The Supreme Court also disagreed with Summer's claim that pursuant to this section, the actual value of the property could not be ascertained and therefore the coverage of both policies should be taken as conclusively showing the value of the property. The Supreme Court stated that because it had already found that American's policy terminated automatically under the "other insurance" clause, when Summers purchased the second policy, this section was inapplicable. Nat'l. Cas. Co. v. Am. Bankers Ins. Co. of Fla., 2001 MT 28, 304 M 163, 19 P3d 223, (2001).

When Entire Amount of Policy Payable Despite Insurable Interest Clause: In order to protect their interest in the legal title to the property as security for the purchase price, Musselmans maintained an insurance policy on a house after selling it. The insurance policy purported to limit the Musselmans to their insurable interest stated in the contract for sale. However, the terms of the policy did not necessarily limit Musselmans to the unpaid balance of the contract. Rather, because Musselmans informed the insurance agent about the contract for sale, because the insurer's risk was not increased, and because premiums were not adjusted after the transaction, the insurer was required to pay the full amount stated under the policy. Musselman v. Mtn. W. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 251 M 262, 824 P2d 271, 49 St. Rep. 50 (1992), citing Wilson v. Fireman's Ins. Co., 269 NW 2d 170 (Mich. 1978).

Applicability of Valued Policy Statute: This section determines automatically and conclusively the amount of loss recoverable for total loss and may obviate even the necessity of a proof of loss. An insurer may not create a question of total loss simply to compromise its duty to pay the full amount or to negotiate a lesser amount. The statutory duty to pay the full amount of applicable coverage in valued policies applies as well to a mortgagee under a loss payable clause to the extent of the mortgagee's lien. In this case, the court held that the insurer did not comply with 33-24-102, particularly with regard to the mortgagee bank, which was entitled to payment regardless of any claim of arson against the insured. Therefore, when an insurer faces a claim under its policy for damages to an improvement on real property, the freedom of the insurer to evaluate the claim and determine its merit does not include the amount payable if the cost of the damages exceeds the value of the improvement. In that event, the loss is total and this section applies. The insurer retains the freedom, however, to reasonably determine if the loss has merit as a claim. Britton v. Farmers Ins. Group, 221 M 67, 721 P2d 303, 43 St. Rep. 641 (1986).

Evidence of Nonprosecution for Arson in Applying Valued Policy Statute: An insurer objected to closing arguments on the ground that evidence of nonprosecution for arson in cases for insurance proceeds was not admissible. The issue arose because of the provision in 33-24-102 which provides that the valued policy law applies without criminal fault on the part of the insured. The Supreme Court held that it was pertinent to the insured's case that the jury, in considering whether 33-24-102 was applicable, should also have known whether the insured was without criminal fault; otherwise, under its terms, the statute would not apply. Britton v. Farmers Ins. Group, 221 M 67, 721 P2d 303, 43 St. Rep. 641 (1986).

Standard of Lawful Basis for Refusal to Decline Payment of Claim — Standard Not Met by Reliance on Inadmissible Evidence: An insurer must meet the standard of a lawful basis for refusal to decline payment of an insured's claim for an insured's loss. Reliance by the insurer on inadmissible evidence of arson by the insured in declining payment of an insured's loss does not meet the standard of a lawful basis for refusal of the insured's claim. Britton v. Farmers Ins. Group, 221 M 67, 721 P2d 303, 43 St. Rep. 641 (1986).

Mobile Home on Foundation — Improvements on Real Property:

A trailer house set up for occupancy and connected to a cesspool, a light plant, and oil and propane tanks was an improvement on real property within the meaning of this section. Staggers v. USF&G Co., 159 M 254, 496 P2d 1161 (1972).

Mobile home that rested on permanent foundation with its wheels removed, had two additional rooms bolted to it, and was connected with sewerline was an "improvement on real property" as used in this section. Meccage v. Spartan Ins. Co., 156 M 135, 477 P2d 115 (1970).

Future Improvements — Not a Valued Policy: When both parties to a fire insurance policy intend that policy cover property plus added value of work on building to be done subsequently, the policy is "open" or "unvalued", not "valued". Century Corp. v. Phoenix of Hartford, 157 M 16, 482 P2d 1020 (1971).

Partial Payment — Acceptance Not Satisfaction of Valued Amount: Where valued policy fixed valuation of mobile home at $3,000, insured who signed proof of loss calling for payment of $1,500 by the insurer and subsequently accepted check in that amount was not barred from claiming additional $1,500 since claim was a liquidated demand that was not settled by partial payment. Meccage v. Spartan Ins. Co., 156 M 135, 477 P2d 115 (1970).

Total Loss — Destruction of Character of Property: Mobile home was wholly destroyed under this section even though some articles were salvaged and frame could be used as farm or ranch trailer, since mobile home's identity and specific character were lost. Meccage v. Spartan Ins. Co., 156 M 135, 477 P2d 115 (1970).

33-24-103. Specific valuation — loss equal to insured value.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 469 in (2) at end after "offsets" inserted "except for the selected deductible in the policy"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

1981 Amendment: Inserted "total" before "loss" in (2); deleted subsection (3) relating to the procedure for varying computations of loss.

Case Notes

When Entire Amount of Policy Payable Despite Insurable Interest Clause: In order to protect their interest in the legal title to the property as security for the purchase price, Musselmans maintained an insurance policy on a house after selling it. The insurance policy purported to limit the Musselmans to their insurable interest stated in the contract for sale. However, the terms of the policy did not necessarily limit Musselmans to the unpaid balance of the contract. Alternate Methods of Computation of Loss: Although the catchphrase for a policy clause entitled "basis of loss adjustment" is in large type, when words in the body of the clause describing the actual method of computation of loss are in the smallest type appearing in the policy, those descriptive words are not set forth in a type of "prominent size" within the meaning of this section. Nelson v. Ins. Co. of N. Am., 36 St. Rep. 249 (D.C. Mont. 1979) (apparently not reported in Federal Supplement).

"Valued" Policy: When the specific value of an item was stated in the insurance certificate under the column "amount of insurance" and the premium was calculated on the basis of specific value, there may be no deductions or offsets allowed on the amount of recovery and the policy is a "valued" policy under subsection (1). Nelson v. Ins. Co. of N. Am., 36 St. Rep. 249 (D.C. Mont. 1979) (apparently not reported in Federal Supplement).

Chapter Case Notes

Liability for Issuance of Conflicting Title Insurance Policies — Due Diligence Standard Applicable to Title Examination Resulting in Loss: Based on information in Realty Title

Company's (Realty's) own records and abstract plant, a reasonably diligent inquiry would have disclosed that a survey had been completed and filed of record for purposes of defining the tract of land covered by the Turks' policy. When Realty later insured Weibert for the same tract, it violated the rule in Lipinski v. Title Ins. Co., 202 M 1, 655 P2d 970, 39 St. Rep. 2283 (1982). Realty's own record and abstract plant put it on sufficient notice of a possible defect in Weibert's title, and Realty was therefore obligated to inquire further prior to issuing a title insurance policy insuring the same tract. Failing twice to do so, Realty breached the obligation under the agency contract to exercise due diligence in the title examination and was liable for the subsequent loss. Old Republic Nat'l Title Ins. Co. v. Realty Title Co., 1999 MT 69, 294 M 6, 978 P2d 956, 56 St. Rep. 286 (1999).

Reimbursement by Title Insurance Company on Property Redeemed — Buyer Not Entitled to Purchase Price From Seller — Subrogation: A buyer received payment equivalent to the purchase price from a title insurance company pursuant to a policy held by the seller. He later sought to recover the purchase price from the seller after the title was redeemed by the original owners. The lower court applied the principle of subrogation in determining that the claim of the buyer was subrogated to the title insurance company, and that since the buyer had been compensated, it would not be just to permit him to pursue the seller for the purchase price. McDonald v. Grassle, 228 M 25, 740 P2d 1122, 44 St. Rep. 1312 (1987).

Expert Testimony Required for Title Insurance Company Standard of Care: In 1975, plaintiff negotiated to sell his property and a commitment for title insurance was ordered from defendant. The defendant issued a title commitment, but it contained no reference to a quiet title action or decree whereby plaintiff and his father had determined separate ownership of various parcels. In 1977, a judgment against plaintiff's father was entered and a Writ of Execution was levied on the father's and plaintiff's property. Plaintiff then brought an action to amend the judgment in the quiet title action nunc pro tunc to reflect the separate ownership. Plaintiff then brought this action to recover costs of the nunc pro tunc action. Plaintiff presented no expert testimony as to the standard of care of a title insurance company. Defendant appealed from an adverse judgment, contending the absence of expert testimony failed to establish a prima facie case of negligence. The Supreme Court, relying on Prosser, Law of Torts, 4th Ed. (1971), and Hill v. Squibb & Sons, 181 M 199, 592 P2d 1383 (1979), held that title examination is complex and intricate and beyond the common understanding of lay persons. Plaintiff must produce expert testimony to establish the standard of care required of a title insurance company. Without such testimony a prima facie case of negligence was not established. Doble v. Lincoln County Title Co., 215 M 1, 692 P2d 1267, 42 St. Rep. 128 (1985), distinguished in Old Republic Nat'l Title Ins. Co. v. Realty Title Co., 1999 MT 69, 294 M 6, 978 P2d 956, 56 St. Rep. 286 (1999).

Title Commitment — Nature: A title commitment is in a somewhat different category than a title insurance policy. Ordinarily a commitment is ordered by the seller for the purpose of exhibiting it to the buyer as a representation of the quality of the title seller expects to sell to the buyer. A title commitment naturally contemplates a search by the title insurer of the chain of title, an opinion by an expert of what the search reveals, a guaranty that the search was accurate, and that the title commitment expresses the quality of the title of the seller as shown by the record. The person who seeks a title insurance commitment expects to obtain a professional title search, as well as a professional legal opinion as to the condition of the title and a guaranty that the title expressed in the commitment will be insured to the extent of the policy coverage. A title commitment does not propose that the title company will insure the property but rather that the title company will insure the title. The title insurer does not agree to clear the title, but rather by its commitment, the title company agrees to afford coverage in a title policy later to be issued insuring the title according to its commitment. Malinak v. Safeco Title Ins. Co. of Idaho, 203 M 69, 661 P2d 12, 40 St. Rep. 301 (1983).

Title Commitment — Insurer's Duty: Title insurers contended they were absolved from liability to seller by virtue of the following clause contained in a title insurance commitment issued seller: "This Commitment is further conditioned by the conditions and stipulations and exclusions from coverage of the basic form of the policy or policies committed to be insured. The examination of the public records made by Company as to the land set out in schedule A was made wholly for determining the insurability of the title to said land and not for reporting on the condition of the record." The foregoing condition of the title commitment is, to say the least, ambiguous. It would be difficult for a trained lawyer, not to speak of a layman, to distinguish the difference between the "insurability of the title" after examination of the public records and the "condition of the record". But we do not rely on the possible ambiguity in the clause to determine this issue. It is within the expectations of the parties that the title commitment will accurately reflect the insurability of the title, or the condition of the public record, as the case may be, with respect to that title. We find a duty on the part of the title insurer when it issues a title commitment that later forms the basis for a title insurance policy, particularly where the seller relies on the title commitment, to base its title commitment and report upon a reasonably diligent title search of the public records. A breach of that duty would constitute negligence. Malinak v. Safeco Title Ins. Co. of Idaho, 203 M 69, 661 P2d 12, 40 St. Rep. 301 (1983).

Insurer's Liability — Effect of Insured's Knowledge of Defects: Seller's possible knowledge of defects in his title was not pertinent at the summary judgment motion stage of his suit against his title insurer in which he claimed negligence and breach of warranty in carrying out a title search. Barring fraud on his part or possible comparative negligence in conveying title when a reasonably prudent person might not do so, his knowledge of the status of his title was irrelevant with respect to the liability of the title insurer. Malinak v. Safeco Title Ins. Co. of Idaho, 203 M 69, 661 P2d 12, 40 St. Rep. 301 (1983).

Lay Insured's Knowledge of Easements — Effect: Although insured under title insurance policy had actual knowledge of the existence of irrigation ditches on his land, as a layman with no special knowledge of easements, he was entitled to reasonably rely on the specialized knowledge of the insurers to reveal and explain any title defects and their consequences, including irrigation ditch rights and easements. Insured's actual knowledge was not a defense to his action against insurers for damages for failure to disclose irrigation ditch rights and easements. Lipinski v. Title Ins. Co., 202 M 1, 655 P2d 970, 39 St. Rep. 2283 (1982).

Water Rights Exclusion From Coverage — Application to Irrigation and Ditch Rights: Title insurance policy exclusion of water rights did not apply to irrigation ditch rights and easements. Lipinski v. Title Ins. Co., 202 M 1, 655 P2d 970, 39 St. Rep. 2283 (1982).

Liability for Failure to Defend Suit Against Insured: Adjoining landowner sued insured for interference with his easement rights, title insurance companies refused to defend, insured hired his own counsel, the suit was settled, and adjoining landowner again sued insured when insured refused to abide by the settlement. The insurers again refused to defend. The policy obligated insurers to defend any litigation founded upon a defect, lien, encumbrance, or other matter insured against. Insurers had failed to disclose and insure against the easements, though they were contained in the title records. The insurers acted in bad faith in refusing to defend the first suit but not in refusing to defend the second suit, since it arose from insureds' refusal to abide by the settlement in the first suit. Insurers were liable to insured for his costs in defending the first suit, and punitive damages could be imposed for failure to defend. Lipinski v. Title Ins. Co., 202 M 1, 655 P2d 970, 39 St. Rep. 2283 (1982).

Coverage — Errors in Title Examination: Risks usually covered by title insurance policies include errors in the title examination, including the negligent failure to note a title defect. A title insurance company owes its clients the duty of conducting a title search with reasonable care. Thus a warranty deed in the chain of title of insured under title insurance policy which recited that the grant was "subject to rights established by irrigation ditch" put insurers sufficiently on notice, and a duty arose to further determine the nature of the rights. The rights should have been brought to insured's attention and either insured against or excluded from the coverage. Lipinski v. Title Ins. Co., 202 M 1, 655 P2d 970, 39 St. Rep. 2283 (1982). The Lipinski rule, requiring due diligence in title examination, was applied in Old Republic Nat'l Title Ins. Co. v. Realty Title Co., 1999 MT 69, 294 M 6, 978 P2d 956, 56 St. Rep. 286 (1999).

Unilateral Material Alteration of Contract: After issuance of title insurance policy, insured signed and returned to insurers an agreement that "the second parties [the title companies] shall not be liable for any claim or claims brought directly by first party [insured] as a result of the presence of either of the two ditches on his lands, which ditches were the subject of the above referred to lawsuit", which was a suit relating to ditch rights and easements that had been settled. The insurers had failed to disclose the existence of the ditch rights and easements. Before signing the agreement, the companies inserted "see insert below" and inserted "except that the payment hereunder by [the title companies] shall be deemed to be in full compensation for any reduction in the value of the insured property of [the insured] caused by the existence of the two ditches". In insured's suit against the companies for failure to defend suits against him by the owner of ditch rights and easements, the companies could not use the altered agreement to avoid paying damages caused by their failure to discover and disclose the ditch rights and easements. It was a material alteration which insured had not agreed to. Lipinski v. Title Ins. Co., 202 M 1, 655 P2d 970, 39 St. Rep. 2283 (1982).

Insurers' Failure to Disclose Easements — Insured's Pecuniary Loss — Damages: Landowner suffered a substantial pecuniary loss when his title insurers failed to inform him of ditch rights and easements that landowner had to pay $46,000 to purchase in order to remove the defects to his title. The $46,000 was the measure of damages where title insurance companies were liable to landowner up to the face amount ($25,000) of the title insurance policy for failure to discover and disclose or insure against the existence of the easements, and landowner was properly awarded his damages up to the face amount of the policy, minus $2,500 the companies had paid in a settlement of part of the easement rights. Lipinski v. Title Ins. Co., 202 M 1, 655 P2d 970, 39 St. Rep. 2283 (1982). The Lipinski rule, requiring due diligence in title examination, was applied in Old Republic Nat'l Title Ins. Co. v. Realty Title Co., 1999 MT 69, 294 M 6, 978 P2d 956, 56 St. Rep. 286 (1999).

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Title Insurance Insufficient to Satisfy Certificate of Title Requirement: A title insurance policy does not satisfy the certificate of title requirement of 76-3-612. The purpose of the certificate of title requirement is to inform the governing body of the status of the title. Title insurance is inadequate for this purpose since it does not purport to detail the status of the title but merely constitutes an agreement to defend title if defects should be alleged in the future. 38 A.G. Op. 48 (1979).

Case Notes

Bank Not Organized as Corporate Surety Company: Talcott Construction brought an action to foreclose on its construction lien on certain condominiums. Mountain Bank filed an irrevocable letter of credit with the District Court on behalf of the defendant, P&D Land Enterprises, 10 days after the action was initiated, and the court entered an order dissolving Talcott's lien. Talcott argued that the lower court erred in finding that the bank met the statutory definition of a corporate surety company. The Supreme Court found that based on the purpose clause of the bank's articles of incorporation, it had been organized to conduct the business of banking and not for making, guaranteeing, or becoming a surety upon bonds. James Talcott Constr., Inc. v. P&D Land Enterprises, 261 M 260, 862 P2d 395, 50 St. Rep. 1313 (1993).

Applicability to Licensed Insurance Business That Issues Suretyship Contract: A business entity licensed under Montana law to transact the business of insurance, which issues as part of its business a contract of suretyship guaranteeing the performance of an underlying contract in Montana, is transacting a class of insurance business under Montana law and is subject to statutes regarding unfair claims settlement practices as set out in Title 33, ch. 18, part 2. The entity is liable in a tort action for violations of 33-18-201 for damages beyond the express terms of the suretyship contract. K-W Indus. v. Nat'l Surety Corp., 231 M 461, 754 P2d 502, 45 St. Rep. 762 (1988).

Insolvent Surety: A surety company that is insolvent can execute an undertaking on appeal in the absence of an action for making up deficiency in its assets. The failure of a surety to an undertaking to justify on exceptions to his sufficiency, or even his insolvency, furnishes no ground for the dismissal of the appeal. King v. Pony Gold Min. Co., 24 M 470, 62 P 783 (1900).

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 564, L. 1987, provided: "WHEREAS, the current crisis in the liability insurance industry has made it increasingly difficult, and often prohibitively expensive, for many small businesses in Montana to obtain comprehensive and adequate liability insurance; and

WHEREAS, some small businesses have found it impossible, in the current insurance market, to obtain coverage for their major areas of risk, particularly in connection with product liability and extra hazardous risks; and

WHEREAS, many small businesses have had no choice but to purchase inadequate insurance or to go without insurance and, therefore have indiscriminately exposed themselves and all of their business assets to liability; and

WHEREAS, the general public would benefit from a system that would assure that money or assets are available to answer any justifiable claims made against small businesses in Montana; and

WHEREAS, the general public would benefit from a system that would encourage each small business within the State of Montana to minimize its exposure to liability claims."

CHAPTER 30
HEALTH SERVICE CORPORATIONS

Chapter Compiler's Comments

Not Codified: Section 40-5923, R.C.M. 1947, providing a 1-year grace period, was not codified in the MCA as temporary. This clause has not been repealed and is still valid law. Citation may be made to sec. 23, Ch. 319, L. 1975.

Part 1
General Provisions

33-30-101. Definitions.

Compiler's Comments

1991 Amendment: In definition of health services inserted reference to licensed acupuncturist services.

Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 362, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies to disability insurance policies issued or renewed and to health service corporations organized or operating in this state on or after October 1, 1991."

1987 Amendment: In (2) inserted "licensed professional counselor" in list of health service providers.

1983 Amendment: In (2), after "nursing services" inserted "licensed social worker or psychologist".

Not Codified: Section 40-5901(4), R.C.M. 1947, defining "commissioner" was not recodified in the MCA because it was redundant with same definition at 33-1-202. This clause has not been repealed and is still valid law. Citation may be made to sec. 1, Ch. 319, L. 1975. See 1-2-208, stating that amendment to codified provision is given effect over uncodified provision.

Attorney General's Opinions

Health Service Corporations Versus Insurance Companies: In a pre-1987 amendment decision, the Attorney General held that Blue Cross and Blue Shield were nonprofit corporations pursuant to section 15-1401, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed), and its successor provisions and operated nonprofit plans as set forth in 33-30-101. Therefore, they were not health insurance corporations under the Montana Insurance Code but rather were a special legislative creation, health service corporations, exempt from the Insurance Code. 37 A.G. Op. 151 (1978).

1987 Amendment: Inserted (7) requiring payment for examinations. Amendment effective January 1, 1988.

1981 Amendment: Inserted (2) requiring an examination every 4 years.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 385 (Ch. 452, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for House Bill 385 to explain the purpose of the legislature in approving the increase in the fee for filing of annual report by health service corporations. This bill raises the fee for each individual or family unit covered, from 20 cents to 50 cents, to finance the performance audits required on each health service corporation at least once every 4 years and to carry out other duties imposed on the Insurance Department. The Insurance Department estimates it will require one additional FTE plus a necessary appropriation to cover additional related costs such as actuarial fees, travel expenses, office space, benefits and office equipment for the FTE. The intention of the legislature is to collect the increase in the fee only if the additional FTE and appropriation are authorized."

1989 Amendments: Chapter 351 in (2), before "all fees", substituted "general fund" for "insurance regulatory trust account provided for in 17-2-121". Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

Chapter 713 substituted references to insurance producer for references to enrollment representative. Amendment effective January 1, 1990.

1987 Amendment: In (1)(a)(i), after "original license", deleted "including examination" and increased fee from $10 to $15; in (1)(a)(ii) increased fee from $5 to $15; inserted (1)(a)(iii) setting fee for examination for license; in (1)(d) increased fee from $1 to $10; in (1)(e) increased fee from $10 to $25; in (1)(f) increased fee from $25 to $100; in (1)(g), after "report", substituted reference to application for original license for "a fee of 50 cents for each individual or family unit the corporation covered at the close of the year to which the annual report is applicable, except that the minimum fee payable upon filing of an annual report is $100"; inserted (1)(h) setting fee for issuance of health service corporation license; inserted (1)(i) setting fee for continuation of license; and in (2) provided for deposit of fees in the insurance regulatory trust account instead of the general fund. Amendment effective January 1, 1988.

1981 Amendment: Increased the filing fee in subsection (1)(g) from 20 cents to 50 cents.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 385 (Ch. 452, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for House Bill 385 to explain the purpose of the legislature in approving the increase in the fee for filing of annual report by health service corporations. This bill raises the fee for each individual or family unit covered, from 20 cents to 50 cents, to finance the performance audits required on each health service corporation at least once every 4 years and to carry out other duties imposed on the Insurance Department. The Insurance Department estimates it will require one additional FTE plus a necessary appropriation to cover additional related costs such as actuarial fees, travel expenses, office space, benefits and office equipment for the FTE. The intention of the legislature is to collect the increase in the fee only if the additional FTE and appropriation are authorized."

33-30-301. Forms — filing, approval.

Compiler's Comments

1987 Amendment: Near middle, after "filed with", substituted "and approved by the commissioner of this state and the insurance regulator of the state of domicile of the health service corporation in accordance with chapter 1, part 5" for former language that read: "the commissioner at least 30 days before that form is first used. When a form does not comply with the requirements of this chapter, the commissioner shall notify the corporation in writing of that failure and include the reasons for his opinion. Unless the corporation requests a hearing within 10 days, notice by the commissioner disallows use of this form by the corporation. If the corporation challenges the commissioner's disallowance of a form it shall request a hearing on that issue. The commissioner shall schedule a hearing as soon as practicable but not less than 15 days from the date of the request. If the commissioner finds, after the hearing, that the form is not in compliance with this chapter, he may disapprove the form and issue a final order to that effect. Notice of disapproval, including the grounds for disapproval, shall be presented to the corporation not less than 30 days after the hearing. The final order is effective 30 days after the hearing.

(2) A corporation whose forms have been ordered discontinued by the commissioner may appeal, within 15 days after an order, to a district court of the state. The court, upon filing of the proper petition, shall cause the forms and orders of the commissioner to be brought before it, and upon hearing of the case, the court shall either affirm or reverse and vacate the order of the commissioner.

(3) The court may suspend or stay a final order of the commissioner under this section pending trial of the issues or the appeal." Amendment effective January 1, 1988.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "at least 30 days before" for "within 30 days after" in the first sentence of subsection (1).

Code Commissioner Correction: Section 1, Ch. 713, L. 1989, a short form amendment, directed the Code Commissioner to change references in this section to "agent" to "insurance producer". The obvious intent of the amendment was to replace references to insurance agents with the new term. The Code Commissioner has not made the change in this section to references contained in this section that obviously are to an agent within the meaning of a principal and agent relationship.

Payment for Services of Psychologists: Montana Physicians Service (Blue Shield) and Blue Cross of Montana may pay for services rendered by psychologists but are not required to do so. 37 A.G. Op. 151 (1978).

Exclusion of Coverage for Services Rendered at State Institutions: The Montana Physicians Service is prohibited from including any provision in its health service agreements that excludes payment for services rendered to beneficiaries hospitalized at state institutions if such health services would be covered if rendered to beneficiaries outside of such institution, and any such provisions are void and ineffective. 37 A.G. Op. 33 (1977).

33-30-311. Insurance producer.

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 379 at end inserted "and is subject to the provisions of 33-2-708 and Title 33, chapter 17"; deleted (2) that read: "(2) The definitions of insurance producer as defined in this chapter do not include an individual:

(a) employed and used by insurance producers for the performance of clerical, stenographic, and similar office duties;

(b) employed and used for incidental taking of an application for coverage from time to time in the office of the employing insurance producer;

(c) who secures and forwards information for the purpose of an existing group contractor for enrolling individuals under an existing group contract"; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 99, Ch. 379, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

1989 Amendment: Substituted references to insurance producer for references to enrollment representative. Amendment effective January 1, 1990.

State Employee Health Care Benefits — State Subject to Regulation as Insurer: The plaintiffs claimed that under the state employee health care benefit program, they were not fully compensated for their injuries because the state had retained refunded payments it had made to their medical providers in cases where the provider had already been paid by a third-party insurer. The state claimed that under its coordination of benefits policy, it was allowed to accept the refunded payments without first ensuring the plaintiffs had been fully compensated for their injuries. The District Court granted the plaintiffs summary judgment, concluding that the state is an insurer in operating the benefit plan and that its coordination of benefits policy contravened the "made whole" requirements of 2-18-902. The state appealed to the Supreme Court, which affirmed the District Court and further agreed that the state, as an insurer to its employees through its employee health care benefit plan, is subject to the same regulations as other insurers. Diaz v. St., 2013 MT 331, 372 Mont. 393, 313 P.3d 124. See also Diaz I, 2011 MT 322, 363 Mont. 151, 267 P.3d 756.

Disputed Insurance Exclusions Violative of Subrogation Law — Disapproval by Insurance Commissioner Proper: Plaintiff insurance company submitted several insurance forms to the State Auditor/Insurance Commissioner for approval pursuant to 33-1-501. The forms contained coverage exclusions under which plaintiff would not pay for health care costs of its injured beneficiaries if the beneficiaries received or were entitled to receive benefits from any automobile or premises liability policy. The Commissioner subsequently disapproved the language in the forms containing the exclusions. The District Court affirmed the Commissioner's decision and plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The Commissioner had the statutory power and authority to disapprove the exclusions. The exclusions violated Montana law by allowing plaintiff to enjoy the benefits of subrogation in the circumstances allowed by the exclusions, and because the exclusions violated or did not comply with insurance law, disapproval of the exclusions by the Commissioner was warranted. Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Mont. v. Mont. St. Auditor & Comm'r of Ins., 2009 MT 318, 352 M 423, 218 P3d 475 (2009). See also Skauge v. Mtn. St. Tel. & Tel., 172 M 521, 565 P2d 628 (1977). Co., 2014 MT 73, 374 Mont. 278, 320 P.3d 967, holding that a requirement that primary coverage be exhausted before secondary insurance coverage is triggered is not subrogation.

Disputed Insurance Exclusions Violative of Subrogation Law — Disapproval by Insurance Commissioner Proper: Plaintiff insurance company submitted several insurance forms to the State Auditor/Insurance Commissioner for approval pursuant to 33-1-501. The forms contained coverage exclusions under which plaintiff would not pay for health care costs of its injured beneficiaries if the beneficiaries received or were entitled to receive benefits from any automobile or premises liability policy. Statute of Limitations Applicable to Subrogee in Insurance Claim: St. Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Company (St. Paul), as subrogee, sought to recover from Glassing a payment made to its insured Lynn for underinsured motorist coverage, interest, and costs. Montana has no statutory authority extending the statute of limitations for subrogation claims in such cases. Because an insurer's claim is derived from that of the insured, St. Paul's claim was subject to the same defenses, including the statute of limitations, as though the action were sued upon by the insured and St. Paul had no claim for its damages independent of Lynn's claim. An insurer's right to subrogation attaches upon paying an insured's loss; thus, the 3-year statute of limitations in 27-2-204 applied to St. Paul's claim in the same manner that the original action brought by Lynn and, when raised after the 3-year limit, was time-barred. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Glassing, 269 M 76, 887 P2d 218, 51 St. Rep. 1437 (1994), followed in Nimmick v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 270 M 315, 891 P2d 1154, 52 St. Rep. 208 (1995). 2007 Amendment: Chapter 356 inserted definition of dependent; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2008.

Although sec. 5, Ch. 463, L. 2007, purported to amend this section, the final version of the text remained unamended.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 450 in definition of basic health care services inserted (j) concerning outpatient self-management training and education for diabetes; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2002.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section 7, Ch. 450, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] is effective January 1, 2002, and applies to all policies, contracts, plans, or certificates issued or renewed on or after that date."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 434 in definition of basic health care services substituted (j) concerning treatment and medical foods for inborn errors of metabolism for "treatment for phenylketonuria. "Treatment" means licensed professional medical services under the supervision of a physician and a dietary formula product to achieve and maintain normalized blood levels of phenylalanine and adequate nutritional status." Amendment effective January 1, 2000.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section 6, Ch. 434, L. 1999, provided that this section is effective January 1, 2000, and applies to all policies, contracts, plans, or certificates issued or renewed on or after that date.

1997 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 165 inserted definitions of point-of-service option, provider panel, and purchaser; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 413 in definition of health maintenance organization, in first sentence after "prepaid", deleted "or other financial" and inserted last sentence concerning method of provider payments; in definition of provider, near middle, substituted "advanced practice registered nurse" for "nurse specialist"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1998.

Chapter 416 inserted definition of affiliation period; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Style changes in the chapters were slightly different. In each case, the codifier chose the most appropriate.

Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 165, L. 1997, provided: "[This act] [33-31-102 and 33-31-306] applies to health care service agreements purchased or renewed after January 1, 2000."

Section 52, Ch. 416, L. 1997, provided: "(1) Except as provided in subsection (2), [sections 1, 5 through 8, 17 through 40 [section 29 is 33-31-102], and 42 through 45] apply to group health plans and health insurance coverage offered in connection with group health plans for group health plan and group health insurance coverage contracts issued or renewed after June 30, 1997.

(2) [Section 36] [33-22-142] applies to events occurring after June 30, 1996."

1991 Amendments: Chapter 437 deleted definitions of Department of Health and Director, meaning the Director of the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Attorney General's Opinions

Competitive Bidding Requirements Inapplicable to Health Maintenance Organizations, Except When Entering Preferred Provider Agreement: Definitions applicable to the Preferred Provider Agreements Act (PPA Act) under Title 33, ch. 22, part 17, and the Montana Health Maintenance Organization Act (HMO Act) under Title 33, ch. 31, are distinctive in the methods

by which health services are contracted for in a preferred provider context and the traditional HMO context. The PPA Act applies to a limited class of provider agreements, not including those typically entered into by HMOs. By its passage of the PPA Act and the HMO Act, the Legislature provided two alternative health care delivery systems that would maximize options for health care cost savings. The two acts are independent. Nothing in the applicable statutes supports mandatory application to HMO provider contracts of an otherwise voluntary competitive bidding process under the PPA Act. Therefore, a health maintenance organization is not bound by the competitive bidding requirements of 33-22-1704 in contracting with health care providers, except when entering into a preferred provider agreement. 46 A.G. Op. 9 (1995).

1991 Amendment: Deleted (2) granting the Department of Health authority to make rules effectuating the chapter. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 457, L. 1987, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because:

(1) it authorizes the commissioner of insurance of the state of Montana (commissioner) and the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of public health and human services] to adopt, after notice and hearing, reasonable rules necessary or proper to effectuate sections 1 through 29 [Title 33, ch. 31];

(2) section 3 [33-31-201] authorizes the commissioner to make reasonable rules exempting a health maintenance organization from having to file a notice with the commissioner describing material modifications of information required in an application for a certificate of authority if the commissioner considers the information unnecessary; and

(3) section 5 [33-31-221] authorizes the commissioner to make reasonable rules exempting a health maintenance organization from having to file a notice with the commissioner before exercising the powers granted in subsection (1)(a), (1)(b), or (1)(d) if the commissioner believes exercising those powers will have de minimis effect. The legislature expects the commissioner to make only reasonable rules necessary to effectuate or aid the effectuation of sections 1 through 29 [Title 33, ch. 31]. The legislature does not authorize the commissioner to adopt rules that extend, modify, or conflict with either any law of this state or any reasonable implications of those laws. If reasonably possible, the commissioner shall set forth a proposed rule or amendment to a rule in or with the required notice of hearing. No rule or amendment to a rule by the commissioner is effective until it has been on file in the commissioner's office for at least 10 days.

Any rule promulgated by the commissioner in regard to advisory boards of health maintenance organizations must require the membership of those advisory boards to include multidisciplinary representatives."

Section 52, Ch. 416, L. 1997, provided: "(1) Except as provided in subsection (2), [sections 1, 5 through 8, 17 through 40 [section 32 is 33-35-306], and 42 through 45] apply to group health plans and health insurance coverage offered in connection with group health plans for group health plan and group health insurance coverage contracts issued or renewed after June 30, 1997.

(2) [Section 36] [33-22-142] applies to events occurring after June 30, 1996."

CHAPTER 36
MANAGED CARE PLAN NETWORK ADEQUACY AND QUALITY ASSURANCE

Chapter Compiler's Comments

1997 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 413, L. 1997, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 12, 13, and 22] [33-36-105, 33-36-201, and 33-36-213] require rules to be adopted by the department of public health and human services.

The rules adopted by the department must establish state network adequacy and quality assurance standards for managed care plans that amplify [sections 8 through 29] [Title 33, ch. 36] and must provide greater detail regarding specific means by which a health carrier meets the requirements of [sections 8 through 29] [Title 33, ch. 36].

A managed care plan accredited by a nationally recognized organization is not required to meet some of the provisions of [sections 8 through 29] [Title 33, ch. 36], but the legislature acknowledges that small managed care plans may not be capable of meeting all of the accreditation requirements of national accrediting organizations.

In order to promote uniformity of standards applicable to all managed care plans, state quality assurance standards for small managed care plans must consist of standards that are appropriate for quality assurance in Montana.

The department may refer reports of noncompliance by a health carrier to the commissioner for corrective action. Under the department's rulemaking authority, the department shall specify network adequacy and quality assurance review processes.

[Section 19] [33-36-210] designates the department of public health and human services as the place for insurance carriers to file documents related to managed care provider network adequacy and quality assurance. The department shall adopt rules establishing procedures for filing these documents and shall adopt rules specifying processes for amending or withdrawing documents already filed that relate to network adequacy and quality assurance."

Severability: Section 31, Ch. 413, L. 1997, was a severability clause.

Applicability: Section 32, Ch. 413, L. 1997, provided: "[This act] applies to a health carrier as defined in [section 10] [33-36-103] who offers a managed care plan as defined in [section 10] [33-36-103] on or after [the effective date of this section]." Effective April 28, 1997.

Saving Provisions: Section 219, Ch. 368, L. 1991, provided: "(1) Except as provided in subsection (2), the repeal of a statute by [sections 1 through 181] [sec. 216, Ch. 368, L. 1991] does not affect:

(a) the operation of the statute or any action taken under it before its repeal;

(b) any ratification, right, remedy, privilege, obligation, or liability acquired, accrued, or incurred under the statute before its repeal;

(c) any violation of the statute, or any penalty, forfeiture, or punishment incurred because of the violation, before its repeal;

(d) any proceeding, reorganization, or dissolution commenced under the statute before its repeal, and the proceeding, reorganization, or dissolution may be completed in accordance with the statute as if it had not been repealed.

(2) If a penalty or punishment imposed for violation of a statute repealed by [sections 1 through 181] [sec. 216, Ch. 368, L. 1991] is reduced by [sections 1 through 181] [Title 35, ch. 1], the penalty of punishment if not already imposed shall be imposed in accordance with [sections 1 through 181] [Title 35, ch. 1]."

Severability: Section 220, Ch. 368, L. 1991, provided: "If any provision of [sections 1 through 181] [Title 35, ch. 1] or its application to any person or circumstance is held invalid by a court of competent jurisdiction, the invalidity does not affect other provisions or applications of [sections 1 through 181] [Title 35, ch. 1] that can be given effect without the invalid provision or application, and to this end the provisions of [sections 1 through 181] [Title 35, ch. 1] are severable."

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

No Right of Individual Guarantor to Sue on Behalf of Corporation: Under former Rule 17(a), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), an action must be brought by the person who is entitled to enforce the right according to the governing substantive law and will not necessarily be brought in the name of the person who will ultimately benefit from the recovery. In the case of corporations, neither the Montana Business Corporation Act nor the Montana Close Corporation Act provides for an individual guarantor to sue on behalf of the corporation. Therefore, the District Court did not err in determining that claims for misuse and misappropriation of corporate funds could not be brought by individual plaintiffs. Kondelik v. First Fidelity Bank of Glendive, 259 M 446, 857 P2d 687, 50 St. Rep. 874 (1993).

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Use of Corporation by Individual as Subterfuge — Piercing Corporate Veil to Hold Individual Liable for Breach of Lease: Defendant formed a corporation to render dental services and leased a building for a dental practice with two other dentists, including plaintiff. After the practice became successful, defendant demanded possession of the entire property by letter.

When plaintiff did not respond, defendant vacated the building on behalf of the corporation and discontinued paying rent, but the decision was never documented in the corporation's records. Plaintiff sued for breach of the lease contract. Following trial, the District Court concluded that defendant was the alter ego of the corporation and the real party in interest under the lease and that it would be inequitable to allow defendant to use the corporation as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience or justify wrong. Thus, the corporate veil was pierced, and defendant was held personally responsible for damages arising from the breached lease. On appeal, the Supreme Court applied the test in Berlin v. Boedecker, 268 M 444, 887 P2d 1180 (1994), to determine whether circumstances were appropriate for piercing the corporate veil. The court noted that the veil may not be pierced simply because an individual is the alter ego of a corporation and the true party in interest. There must be substantial evidence that the corporate entity was used as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, or commit fraud, but bad faith alone may be a sufficient cause for piercing the veil. Here, the corporation was unable to satisfy the judgment because it was undercapitalized from its inception, suggesting defendant acted in bad faith. Further, it was inequitable for defendant to personally profit from renting property to the corporation and protect himself from liability with the undercapitalized corporation. The judgment was affirmed. Peschel Family Trust v. Colonna, 2003 MT 216, 317 M 127, 75 P3d 793 (2003).

Previously Raised but Unlitigated Alter Ego Claim Not Barred by Res Judicata: Following a dispute over the sale of irrigation equipment, H-D Irrigating and Lane sued Kimble Properties and Kimble for false representation of the irrigation equipment and damages. Kimble Properties and Kimble counterclaimed for the balance due on the equipment, alleging that H-D Irrigating was a sham and the alter ego of Lane. The alter ego claim was never pursued. The Supreme Court eventually decided the case in H-D Irrigating, Inc. v. Kimble Properties, Inc., 2000 MT 212, 301 M 34, 8 P3d 95 (2000), and remanded for judgment in favor of Kimble. In an effort to collect, Kimble sought to compel Lane to testify regarding the assets of H-D Irrigating, but rather than appear, Lane filed bankruptcy and received a stay on further proceedings. Kimble then filed an action to collect from Lane personally, again raising the alter ego issue. Lane asserted that the issue had been already decided in the prior litigation and sought supervisory control on res judicata grounds. After accepting supervisory control, the Supreme Court decided that res judicata did not bar Kimble's litigation of the alter ego claim. The action to pierce the H-D Irrigating corporate veil was neither previously adjudicated in District Court nor were the facts upon which the claim was based known to Kimble at the time that the counterclaim was filed or at any other time during the course of the previous action. The case was thus remanded for further proceedings on the alter ego claim. Lane v. District Court, 2003 MT 130, 316 M 55, 68 P3d 819 (2003), applying Berlin v. Boedecker, 268 M 444, 887 P2d 1180 (1994).

Piercing of Corporate Veil Inapplicable Against Sole Proprietorship: Piercing is used to eliminate an individual's corporate liability in cases in which one establishes that the shareholders are the alter ego of the corporation. Piercing is an equitable remedy and applies only to fraud or to achieve equity. The theory of piercing the corporate veil is inapplicable against a sole proprietorship and thus may not be applied in piercing the entity veil. Jerry Martin & Associates, Inc. v. Don's Westland Bulk, 267 M 464, 884 P2d 795, 51 St. Rep. 1119 (1994).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Dual Prongs for Piercing Corporate Veil — Evidence of Fraud Sufficient: There are two prongs to piercing the corporate veil. First, the person purporting to represent the corporation must be found to be the corporate "alter ego". Second, there must be a showing that the corporate entity was used as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, or perpetrate either actual or constructive fraud. Drilcon, Inc. v. Roil Energy Corp., Inc., 230 M 166, 749 P2d 1058, 45 St. Rep. 114 (1988), followed in Berlin v. Boedecker, 268 M 444, 887 P2d 1180, 51 St. Rep. 569 (1994).

Commonality of Interests Insufficient to Justify Disregard of Corporate Separateness: On appeal from a declaratory judgment that a proposed transaction to merge into a subsidiary triggered preemptive right and resignation provisions of a venture agreement, the Supreme Court found that evidence did not establish a commonality of interests between defendant corporations sufficient to justify disregard of their corporate separateness. Meridian Minerals Co. v. Nicor Minerals, Inc., 228 M 274, 742 P2d 456, 44 St. Rep. 1516 (1987).

Grounds Found for Piercing Corporate Veil: The Supreme Court found the following elements to be sufficient indicia of control and domination of E.C.A. Environmental Management Services, Inc. (E.C.A.) by Montana Merchandising Incorporated (MMI) for the purpose of piercing the corporate veil and finding that MMI and E.C.A. were one and the same corporation: (1) MMI owned 100% of the capital stock of E.C.A.; (2) virtually all corporate formalities had been abandoned by E.C.A. prior to execution of the contract that was the basis of this litigation; (3) each of E.C.A.'s directors was also a director of MMI; (4) MMI routinely transferred funds from E.C.A. to its own account; (5) E.C.A.'s bank account was managed by MMI; (6) the contract was first discussed at an MMI Board of Directors meeting; (7) at the time the contract was made, E.C.A. was undercapitalized, owed MMI almost $1.5 million, and had pledged its assets to MMI as security; and (8) E.C.A.'s operations were financed by MMI. The court further held that the "subterfuge to . . . justify wrong" requirement necessary to pierce a corporate veil is satisfied by a showing of bad faith on the part of the controlling corporation, and that there is no requirement of a positive showing of fraud. E.C.A. Envtl. Management Serv., Inc. v. Toenyes, 208 M 336, 679 P2d 213, 41 St. Rep. 388 (1984).

Banks: The requirement of section 15-808, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), that a corporation "commence the transaction of its business or the construction of its works within 1 year from the date of its incorporation" was not applicable to banks which are governed by section 5-207, R.C.M. 1947 (now 32-1-321, MCA). First Nat'l Bank in Billings v. First Bank Stock Corp., 306 F2d 937 (9th Cir. 1962).

Corporations Organized Prior to 1895: When a mining corporation organized under the Compiled Statutes of 1887 never elected to do business under the Code of 1895 or subsequent legislation, the powers of its board were determined by the provisions of section 15-121, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Kleinschmidt v. Am. Min. Co., Ltd., 49 M 7, 139 P 785 (1914).

Eminent Domain: Section 15-1201, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), relating to scope of corporation laws, furnished no authority for the exercise of the right of eminent domain by a foreign corporation. Helena Power Transmission Co. v. Spratt, 35 M 108, 88 P 773 (1907).

ABA COMMENTS TO MODEL BUSINESS CORPORATION ACT (1960)

Historical: In England, the early corporations received their charters from the crown or by special Parliamentary bill; however, in the United States the granting of corporate franchises has from the beginning been regarded as a prerogative of the legislature. At the outset American corporations were formed by special legislation, but abuses of this method led to adoption of general statutes under which corporations could be formed. The forerunners in the adoption of such general enabling legislation were North Carolina (1795), Massachusetts (1799) and New York (1811).

New or very substantially revised general acts relating to business corporations have been adopted in more than half of the American jurisdictions in the last few decades:

1927 & 1955	Ohio	General Corporation Act
1928	Louisiana	*Business Corporation Law
1929	Indiana	*The Indiana General Corporation Act
1929	Idaho	*Business Corporation Act
1929	Tennessee	General Corporation Act
1931	Arkansas	Business Corporation Law
1931 & 1947	California	*General Corporation Law
1931	Michigan	*Michigan General Corporation Act
1933	Illinois	*The Business Corporation Act
1933	Minnesota	*Minnesota Business Corporation Act
1933	Pennsylvania	*Business Corporation Law
1933	Washington	Uniform Business Corporation Act
1939	Kansas	*The General Corporation Code
1941	Nebraska	The General Corporation Law of the State of Nebraska
1943	Missouri	*The General and Business Corporation Act of Missouri

1946	Kentucky	General Corporation Law
1947	Oklahoma	*Business Corporation Act
1951	Maryland	General Corporation Law
1951	Wisconsin	*Wisconsin Business Corporation Law
1953	Oregon	*Oregon Business Corporation Act
1953	Florida	General Corporation Law
1954	Dist. of Columbia	*D.C. Business Corporation Act
1955	Texas	*Texas Business Corporation Act
1955	North Carolina	*Business Corporation Act
1956	Virginia	*Virginia Stock Corporation Act
1956	Puerto Rico	General Corporation Law
1957	North Dakota	North Dakota Business Corporation Act
1957	Alaska	*Alaska Business Corporation Act
1958	Colorado	*Colorado Corporation Act
1959	Iowa	*Iowa Business Corporation Act
1959	Connecticut	*Stock Corporation Act
1959	Alabama	*Alabama Business Corporation Act

The corporation acts marked with an asterisk bear the short title prescribed in the statute. Under statutes entitled "General Corporation" Act or Law, provision is often made for incorporation of non-profit as well as profit corporations, for example, Delaware General Corporation Law. Where the statute is entitled "Business Corporation" Act or Law, or "Stock Corporation" Act or Law, usually only corporations for profit may be formed thereunder, for example, Alabama Business Corporation Act. Many jurisdictions have special statutes applicable to certain types of stock corporations other than business corporations. New York has both a General Corporation Law, applicable to public corporations, stock corporations, and non-stock corporations, and a Stock Corporation Law, applicable to stock corporations, especially business corporations, except as to matters for which provision is made in any other corporate law. The former contains no incorporation provisions; the latter provides for the incorporation only of business corporations, that is, stock corporations other than banking, insurance, railroad, transportation and cooperative corporations and corporations chartered by the regents, but otherwise applies to all stock corporations to the extent not in conflict with other corporate laws, such as the Banking Law, Insurance Law, Railroad Law, Transportation Corporations Law, Cooperative Corporations Law, and Educational Law. In many jurisdictions, non-profit corporations are formed under separate non-profit corporation acts or laws.

Model Business Corporation Act: The Model Business Corporation Act prepared by the Committee on Corporate Laws (Section of Corporation, Banking and Business Law) of the American Bar Association was patterned largely on the Illinois Business Corporation Act of 1933 and was first published in 1946.

The Committee on Corporate Laws presented the Model Act as a modern statute that preserves in proper balance the interest of the state and the rights and interests of corporations, shareholders and management, and expressed the hope that the act will be of benefit to various jurisdictions in modernizing their business corporation statutes, perhaps to the extent of eventual achievement of greater uniformity among the jurisdictions. The Model Act does not define the term "business corporation", but its definitions of "corporation", "domestic corporation", and "foreign corporation" limit its application to corporations for profit. [See ABA comments under 35-1-102.]

The Model Act is not designed for particular application to large or small corporations but on the premise that a corporation statute, properly drawn, could and should serve equally the requirements of large and small corporations and the fair treatment of the shareholders of each.

Uniform Business Corporation Act: There has been some confusion between the Model Business Corporation Act of the American Bar Association and the Uniform Business Corporation Act (later called Model Business Corporation Act) adopted in 1928 by The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws (9 ULA 49). The Uniform Business Corporation Act was enacted in Louisiana (1929). About half of it was enacted in Idaho (1929). Next it was enacted in Washington (1935). Finally, the Kentucky revision of 1946 used a substantial portion of it.

Meanwhile, in 1943 the Conference withdrew the act as a Uniform Act and renamed it "Model Business Corporation Act," having reached the conclusion that the subject was one upon which uniformity between the states is not necessary or desirable but that it would be helpful to have legislation which would tend toward uniformity where enacted. Subsequently, in 1958, the Conference withdrew the act completely.

While the Uniform Act was not widely adopted, it did have a broad effect by supplying model provisions for consideration in the enactment of new corporation laws.

Operation of Affiliated Corporations as Single Business: Affiliated corporations operated together as a single business, although separately incorporated, are incapable of conspiring under section 1 of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act (15 U.S.C. §1). Murray v. Toyota Motor Distributors, Inc., 664 F2d 1377 (9th Cir. 1982).

Fraud — Disregard of Corporate Entity by Courts: Courts may disregard a corporate entity when the corporate organization is used for the purpose of perpetrating fraud. When a parent (foreign) corporation and a subsidiary thereof act as one in the transaction of business, the former cannot avoid liability under its contract on the ground of its assignment to the latter. Wilson v. Milner Hotels, Inc., 116 M 424, 154 P2d 265 (1944).

Street Railway: Section 15-111, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), authorized the formation of a corporation to own and operate a street railway. Cent. Trust Co. of N.Y. v. Warren, 121 F 323 (9th Cir. 1903).

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds to MCA §35-1-108 [now repealed]. Note that MCA §35-1-108 [now repealed] grants corporations power to have perpetual existence unless a limited period is specifically provided for in the articles of incorporation. See also MCA §35-1-202(1)(b)

[now repealed]. The RMBCA allows for corporate seals at §3.02(2) [subsection (2) of this section]. Although the distinction between sealed and unsealed documents is abolished (MCA §1-4-204), some attorneys believe it wise to authorize a seal in case another party to the contract requires it.

MCA §35-1-108(b) [now repealed] specifically addresses the use of credit to assist employees. This provision has been intentionally eliminated from the RMBCA because the wisdom of such actions should be judged under general fiduciary standards and the resultant benefits to the corporation.

The RMBCA has been revised by the Committee to continue the current Montana law allowing donations for religious and war activities (see §35-1-108(13) [now repealed]).

The ABA Official Comments state:

"The general philosophy of §3.02 [this section] is thus that corporations formed under the Model Act provisions should be automatically authorized to engage in all acts and powers that an individual may have." Recognizing, however, that this state limits the powers of corporations in certain regards (i.e., election laws), the words "unless adherence prohibited by law" have been added to the introductory language.

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Shareholder Cannot File Claim Belonging to Corporation — Stranger to Contract — No Standing to Seek Damages — Summary Judgment Affirmed: A majority shareholder of a corporation filed suit for damages arising from the termination of the corporation's food services contract with the federal government against the defendants who sold a coffee urn for the corporation's use. The District Court properly granted summary judgment in favor of the defendants because the shareholder did not have standing to file claims that belonged to the corporation; he was not a party to the contract between the corporation and the federal government; and the deadline to amend his pleadings to include the corporation as a party had expired. Weaver v. Advanced Refrigeration, 2011 MT 174, 361 Mont. 233, 257 P.3d 378.

Error in Modification of Rate for Legal Work: The partnership agreement of a limited partnership included a limitation on the general partners' ability to incur legal expenses, but provided that two of the partners could be employed to perform legal services for the partnership, and limited compensation to reasonable hourly rates in an amount not to exceed a total of $60,000 a year without approval. A dispute between partners resulted in a claim that the attorneys had charged excessive rates of $225 an hour and thus should be removed as directors. The District Court found that the attorneys overcharged and required repayment based on a reduced hourly rate. The Supreme Court disagreed and reversed. The contract language clearly allowed for employment of the attorneys, and the partnership was aware in advance of the attorneys' hourly rate. The fees were reasonable given the complexity of the specialized work and the fact that other attorneys in that field charged even higher rates. The District Court erred in modifying the rate for legal work. Sletteland v. Roberts, 2000 MT 382, 304 M 21, 16 P3d 1062, 57 St. Rep. 1639 (2000).

Reverse Piercing of Corporate Veil Not Allowed: The plaintiffs sued the defendant for attorney malpractice. The Supreme Court affirmed the lower court's decision, holding that the plaintiffs, as shareholders of a corporation, could not pursue an action on their own behalf when the cause of action accrues to the corporation. Stott v. Fox, 246 M 301, 805 P2d 1305, 47 St. Rep. 2040 (1990).

Listing Property as Corporate Property to Secure Loan — Estoppel to Deny Corporate Ownership: In a conversion action by a bank against its corporate president for selling, in his individual capacity and retaining the proceeds, property that he had knowledge of and acquiesced to being listed as corporate property to secure a corporate loan, he could not, under the provisions of 26-1-601, allege that the corporation did not own the property. Farmers St. Bank v. Johnson, 188 M 55, 610 P2d 1172 (1980).

Loans by Officers Contrary to Resolution — Estoppel to Deny Loan: Even though a corporate resolution stated that the president, vice president, and secretary or any two of them were empowered to act in the name of the corporation, a note and security agreement signed only by two vice presidents was enforceable because if a corporation receives and retains the fruit of a loan, impliedly ratifying it, the corporation is estopped to deny the authority of the vice presidents to borrow the money. Farmers St. Bank v. Johnson, 188 M 55, 610 P2d 1172 (1980).

De Facto Corporation — Capacity to Contract: A de facto corporation has the same capacity to contract as a de jure corporation. Proof of de facto corporate existence is sufficient when the validity of a contract by a body of men claiming to be a corporation is in issue in a suit between third persons. Mont. Ass'n of Underwriters v. Dept. of Administration, 172 M 211, 563 P2d 577 (1977).

Eminent Domain Power: Legislature under 35-1-108 (now repealed] has empowered utility companies to acquire property by eminent domain. Mont. Power Co. v. Bokma, 153 M 390, 457 P2d 769 (1969).

Determination of Nature of Association for Federal Income Tax Purposes: Although under state law at the time of the decision a corporation could not be organized to practice medicine, yet an association that has the criteria of a corporation could be considered a corporation for federal tax purposes. The determination of the nature of associations for federal tax purposes is not by the state criteria but rather by the special criteria sanctioned by the tax law, the regulations, and the courts. U.S. v. Kintner, 216 F2d 418 (9th Cir. 1954).

Corporation Not Authorized to Practice Law: Nothing contained in section 15-104, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), authorized a corporation to practice law. State ex rel. Freebourn v. Merchants' Credit Serv., Inc., 104 M 76, 66 P2d 337 (1937), overruled on another point in Rae v. Cameron, 112 M 159, 114 P2d 1060 (1943).

Power to Issue Notes: In the absence of a state statute prohibiting ordinary industrial corporations from borrowing money on promissory notes or a showing that a particular corporation by its articles of incorporation or its bylaws is prohibited from so doing, a mining corporation, under section 15-801, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), impliedly granting such power when necessary to be exercised in the transaction of its ordinary affairs or for corporate purposes, may do so. Alley v. Butte & W. Min. Co., 77 M 477, 251 P 517 (1926).

Power to Sell Assets: Under the common-law powers reserved to corporations under section 15-901, et seq., R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and enumerated in a general way in sections 15-401 and 15-801, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the Board of Directors of a going corporation could, in the proper pursuit of its business and within the purposes of its creation, against the dissent of a minority of its stockholders, sell a leasehold interest in realty with improvements thereon, and when such sale was made before plaintiffs had judgment against the selling corporation, they acquired no title under execution sale, and nonsuit was properly granted in their action in ejectment against the purchaser. Wortman v. Luna Park Amusement Co., 61 M 89, 201 P 570 (1921), explained in N. Min. Corp. v. Trunz, 124 F2d 14 (9th Cir. 1941).

Supplying Water to Public: Section 15-104, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), authorized the formation of a corporation to supply water to the public; and section 15-109, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), gave further recognition to the same right. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912).

Power to Condemn Generally:

The provisions of section 15-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and 69-14-531, 69-14-532, 69-14-533, 69-14-539, 69-14-552, 69-14-558, and 69-14-561 (all now repealed, formerly 72-201 and 72-205, R.C.M. 1947) are exceedingly liberal, but they must be interpreted in the light of 70-30-111 (formerly 93-9905, R.C.M. 1947), and the rule of necessity must be determinative of the right to take in each instance. N. Pac. Ry. v. McAdow, 44 M 547, 121 P 473 (1912).

The changing of the channel of a stream which would otherwise have to be crossed by a railway to conform to the route selected by it, when necessary to make the road secure for life and property, is a part of the construction of the road, and authority is granted to secure the necessary amount of land to make such change by means of condemnation proceedings. State ex rel. Bloomington Land & Live Stock Co. v. District Court, 34 M 535, 88 P 44 (1906). See Archer v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 41 M 56, 108 P 571 (1910); N. Pac. Ry. v. McAdow, 44 M 547, 121 P 473 (1912); Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. of Am. v. Nolan, 53 M 129, 162 P 169 (1916).

Acquisition of Stock in Another Corporation: At the time of the case, the only provisions concerning merger of corporations were found in sections 15-104, 15-620, and 15-1603, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), authorizing one corporation to acquire shares of stock in another. United Missouri River Power Co. v. Yoder, 41 M 245, 108 P 912 (1910).

Right of Eminent Domain by a Foreign Corporation:

By section 15-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the Legislature intended to give foreign corporations the same power in respect to eminent domain as domestic corporations enjoy. Spratt v. Helena Power Transmission Co., 37 M 60, 94 P 631 (1908).

Section 15-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), furnished no authority for the exercise of the right of eminent domain by a foreign corporation. Spratt v. Helena Power Transmission Co., 37 M 60, 94 P 631 (1908); Helena Power Transmission Co. v. Spratt, 35 M 108, 88 P 773 (1907).

Storage of Goods: Under section 15-104, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), a corporation could be organized for the purpose of storing goods in a warehouse for shipment. Orient Ins. Co. v. N. Pac. Ry., 31 M 502, 78 P 1036 (1905).

Case Notes

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Organization Holding Itself Out as Corporation Estopped From Denying Legality of Its Corporate Existence: The plaintiffs sought to bring an action for attorney malpractice on their own behalf, arguing that the corporation had ceased to legally exist. The Supreme Court ruled that since the corporation had continued to act as a corporate entity after it had expired, the plaintiffs were estopped from challenging its corporate status. Stott v. Fox, 246 M 301, 805 P2d 1305, 47 St. Rep. 2040 (1990).

Grounds Found for Piercing Corporate Veil: The Supreme Court found the following elements to be sufficient indicia of control and domination of E.C.A. Environmental Management Services, Inc. (E.C.A.) by Montana Merchandising Incorporated (MMI) for the purpose of piercing the corporate veil and finding that MMI and E.C.A. were one and the same corporation: (1) MMI owned 100% of the capital stock of E.C.A.; (2) virtually all corporate formalities had been abandoned by E.C.A. prior to execution of the contract that was the basis of this litigation; (3) each of E.C.A.'s directors was also a director of MMI; (4) MMI routinely transferred funds from E.C.A. to its own account; (5) E.C.A.'s bank account was managed by MMI; (6) the contract was first discussed at an MMI Board of Directors meeting; (7) at the time the contract was made, E.C.A. was undercapitalized, owed MMI almost $1.5 million, and had pledged its assets to MMI as security; and (8) E.C.A.'s operations were financed by MMI. The court further held that the "subterfuge to . . . justify wrong" requirement necessary to pierce a corporate veil is satisfied by a showing of bad faith on the part of the controlling corporation, and that there is no requirement of a positive showing of fraud. E.C.A. Envtl. Management Serv., Inc. v. Toenyes, 208 M 336, 679 P2d 213, 41 St. Rep. 388 (1984).

Piercing Corporate Veil Doctrine — Refusal to Apply: The doctrine of piercing the corporate veil to avoid fraud or injustice was not applied in a suit for damages arising from defects in a modular home manufactured and installed by defendant where there was no evidence that the corporation was defectively formed or formed to avoid personal liability on the part of the officers. Little v. Grizzly Mfg., 195 M 419, 636 P2d 839, 38 St. Rep. 1994 (1981).

Public Policy Against Personal Liability of Agent: As a matter of public policy, the officers and agents of a corporation must be shielded from personal liability for acts they take on behalf of the corporation in furtherance of corporate goals, policies, and business interests. Little v. Grizzly Mfg., 195 M 419, 636 P2d 839, 38 St. Rep. 1994 (1981).

Malicious Inducement of Breach of Contract — Individual Liability of Corporate Agents, Employees, Officers, or Directors: In a case of first impression in Montana, the issue was whether agents, employees, officers, or directors of a corporation may be held liable individually for the tort of malicious inducement of a breach of an employment contract. The resolution of the appeal depended upon a weighing of public policy considerations. The court held that the corporate veil should not be utilized as a protective device by those who employ corporate power or authority to serve their own ends. Tort liability for the inducement of breach of contract should be imposed when a corporate agent, employee, officer, or director induces a breach of contract for private benefit or because of personal feeling and purposes relative to a third party. The privilege of limited liability should be applicable in those situations where actions are motivated and taken in the furtherance of corporate purposes, policies, and interests. When plaintiff/appellant failed to show that the actions of individual defendants were not taken in furtherance of corporate purposes and interests, the summary judgment granted to the defendants was affirmed. Phillips v. Mont. Educ. Ass'n, 187 M 419, 610 P2d 154 (1980), followed in Bottrell v. Am. Bank, 237 M 1, 773 P2d 694, 46 St. Rep. 561 (1989), Lachenmaier v. First Bank Sys., Inc., 246 M 26, 803 P2d 614, 47 St. Rep. 2244 (1990), Mannix v. Butte Water Co., 249 M 372, 816 P2d 441, 48 St. Rep. 782 (1991), and King v. Zimmerman, 266 M 54, 878 P2d 895, 51 St. Rep. 659 (1994).

De Facto Corporation — Capacity to Contract: A de facto corporation has the same capacity to contract as a de jure corporation. Proof of de facto corporate existence is sufficient when the validity of a contract by a body of men claiming to be a corporation is in issue in a suit between third persons. Mont. Ass'n of Underwriters v. Dept. of Administration, 172 M 211, 563 P2d 577 (1977).

Defenses Held Collateral Attack: The defense of a corporation and one of its stockholders in an action by another stockholder to recover on a corporate note, that the note was void because the corporate powers of the company had lapsed upon the retirement of one of the directors who had sold his stock to the other two, constituted a collateral attack on the corporation. The defendant corporate stockholder was not in a position to assert that under the facts the activities of the corporation constituted a partnership between himself and plaintiff, the only other stockholder, so as to entitle him to halt the foreclosure of the mortgages and obtain an accounting. Dunham v. Natural Bridge Ranch Co., 115 M 579, 147 P2d 902 (1944).

Party Contracting With Ostensible Corporation Not to Deny Its Corporate Identity: One who has contracted with an ostensible corporation (in the instant case for the purchase of real property) may not deny its corporate identity when it is attempting by an action in ejectment to oust him after his defaults in making payment. An instrument designating a party as a corporation is prima facie evidence of corporate existence, sufficient under section 15-806, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Norwegian Lutheran Church of Am. v. Armstrong, 112 M 528, 118 P2d 380 (1941).

Estoppel: One who enters into a written contract with a corporation, designated as such therein, and thereunder incurs a financial obligation is estopped, under section 15-806, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), providing against the questioning of corporate existence, from denying the corporate capacity of plaintiff in an action to recover thereon. W. T. Rawleigh Co. v. Miller, 105 M 456, 73 P2d 552 (1937).

Effect of Corporate Abeyance on Liability: When the entity of a corporation has fallen into a condition of abeyance, the public is not supposed to know of the fact; hence, where strangers have dealt with the corporation, it can be held for all obligations assumed by its officers in its name. Hanson Sheep Co. v. Farmers & Traders' St. Bank, 53 M 324, 163 P 1151 (1917).

When and by Whom a Corporation May Be Attacked:

The rule that the legal capacity of a corporation cannot be inquired into collaterally in a controversy between the corporation and a private person does not preclude examination by the courts into the facts of a particular case to determine the identity of a person who uses the name of a corporation for his own purposes and to fix liability upon him for the ostensible corporate acts. Hanson Sheep Co. v. Farmers & Traders' St. Bank, 53 M 324, 163 P 1151 (1917), distinguished in Dunham v. Natural Bridge Ranch Co., 115 M 579, 147 P2d 902 (1944).

When there is no board of directors or secretary of a corporation, the entire capital stock of which is owned by a man and his wife, and when the man is president and has used the corporation to further his own personal ends, he is estopped to claim that he and the corporation are distinct entities, that he bears a fiduciary relation toward it, and that he had no authority to authorize a bank, with which he had deposited money for the corporation, to apply the deposit in discharge of his personal obligation. Hanson Sheep Co. v. Farmers & Traders' St. Bank, 53 M

324, 163 P 1151 (1917), distinguished in Dunham v. Natural Bridge Ranch Co., 115 M 579, 147 P2d 902 (1944).

Defect in Perfecting Organization: A corporation that has been engaged in business, apparently in good faith, cannot avoid liability on the ground that its directors, in the conduct of its private affairs, never observed the forms of law in perfecting the organization and therefore that it had ceased to exist as a corporation. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913).

Official Comments

Official Comments: The ABA Official Comments to the RMBCA state, in part:

Provisions similar to section 1.02 [this section] have their genesis in Trustees of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 17 U.S. (4 Wheat) 518 (1819), which held that the United States Constitution prohibited the application of newly enacted statutes to existing corporations while suggesting the efficacy of a reservation of power similar to section 1.02 [this section]. The purpose of section 1.02 [this section] is to avoid any possible argument that a corporation has contractual or vested rights in any specific statutory provision and to ensure that the state may in the future modify its corporation statutes as it deems appropriate and require existing corporations to comply with the statutes as modified.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is not based on the RMBCA. Instead, the legislature should retain MCA §35-1-109 [renumbered 35-1-119]. The primary difference is that the RMBCA results in liability only if the actions of persons are knowing, while the MCA provides for liability whether or not the actions are knowing. The Committee recommends retaining the MCA because it is consistent with joint liability under the Uniform Partnership Act (Title 35, Chapter 10) (individuals carrying on business, without being incorporated are, after all, in substance partners) and it adds to certainty. Creditors and others know that there will be personal liability unless certificate of incorporation has been issued.

This section of the law is intended to clarify that the doctrine of de facto corporations has been abolished. According to case law, a corporation will be treated as a de facto corporation, and its owners will be shielded from liability, if the following facts, described in Milwaukee Gold Extraction vs. Vorden, 37 Mont. 209 (1908), appear:

"1. . . . There is a law of the state . . . of the corporation's alleged existence authorizing the organization of such an organization;

2. That a bona fide attempt has been made to affect such organization; and

3. The actual [use] of the corporate powers, or some of them, which might rightfully have been used, had the corporation been regularly organized." Id. at 222.

This section of the law clarifies that notwithstanding the good faith of those purporting to act as a corporation, they have joint and several liability if they do not, in fact, have authority to act as a corporation. According to §2.03 [35-1-220] corporate existence begins only upon filing the articles of incorporation. While the abolition of the de facto corporation doctrine may burden the unwitting promoter who wrongfully assumes that a corporation is in existence, the promoter can easily limit this risk by waiting until the secretary of state returns a copy of the articles to the corporation. Abolishing the de facto corporation doctrine creates a bright line between corporations and nonincorporated businesses allowing far greater certainty for both promoters and those doing business with them.

The proposed section does not necessarily limit the doctrine of corporation by estoppel. This doctrine provides that if (a) a business held itself out as a corporation, and (b) if a third party dealing with it assumed it to be a corporation, both the corporation and the third party are estopped from raising the issue as to whether or not the corporation is validly incorporated. The corporation by estoppel doctrine differs from the de facto corporation doctrine in that the former examines the intent of the parties to a contract and the latter examines only the good faith of the promoters. As such, while the de facto corporation can serve to frustrate the reasonable expectations of third parties, the doctrine of corporation by estoppel does not.

GENERAL COMMENTS

Prior to the 1981 amendments, section 35-1-109 [renumbered as this section] had broad implications. Subsection (1) provided that if a person assumes to act as a corporation before the Certificate of Incorporation or the Certificate of Authority is issued, then that person is liable personally for all debts and liabilities incurred during that period of time. After incorporation or qualification, the corporation may assume responsibility for the debts and liabilities, but the person originally incurring them still remains liable as well. Subsection (1) is verbatim from Model Act section 146 [1977].

Subsection (2), which was deleted [in 1981,] stated that one cannot resist an obligation to "an ostensible corporation" on the ground that there "was in fact no such corporation until that fact has been adjudged in a direct proceeding for the purpose." The provision was troublesome for several reasons. First, the impact of section 35-1-204 [now repealed] was to put to rest the out-moded concept of "de facto" corporations. As indicated in that section, upon issuance of a certificate of incorporation, the corporate existence begins and the certificate is conclusive evidence that all prerequisites have been complied with (except as to actions brought by the State). Thus, the phrase "ostensible corporation" is essentially meaningless under the Model Act. If a certificate of incorporation has been issued and if the State has not revoked the certificate, we are dealing with a true corporation; any entity without a certificate of incorporation is simply unincorporated. While one might have argued that "ostensible corporation" applied to any entity holding itself out as a corporation when in fact it has not received a certificate of incorporation (or whose certificate has been revoked by the state), the implication of former subsection (2) that such a fact is a defense to an obligation (i.e., is grounds to "resist" the obligation) ignores significant aspects of the law of Agency pertaining to unknown and/or undisclosed principals, the equitable doctrine of unjust enrichment, and laws pertaining to unincorporated associations. In short, the fact that the entity is not a corporation should not, in and of itself, be a defense to an otherwise valid obligation. The Model Act contains no provision comparable to former subsection (2).

1981 Amendment: Deleted former subsection (2) which read: "One who assumes an obligation to an ostensible corporation as such cannot resist the obligation on the ground that there was in fact no such corporation until that fact has been adjudged in a direct proceeding for the purpose."

Case Notes

Standing to File Construction Lien Despite Construction Corporation's Involuntary Dissolution: Plaintiff asserted that defendant had no standing to file a construction lien because defendant's corporation had been involuntarily dissolved for failure to file the first annual corporate report. The District Court disagreed, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Defendant filed the lien as an individual claimant and had standing to pursue the lien as a person who furnished services pursuant to a real estate improvement contract. It would have been inequitable for plaintiff to avoid an obligation because the corporation had been involuntarily dissolved after acting in good faith through its principals, and plaintiff was properly estopped from denying the status of the corporation. Weimar v. Lyons, 2007 MT 182, 338 M 242, 164 P3d 922 (2007), following Kosena v. Eck, 195 M 12, 635 P2d 1287 (1981).

Doctrine of Corporation by Estoppel Versus De Facto Corporation Doctrine — Requisite Donative Intent to Show Inter Vivos Gift to Corporation by Estoppel: A church incorporated in 1998. The attorney who filed the incorporation subsequently moved out of state, and because annual reports were not filed, the Secretary of State involuntarily dissolved the church's corporate status in 2000. The church's corporate status was reinstated in 2004. The church was not aware that it was not a valid corporation when it received a gift of property in 2002, but claimed that it was nevertheless a de facto corporation able to accept the gift. The couple who donated the property claimed that because they did not know that the church was not a valid corporation, they should be allowed to revoke the gift and that the subsequent reinstatement of the church's corporate status after the couple sought to revoke the gift did not retroactively create donative intent that the couple had revoked. The Supreme Court distinguished the de facto corporation, which was abolished in this section, from the doctrine of corporation by estoppel, which provides that a party that has dealt with a corporation cannot then deny the corporation's existence. The court applied the doctrine of corporation by estoppel to this case. It would be inequitable to allow defendants to escape possible liability just because the church, acting in good faith, was involuntarily dissolved at the time that the possible liability arose. Thus, defendants were equitably estopped from denying the corporate status of the church. The couple had the requisite donative intent to meet the definition of an irrevocable inter vivos gift, and as owner of the gifted property, the church had standing to sue. Valley Victory Church v. Sandon, 2005 MT 72, 326 M 340, 109 P3d 273 (2005).

35-1-216. Articles of incorporation.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-202 [now repealed] and delineates both mandatory (a) and permissive (b) requirements. The RMBCA does not require a statement as to the period of duration. (Cf. §35-1-202(1)(b); 35-1-108(1) [both repealed].) Section 3.02 of the RMBCA [35-1-115], however, states that existence is perpetual unless otherwise provided. Requirements for setting forth classes of shares (if any) and/or preferred or special class in series as found under §35-1-202(e) & (f) [now repealed] are treated in the RMBCA under §§6.01 and 6.02 [35-1-618 and 35-1-619]. Shareholders' preemptive rights as set forth under §35-1-202(g) [now repealed] are found in RMBCA §6.30 [35-1-535]. MCA §35-1-202(1) [now repealed] requires setting forth the number, names and addresses of the initial board members; RMBCA §2.02 [this section] makes this requirement permissive.

Because the articles of incorporation filed under §2.02 [this section] require less information than under previous law, those continuing to use the old form of articles of incorporation will still meet the requirements of the new statute.

The Committee debated two issues with respect to subsection (b)(4) [subsection (2)(d) of this section].

(a) The existing law does not allow a corporation to limit directors' liability if the actions amount to "willful misconduct, recklessness, or knowing violation of law." MCA §35-1-202(2)(a)(v)(B) [now repealed]. The standard under the RMBCA is an "intentional infliction of harm" standard. The Committee was convinced that the "intentional infliction of harm" standard was superior. The ABA Official Comment expressed the sentiments of the Committee:

Because adoption of a liability-limitation provision is left to the decision of the shareholders, they are given considerable latitude in the extent to which they are permitted to limit directors' liability. Accordingly, the exceptions to the statute are few and narrow. As important as validating the shareholders' right to determine for themselves the extent of the directors' liability is stating the limits of this right in terms promoting a clear understanding of the conduct which is and which is not included in the limitation of liability. Terms such as "duty of loyalty," "good faith," "bad faith," and "recklessness" seem no more precise than (and therefore as potentially expansive as) "gross negligence." All of these formulations are characterizations of conduct rather than definitions of it. Characterizations by nature tend to be more elastic than definitions.

Directors should be afforded reasonable predictability; they are entitled to know whether a contemplated course of action will result in personal liability for money damages. Limits on their exculpation from liability are appropriate but should be expressed in terms that minimize the opportunity for after-the-fact second-guessing.

The language of the exceptions to section 2.02(b)(4) [subsection (2)(d) of this section] is intended to express the parameters of the shareholders' right to limit the directors' liability in terms that will promote predictability. First, some types of improper conduct are so clearly without any societal benefit that the law should not appear to endorse such conduct, especially in the case of a state-created entity such as a corporation. Second, any liability limitation will be prospective and, therefore, by definition, the shareholders will not be able to know in advance the exact nature or extent of any claims that they may be giving up. Third, the public has an interest in encouraging good corporate governance. While the exceptions to the shareholders' right to limit liability are few and narrow, they validate important standards of conduct. Finally, in many cases, there will be shareholders who do not vote in favor of the liability limitation. For these shareholders, there should be an irreducible core of protection, especially in view of the fact that in some cases the votes of the directors themselves as shareholders may be sufficient to approve adoption of the provision.

(b) The Committee also considered whether articles should permit similar limitations on the liability of officers. It examined the Code of Virginia §13.1-692.1 and others that permit limitations of liability of officers. The committee rejected including limitations on the liability of officers in the statute because:

i) Officers are more likely to be employees, receiving a salary and, as such, will agree to serve without indemnification.

ii) Officers are agents of the corporation, subject to direction that they must follow. Directors are not subject to direction. The duties of officers are clearer than directors' duties.

iii) Directors should be afforded greater protection because their function is more discretionary.

iv) Officers, under certain circumstances, are already afforded protection from liability through indemnification provisions.

35-1-217. Filing requirements.

Official Comments

Official Comments: MCA Title 35, Chapter 1, contains no comparable section which delineates an all-inclusive list of document filing requirements. Instead those MCA sections requiring filings contain sections setting forth document filing requirements for particular filing.

A major change effectuated by §1.20 [this section] is that, as a general rule, any officer may execute a corporate document. The ABA Official Comments describe three advantages to the new filing requirements.

The purposes of the filing requirements of Chapter 1 are: (1) to simplify the filing requirements by the elimination of formal or technical requirements that serve little purpose, (2) to minimize the number of pieces of paper to be processed by the secretary of state, and (3) to eliminate all possible disputes between persons seeking to file documents and the secretary of state as to the legal efficacy of documents.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Sufficiency of Pleading: The allegation that plaintiff was duly incorporated under the laws of the state by the subscribers to the subscription contract in pursuance of the terms thereof was not a sufficient averment that all the conditions of the contract had been fulfilled. Enterprise Sheet Metal Works v. Schendel, 55 M 42, 173 P 1059 (1918).

Failure to Perfect Organization: When a corporation has been regularly brought into existence, it is not deprived of the right to exercise corporate functions by the failure of the directors, designated by the statute, to perfect the organization by taking steps subsequent to the issuance of the certificate by the Secretary of State. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913).

Application of Section: Before the 1929 amendment, section 15-112, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), requiring that articles of incorporation be filed in county where corporation held real estate, applied to domestic corporations only. Uihlein v. Caplice Commercial Co., 39 M 327, 102 P 564 (1909).

Prerequisite to Legal Formation: The issuance by the Secretary of State of a certificate that a certified copy of the articles of incorporation of a company organized under the provisions of the Civil Code of 1895, containing the required statement of facts, had been filed in his office, was a prerequisite to the legal formation of a domestic corporation. State ex rel. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Rotwitt, 18 M 87, 44 P 409 (1896).

1997 Amendment: Chapter 290 at end of first sentence in (1) deleted "provided that the secretary of state receives the original document within 5 working days of the receipt of the facsimile copy"; deleted (2) through (4) that read: "A facsimile copy may be filed under this section if it:

(a) is produced by a method of transmission of images in which the image is scanned at the transmitter, reconstructed at the receiving station, and duplicated on paper at the receiving station; and

(b) is legible and the same size as the original.

(3) During the 5-day period referred to in subsection (1), the recorded facsimile copy constitutes constructive notice for all purposes of the original document.

(4) If the original document is not received within 5 working days of receipt of the facsimile copy as provided in subsection (1), the filing of the facsimile copy is void"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 18, 1997.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Action by State: Section 15-808, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), providing for inquiry into corporate business or incorporation, limited its effect to an action by the State at the suit of the Attorney General. First Nat'l Bank in Billings v. First Bank Stock Corp., 306 F2d 937 (9th Cir. 1962), affirming 197 F. Supp. 417 (D.C. Mont. 1961).

Right to Challenge Corporate Existence: When the records of the Secretary of State show that a company has been regularly incorporated and is carrying on business as a corporation, it must be considered at least a corporation de facto. The state alone, by a direct proceeding for that purpose, can challenge its existence or its right to do business in the state. Sun River Stock & Land Co. v. Mont. Trust & Sav. Bank, 81 M 222, 262 P 1039 (1928), distinguished in Springer v. Opsahl, 229 M 10, 744 P2d 884, 44 St. Rep. 1738 (1987).

Foreign Corporation: Admission in evidence of a certified copy of the articles of incorporation of a foreign company, though properly certified, was nevertheless erroneous in the absence of a certified copy of the laws of the state of its incorporation showing the mode of incorporation and the proper custodian of the original, when such company had never complied with the laws of nor was doing business in this state. Harvey E. Mack Co. v. Ryan, 80 M 524, 261 P 283 (1927).

Presumption: Section 15-117, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), presumed a corporation with capital subscribed under the condition precedent implied by the general rule or in accordance with an agreement had by the subscribers either at the time they made their subscriptions or thereafter. Enterprise Sheet Metal Works v. Schendel, 55 M 42, 173 P 1059 (1918).

When and by Whom a Corporation May Be Attacked:

After a corporation has been lawfully organized, its character as such cannot be inquired into collaterally at the instance of a private citizen in a controversy between him and it, and its legal capacity can be brought in question by the State only through its proper officer, as prescribed in section 15-808, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and for one of the causes enumerated in 27-28-102. Barnes v. Smith, 48 M 309, 137 P 541 (1913).

Failure to comply with statutory provisions relative to the formation of corporations does not ipso facto work a dissolution or permit the question of corporate capacity to be raised collaterally by a private citizen in a controversy between him and the corporation. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913).

It was the purpose of the Legislature to prohibit inquiry in any private civil action into the question whether the ostensible corporation has a legal existence, further than to ascertain whether the requirements prescribed by the section of the code relative to the formation of corporations have been observed. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913).

Corporations Organized Prior to 1895:

Section 15-117, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), relating to evidence of corporate existence or capacity, cannot refer to a corporation organized prior to July 1, 1895, for in terms it applies only to institutions of the kind to which certificates of incorporation have been issued, or what is the same thing organized since the adoption of the codes. Billings Realty Co. v. Big Ditch Co., 43 M 251, 115 P 828 (1911).

Since the year 1895, there has been no provision for the issuance of a certificate to a corporation formed prior thereto, but proof of the existence of such a corporation could be made under prior laws. Sections 15-117 and 15-118, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), cannot be held to declare the only rule of evidence in a case involving proof of corporate existence but apply only to corporations organized since the adoption of the codes. Billings Realty Co. v. Big Ditch Co., 43 M 251, 115 P 828 (1911).

35-1-221. Correcting filed document.

Official Comments

Official Comments: There is no comparable MCA section. The current code requires the filing of an amendment, if a correction is necessary. The ABA's Official Comments describe the advantages of this section in this way:

Section 1.24 [this section] permits making corrections in filed documents without refiling the entire document or submitting formal articles of amendment. This correction procedure has two advantages: (1) filing articles of correction may be less expensive than refiling the document or filing articles of incorporation, and (2) articles of correction do not alter the effective date of the underlying document being corrected. Indeed, under section 1.24(c) [subsection (3) of this section], even the correction relates back to the original effective date of the document except as to persons relying on the original document and adversely affected by the correction. As to these persons, the effective date of articles of correction is the date the articles are filed.

Official Comments: Subsection (b) [subsection (2) of this section] eliminates the vested rights doctrine of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 17 U.S. 4 (4 Wheat.) 518 (1819). The comments to the existing law also state an intent to eliminate the vested rights doctrine, but the language was not as clear as in the new law. The vested rights doctrine stated that certain rights as shareholders are vested and cannot be modified. The doctrine allows, in effect, minority shareholders to hold majority shareholders hostage.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Malicious Inducement of Breach of Contract — Individual Liability of Corporate Agents, Employees, Officers, or Directors: In a case of first impression in Montana, the issue was whether agents, employees, officers, or directors of a corporation may be held liable individually for the tort of malicious inducement of a breach of an employment contract. The resolution of the appeal depended upon a weighing of public policy considerations. The court held that the corporate veil should not be utilized as a protective device by those who employ corporate power or authority to serve their own ends. Tort liability for the inducement of breach of contract should be imposed when a corporate agent, employee, officer, or director induces a breach of contract for private benefit or because of personal feeling and purposes relative to a third party. The privilege of limited liability should be applicable in those situations where actions are motivated and taken in the furtherance of corporate purposes, policies, and interests. When plaintiff/appellant failed to show that the actions of individual defendants were not taken in furtherance of corporate purposes and interests, the summary judgment granted to the defendants was affirmed. Phillips v. Mont. Educ. Ass'n, 187 M 419, 610 P2d 154 (1980), followed in Bottrell v. Am. Bank, 237 M 1, 773 P2d 694, 46 St. Rep. 561 (1989), Lachenmaier v. First Bank Sys., Inc., 246 M 26, 803 P2d 614, 47 St. Rep. 2244 (1990), Mannix v. 35-1-237. Emergency bylaws.

Official Comments

Official Comments: There is no similar provision in the existing law. The ABA Official Comment best states the reason for this provision of the law:

Section 2.07 [this section] is no longer an optional provision (as was the case with its predecessor in earlier versions of the Model Act) but is unqualifiedly recommended for adoption. The problem it addresses is potentially present in every state and in every corporation, and the widespread acceptance of the earlier provision to date by a number of states argues that it be uniformly adopted.

The adoption of emergency bylaws in advance of an emergency not only clarifies lines of command and responsibility but also tends to ensure continuity of responsibility. The board of directors may be authorized by the emergency bylaws, for example, to designate the offices or other persons, in order of seniority and subject to various conditions, who may be deemed to be directors during the emergency.

Part 3
Corporate Name, Registered Office and Agent, and Service of Process

35-1-308. Corporate name.

Official Comments

Official Comments: The proposal abolishes the standard of "deceptively similar" when testing corporate names and adopts in its place "distinguishable." The Committee's representative from the secretary of state's office reports the existing standard is difficult and time consuming to apply. The ABA Official Comments explain:

The revision of the Model Act is based on the fundamental premise that its name provisions should only ensure that each corporation has a sufficiently distinctive name so that it may be distinguished from other corporations upon the records of the secretary of state. The general business corporation statute should not be a partial substitute for a general assumed name, unfair competition, or antifraud statute. As a result, the Model Act does not restrict the power of a corporation to adopt or use an assumed or fictitious name with the same freedom as an individual or impose a requirement that an "official" name not be "deceptively similar" to another corporate name (a requirement of earlier versions of the Model Act). Principles of unfair competition, not the business corporation act, provide the limits on the competitive use of similar names.

The ABA Official Comments give the following guidance for determining whether a name is distinguishable:

Thus, confusion in an absolute or linguistic sense is the appropriate test under the Model Act, not the competitive relationship between the corporations, which is the test for fraud or unfair competition. The precise scope of "distinguishable upon the records of the secretary of state" is an appropriate subject of regulation by the office of secretary of state in order to ensure uniformity of administration. Corporate names that differ only in the words used to indicate corporateness are generally not distinguishable. Thus, if ABC Corporation is in existence, the names "ABC Inc.," "ABC Co.," or "ABC Corp." should not be viewed as distinguishable. Similarly, minor variations between names that are unlikely to be noticed, such as the substitution of a "." for a "," or the substitution of an arabic numeral for a word, such as "2" for "Two", or the substitution of a lower case letter for a capital, such as "d" for "D," generally should not be viewed as being distinguishable.

It should be noted that the mere fact that a corporate name is permitted by the Montana Business Corporation Act does not necessarily mean that it may be used in derogation of existing rights of other parties (e.g., a tradename or trademark owner). The Committee agrees with George Gottlieb who states:

"The fact of incorporation under a given name is not the equivalent of the right to use that name. . . . A trademark owner with superior rights may assert them even before and certainly after the new company begins to conduct business, and a 'conflicting' use by the new company of its corporate name may constitute trademark infringement and unfair competition." Gottlieb, "Corporate Name 'Clearance' - Potential Trademark Trouble Spot," 33 Bus. Law. 2263 (1978).

Subsection (b)(5) [subsection (2)(e) of this section] is not a part of the RMBCA, but was added to make it clear that a corporate name of a dissolved corporation is not available during the period in which dissolution may be revoked.

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Applicability of Business Judgment Rule to Conflict of Interest Transaction: On a certified question from the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals, the Montana Supreme Court held that the business judgment rule does not apply to challenges based on a director's conflict of interest. Warren v. Campbell Farming Corp., 2011 MT 324, 363 Mont. 190, 271 P.3d 36.

Use of Corporation by Individual as Subterfuge — Piercing Corporate Veil to Hold Individual Liable for Breach of Lease: Defendant formed a corporation to render dental services and leased a building for a dental practice with two other dentists, including plaintiff. After the practice became successful, defendant demanded possession of the entire property by letter. When plaintiff did not respond, defendant vacated the building on behalf of the corporation and discontinued paying rent, but the decision was never documented in the corporation's records. Plaintiff sued for breach of the lease contract. Following trial, the District Court concluded that defendant was the alter ego of the corporation and the real party in interest under the lease and that it would be inequitable to allow defendant to use the corporation as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience or justify wrong. Thus, the corporate veil was pierced, and defendant was held personally responsible for damages arising from the breached lease. On appeal, the Supreme Court applied the test in Berlin v. Boedecker, 268 M 444, 887 P2d 1180 (1994), to determine whether circumstances were appropriate for piercing the corporate veil. The court noted that the veil may not be pierced simply because an individual is the alter ego of a corporation and the true party in interest. There must be substantial evidence that the corporate entity was used as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, or commit fraud, but bad faith alone may be a sufficient cause for piercing the veil. Here, the corporation was unable to satisfy the judgment because it was undercapitalized from its inception, suggesting defendant acted in bad faith. Further, it was inequitable for defendant to personally profit from renting property to the corporation and protect himself from liability with the undercapitalized corporation. The judgment was affirmed. Peschel Family Trust v. Colonna, 2003 MT 216, 317 M 127, 75 P3d 793 (2003).

Previously Raised but Unlitigated Alter Ego Claim Not Barred by Res Judicata: Following a dispute over the sale of irrigation equipment, H-D Irrigating and Lane sued Kimble Properties and Kimble for false representation of the irrigation equipment and damages. Kimble Properties and Kimble counterclaimed for the balance due on the equipment, alleging that H-D Irrigating was a sham and the alter ego of Lane. The alter ego claim was never pursued. The Supreme Court eventually decided the case in H-D Irrigating, Inc. v. Kimble Properties, Inc., 2000 MT 212, 301 M 34, 8 P3d 95 (2000), and remanded for judgment in favor of Kimble. In an effort to collect, Kimble sought to compel Lane to testify regarding the assets of H-D Irrigating, but rather than appear, Lane filed bankruptcy and received a stay on further proceedings. Kimble then filed an action to collect from Lane personally, again raising the alter ego issue. Lane asserted that the issue had been already decided in the prior litigation and sought supervisory control on res judicata grounds. After accepting supervisory control, the Supreme Court decided that res judicata did not bar Kimble's litigation of the alter ego claim. The action to pierce the H-D Irrigating corporate veil was neither previously adjudicated in District Court nor were the facts upon which the claim was based known to Kimble at the time that the counterclaim was filed or at any other time during the course of the previous action. The case was thus remanded for further proceedings on the alter ego claim. Lane v. District Court, 2003 MT 130, 316 M 55, 68 P3d 819 (2003), applying Berlin v. Boedecker, 268 M 444, 887 P2d 1180 (1994).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Corporate Officer Without Authority for Pro Se Representation of Corporation — Refusal to Consider Brief: Plaintiff realty corporation brought an action in District Court to find defendants in default for failure to make payments under a contract for deed. Plaintiff was represented by counsel in District Court, but on appeal, it was represented by the president of the corporation. The Supreme Court, sua sponte, raised the issue of whether the corporation could be represented by its president and held that it could not. Citing Weaver v. Law Firm of Graybill, 246 M 175, 803 P2d 1089 (1990), the Supreme Court held that a corporation is a separate legal entity and cannot appear on its own behalf through an agent other than an attorney. The Supreme Court therefore determined not to consider the brief filed by the president on behalf of the corporation. Cont. Realty, Inc. v. Gerry, 251 M 150, 822 P2d 1083, 48 St. Rep. 1134 (1991).

Dual Prongs for Piercing Corporate Veil — Evidence of Fraud Sufficient: There are two prongs to piercing the corporate veil. First, the person purporting to represent the corporation must be found to be the corporate "alter ego". Second, there must be a showing that the corporate entity was used as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, or perpetrate either actual or constructive fraud. Drilcon, Inc. v. Roil Energy Corp., Inc., 230 M 166, 749 P2d 1058, 45 St. Rep. 114 (1988), followed in Berlin v. Boedecker, 268 M 444, 887 P2d 1180, 51 St. Rep. 569 (1994).

Piercing Corporate Veil Doctrine — Refusal to Apply: The doctrine of piercing the corporate veil to avoid fraud or injustice was not applied in a suit for damages arising from defects in a modular home manufactured and installed by defendant where there was no evidence that the corporation was defectively formed or formed to avoid personal liability on the part of the officers. Little v. Grizzly Mfg., 195 M 419, 636 P2d 839, 38 St. Rep. 1994 (1981).

Public Policy Against Personal Liability of Agent: As a matter of public policy, the officers and agents of a corporation must be shielded from personal liability for acts they take on behalf of the corporation in furtherance of corporate goals, policies, and business interests. Little v. Grizzly Mfg., 195 M 419, 636 P2d 839, 38 St. Rep. 1994 (1981).

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Lawsuit by Shareholder Causing Damages Considered Breach of Fiduciary Duty of Care: Sletteland brought a suit against two other corporate shareholders for charging excessive attorney fees and seeking their removal as corporate directors. The District Court held that the fees were excessive, but found no grounds for removal. The other shareholders filed a counterclaim against Sletteland, alleging that he breached his fiduciary duty in bringing the lawsuit because the timing of the suit caused refinancing of a project to fail, resulting in damage to the corporation and to other shareholders. The District Court agreed, and both parties appealed their respective issues. The Supreme Court reversed on the issue of excessive fees, but affirmed on the issue of breach of fiduciary duty. The fiduciary duty between shareholders of a close corporation is one of utmost good faith and loyalty. Sletteland admittedly knew of the refinancing and, as an attorney and investment banker, also knew the effect that a lawsuit alleging misconduct by board members would have on a refinancing effort. In fact, it appeared that the suit was brought to specifically derail the refinancing. Sletteland was the person who determined the timing of the suit, which was filed immediately before the individuals involved in the refinancing were to meet for discussions, and when asked to withdraw the suit so refinancing could conclude, he refused to do so. Sletteland did not use the care that an ordinarily prudent person would use in a similar situation, resulting in the breach of fiduciary duty. The Supreme Court also affirmed the award of damages. Although future damages could not be calculated exactly in this case, the District Court did not abuse its discretion in basing its calculations on expert testimony of a well-known regional economist. Sletteland v. Roberts, 2000 MT 382, 304 M 21, 16 P3d 1062, 57 St. Rep. 1639 (2000).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Stock Issue Sales — Duty to Minority Stockholders — Business Judgment Rule: When director and majority stockholder at time of suit became such during the life of the corporation by subscribing to stock issues when other stockholders did not, there was no breach of fiduciary duty by him to minority stockholders because his subscriptions saved the corporation; they were available to all stockholders with a detailed prospectus setting forth pertinent matter; and although the issues may not have been a perfect solution to corporate problems, they were acceptable under the "business judgment rule". Ski Roundtop, Inc. v. Hall, 202 M 260, 658 P2d 1071, 40 St. Rep. 74 (1983), followed in Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990).

Liability on Contracts: Notwithstanding the provision of 35-1-401 (now repealed) that the business and corporate affairs shall be managed by a board of directors, a close corporation in which the bulk of the stock was owned by the president, and the rest by his wife and son who also served as vice-president and secretary respectively, could not avoid liability to perform an option agreement on the ground that the president and secretary had no authority to bind the corporation on such agreements without the ratification of the board of directors, which had not occurred, because (1) the officers had express or implied power to make such an agreement, (2) even if they did not, the officers were estopped to deny the option by their course of conduct, and (3) as owners of the corporation they were not entitled to rely on the corporate form to shield them from their obligations. Hauptman v. Edwards, Inc., 170 M 310, 553 P2d 975 (1976).

Implied Authority of Corporate President — Doctrine of Estoppel to Enforce Lease Option: When two of the corporation's three directors, one of whom was the corporate president and controlling shareholder, signed an option to lease land agreement, the corporation could not assert lack of corporate authority as a defense to the lease option obligation because of the implied authority of a corporate president to act on behalf of the corporation. The doctrine of estoppel was applicable. Hauptman v. Edwards, Inc., 170 M 310, 553 P2d 975 (1976).

Discretion of Directors: When the board of directors in good faith considered it not in the best interests of the corporation not to prosecute an action on behalf of the corporation against another, a dissenting director and stockholder could not force the board to prosecute the action by means of an action against the board and the third party. Brooks v. Brooks Pontiac, Inc., 143 M 256, 389 P2d 185 (1963).

When Corporate Entity in Abeyance: When the capital stock passes into the hands of a single person, the entity of the corporation, except so far as it is necessary to protect the rights of strangers who deal with it through its ostensible officers and agents, is entirely in abeyance and its functions for the time being cease. Commercial Credit Co. v. O'Brien, 115 M 199, 146 P2d 637 (1943), appeal dismissed in 323 US 665 (1944); Scott v. Prescott, 69 M 540, 223 P 490 (1924), (citing numerous authorities).

Power to Sell Assets:

In the absence of statute expressly so providing, the directors of a solvent corporation have no authority to dispose of accumulated property except in furtherance and in the ordinary course of its business; corporations have no power to make gifts ultra vires. Hanrahan v. Andersen, 108 M 218, 90 P2d 494 (1939).

Under the common-law powers reserved to corporations by the proviso in section 15-901, et seq., R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and enumerated in a general way in sections 15-401 and 15-801, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the board of directors of a going corporation could, in the proper pursuit of its business and within the purposes of its creation, but against the dissent of a minority of its stockholders, sell a leasehold interest in realty with improvements thereon, and when such sale was made before plaintiffs had judgment against the selling corporation, they acquired no title under execution sale and nonsuit was properly granted in their action in ejectment against the purchaser. Wortman v. Luna Park Amusement Co., 61 M 89, 201 P 570 (1921), explained in N. Min. Corp. v. Trunz, 124 F2d 14 (9th Cir. 1941).

Directors Governing Body: The board of directors of a corporation and not its stockholders conducts and controls its business and property, so long as it acts in the manner prescribed by law. Pioneer Minerals Corp. v. Larabie Bros. Bankers, Inc., 99 M 358, 43 P2d 884 (1935).

Qualification of Director:

The provision of section 15-401, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), which required that "directors of corporations for profit must be holders of stock therein in an amount to be fixed by the bylaws of the corporation" unquestionably contemplated that the directors should be bona fide holders of the qualifying stock. Sun River Stock & Land Co. v. Mont. Trust & Sav. Bank, 81 M 222, 262

P 1039 (1928); Scott v. Prescott, 69 M 540, 223 P 490 (1924); Barnes v. Smith, 48 M 309, 137 P 541 (1913).

To render one eligible to the office of a director of a private corporation, his name, under section 15-401, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), was required to appear on its books as one of its stockholders and, under section 15-504, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), if his name did not so appear thereon 10 days prior to an election of directors, he could not vote at such election. Gillies v. Robert E. Lee Min. Co., 78 M 402, 254 P 422 (1927).

In requiring the directors of a corporation having capital stock to be stockholders, the Legislature intended that the directors should be bona fide owners of stock. The result of the requirement is that when the capital stock passes into the hands of a single person, the entity of the corporation, except so far as it is necessary to protect the rights of strangers who deal with it through its ostensible officers and agents, is entirely in abeyance, and its functions for the time being cease. Barnes v. Smith, 48 M 309, 137 P 541 (1913).

Upon the assumption that the sale of his stock in a corporation ipso facto vacated the office of the seller as a director, such result did not follow when at the time of a special meeting of the board negotiations for the sale, though pending, were not completed. O'Rourke v. Grand Opera House Co., 47 M 459, 133 P 965 (1913).

Admission of One Director Not Binding: The directors of a corporation act for it only as a body, and therefore admissions or declarations of an individual director are not binding upon it unless authority to make them was duly conferred. Raish v. Orchard Canal Co., 67 M 140, 218 P 655 (1923).

Liability on Contracts: A corporation cannot be held liable for preliminary contracts made by its promoters authorized by a majority of its incorporators or stockholders but is only bound on such contracts as are made by its board of directors acting within the scope of their powers or by ministerial officers empowered to make them. Kirkup v. Anaconda Amusement Co., 59 M 469, 197 P 1005 (1921).

Duty of Directors Generally: While it is entirely competent for the directors to manage and conduct the business of the corporation through duly authorized agents, the directors themselves are the agents ultimately responsible. They therefore cannot abdicate their duties or permit others to act in their stead for the corporation or the stockholders. Deschamps v. Loiselle, 50 M 565, 148 P 335 (1915).

Ratification of Directors, When Presumed: The action of the stockholders of a corporation at a meeting at which every outstanding share of stock was duly represented and voted in favor of the issuance of a certain number of shares to the promoters of the company in payment for their services, a majority of the directors being present and assenting, will be considered to have been ratified by the board of directors. Case Notes

Applicability of Business Judgment Rule to Conflict of Interest Transaction: On a certified question from the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals, the Montana Supreme Court held that the business judgment rule does not apply to challenges based on a director's conflict of interest. Warren v. Campbell Farming Corp., 2011 MT 324, 363 Mont. 190, 271 P.3d 36.

Dissolved Corporation's Officer's Use of Corporate Funds for Personal Expenses: Although the Montana Business Corporation Act does not specifically limit a director's use of corporate property to corporate purposes, the limitation is implied by the duties of good faith and care fundamental to a director's relationship to the corporation. Absent shareholders consent, defendant, who was president, director, and majority shareholder of a corporation, was not authorized to use its money for noncorporate purposes, and after it was dissolved, he was required to hold its assets in trust until creditor and shareholder debts were satisfied. Therefore, he was not authorized to write checks on the corporation's account to pay his personal debts to his attorney and former wife. He produced no evidence to support his claim that his need to pay child support to his wife and that his arrest for failure to do so would negatively affect the company's future and therefore justified the checks to her. Furthermore, it was not in the best interests of winding up the dissolved corporation. Moreover, it was not a defense that because of his ownership interest in the company he was spending his own money. The shareholders have a vested equitable interest in a dissolved corporation's property, but do not have a legal ownership interest in the property until the creditors are paid and the winding up is complete, at which point the shareholders have a legal ownership interest deriving from their right to a pro rata share of the assets remaining after the creditors are paid. Because the corporation was insolvent when the checks were written, there would have been no assets left for the shareholders had the creditors been paid off at the time that the checks were written. Therefore, it could not be said that defendant stole their money, and the theft conviction was set aside. St. v. Debus, 2002 MT 307, 313 M 57, 59 P3d 1154 (2002).

Breach of Fiduciary Duty in Conversion of Corporate Property Without Requisite Notice and Shareholder Approval — Punitive Damages Unavailable Absent Showing of Actual Malice or Fraud: Phil was two-thirds majority shareholder in Trifad Entertainment, Inc. (Trifad), and Brad was one-third minority shareholder and Trifad director. Following Phil's extradition to Florida on racketeering charges, Brad secured a loan for $15,000, deposited the money in the Trifad account, and then sold virtually all of Trifad's assets to himself for $15,000. In addition, Brad wrote checks on Trifad's account for taxes owed and for estimated tax payments and withdrew one-third of the remaining balance and left two-thirds in the account, all without attempting to contact Phil. Phil later sued Brad for breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and conversion and requested punitive damages, contending that Brad's actions were performed with actual malice and constituted actual fraud. At trial, Brad contended that the actions were reasonable considering Phil was in jail facing criminal charges, and Brad cross-claimed for indemnification from Trifad for litigation expenses and liabilities incurred in his capacity as Trifad director. The District Court found for Brad on all counts, but denied corporate indemnification. Both Phil and Brad appealed. The Supreme Court reversed, finding that Brad failed to comply with 35-1-823 by selling corporate property without the requisite notice and shareholder approval. Although contacting Phil would have been difficult, it was not impossible. However, even if Phil had been unavailable for consultation, 35-1-823 does not contain any exceptions to the notice and approval requirements governing the sale of corporate assets. Further, the sale constituted conversion because Brad exercised unauthorized dominion over Trifad property by transferring ownership to himself. The case was remanded for a determination of damages, including possible damages other than those provided in 27-1-320 if peculiar circumstances warranted compensation for future lost income and profits. The District Court erred in concluding that Brad did not breach his fiduciary duties to Trifad; however, absent proof of actual malice or actual fraud, punitive damages were not warranted. Because a breach of fiduciary duty occurred, Brad could not claim to be wholly successful in the action, so Brad's claim for corporate indemnification also failed under 35-1-453. Trifad Entertainment, Inc. v. Anderson, 2001 MT 227, 306 M 499, 36 P3d 363 (2001).

Official Comments

Official Comments: Note 30% leeway to alter the number of directors granted to the board of directors under §8.03(b) [subsection (2) of this section] under certain circumstances. The intent of this language, according to the official comments, is to limit the power of the board in this regard because the determination of the size of the board should be left to the shareholders. The comments provide that subsections b & c [subsections (2) and (3) of this section] have "no application to corporation in which the size of the board is fixed by the bylaws and the shareholders reserve to themselves the power to amend bylaws."

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Cumulative Voting: A corporation may not deprive a stockholder of the right of cumulative voting by any act on its part. Sensabaugh v. Polson Plywood Co., 135 M 562, 342 P2d 1064 (1959).

Authority of Stockholders: Before the stockholders of a corporation can go into court, they must first exhaust their remedy within the corporation itself. Because of the power and authority lodged in the stockholders to elect directors, courts of equity refuse to listen to their complaints unless it appears that the situation of the parties is such that they cannot secure relief from the corporate authorities. Brandt v. McIntosh, 47 M 70, 130 P 413 (1913), explained in Noble v. Farmers Union Trading Co., 123 M 518, 216 P2d 925 (1950), distinguished in Malcom v. Stondall Land Co., 129 M 142, 284 P2d 258 (1955). See Moss v. Goodhart, 47 M 257, 131 P 1071 (1913).

Agreement to Continue Trustees in Office: A contract by which it was agreed that certain persons should be trustees until the business of a mining corporation should be in successful operation was contrary to section 3830, Revised Codes 1907, prior to 1915 amendment (later 15-403, R.C.M. 1947, now repealed), and void. Glass v. Basin & Bay St. Min. Co., 31 M 21, 77 P 302 (1904).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Notice of Resignation: An informal written notice delivered to the president of a corporation by one of its directors, to the effect that the writer thereby resigned his office as such, was sufficient, the method prescribed by section 15-409, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), in this behalf being permissive, not exclusive. Goodrich Rubber Co. v. Helena Motor Car Co., 53 M 526, 165 P 454 (1917).

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.08(c) [subsection (3) of this section] is not part of the RMBCA, but retains the existing scheme for removing directors. Because this scheme may have been the basis for control share agreements, it is unwise to unilaterally change the current scheme. As such, the current scheme has been retained.

35-1-425. Removal of directors by judicial proceeding.

Official Comments

Official Comments: There is no comparable MCA section. This section provides for removal of dishonest directors in those instances in which the majority of the shareholders might still wish to retain that director. Shareholders with less than 10% holdings may still bring an action against a director in a derivative suit under this provision (See "Official Comments") and in compliance with the provisions of this Act.

The courts probably have the inherent power to remove a director without statutory authority. See Maddox v. Norman, 669 P.2d 330 (Mont. 1983) and Baker v. Commercial Body Builders, Inc., 264 Or. 614, 507 P.2d 387, 395-96 (1973). See also Bahls, "Resolving Shareholder Dissension: Selection of the Appropriate Equitable Remedy," 15 J. Corp. Law 285 (1990). This remedy is already available with respect to statutory close corporations. See MCA §35-9-502.

In the past, when directors engaged in fraudulent or dishonest conduct, aside from a derivative suit for damages, the only statutory remedy was dissolution of the corporation. See MCA §35-1-921 [now repealed]. In addition, the courts have also fashioned the remedy of a compelled share purchase (usually of the complaining shareholder). See Maddox, supra. Both remedies are draconian remedies, often unfairly impacting on value. If removal of the director is appropriate and will not unduly impinge on value, removal of the director may be the most efficient solution.

Examples of when removal of a director in this way might be appropriate are described in the ABA's Official Comments:

Section 8.09 [this section] authorizes the removal of a director who is found in a judicial proceeding to have engaged in fraudulent or dishonest conduct or gross abuse of office. For example, a judicial proceeding (as contrasted with removal under section 8.08 [35-1-424]) may be necessary or appropriate in the following situations:

(1) In a closely held corporation, the director charged with misconduct is elected by voting group or cumulative voting, and the shareholders with power to prevent his removal exercise that power despite the existence of fraudulent or dishonest conduct. The classic example is where the director charged with misconduct himself possesses sufficient votes to prevent his own removal and exercises his voting power to that end.

(2) In a publicly held corporation, the director charged with misconduct declines to resign, though urged to do so, and because of the large number of widely scattered shareholders, a special shareholders' meeting can be held only after a period of delay and at considerable expense.

It is emphasized that this legislation does not allow removal of a director for mere oppression or violating the reasonable expectations of the shareholders or other directors. Instead, removal is only permitted if the director engages in "fraudulent or dishonest conduct, or gross abuse of authority or discretion."

Case Notes

Error in Modification of Rate for Legal Work: The partnership agreement of a limited partnership included a limitation on the general partners' ability to incur legal expenses, but provided that two of the partners could be employed to perform legal services for the partnership, and limited compensation to reasonable hourly rates in an amount not to exceed a total of $60,000 a year without approval. A dispute between partners resulted in a claim that the attorneys had charged excessive rates of $225 an hour and thus should be removed as directors. The District Court found that the attorneys overcharged and required repayment based on a reduced hourly rate. The Supreme Court disagreed and reversed. The contract language clearly allowed for employment of the attorneys, and the partnership was aware in advance of the attorneys' hourly rate. The fees were reasonable given the complexity of the specialized work and the fact that other attorneys in that field charged even higher rates. The District Court erred in modifying the rate for legal work. Sletteland v. Roberts, 2000 MT 382, 304 M 21, 16 P3d 1062, 57 St. Rep. 1639 (2000).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Liability of Officers and Directors: Under the statute at the time of the case providing for liability of directors for failure to file the required annual report, the directors were liable to creditors only for debts contracted during period corporation was in default in filing annual report but if the report when filed was false, officers and not directors were liable to creditors for damages resulting therefrom; a false report was not the same as no report, nor should the court refrain from enforcing annual report requirements because the statute did not require sufficient facts to apprise public of the corporation's financial condition. Mtn. St. Supply v. Mtn. St. Feed & Livestock Co., 149 M 198, 425 P2d 75 (1967).

False Certificate: The bylaws of a corporation provided that a special meeting of the board of directors could be called by the president or at his request by the secretary. The secretary and the third member of the board were without authority to call such a meeting. A surety company which relied upon the secretary's certificate that he had been empowered at the meeting to enter into a contract of indemnity in behalf of the corporation did so at its peril. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Am. Brewing Co., 63 M 474, 208 P 921 (1922).

False Report: The trustees of a corporation, who filed a report which did not specify as a debt of the company its liability on a covenant of title, are not liable for a false report if at the time the report was filed the breach of the covenant was not known to them, and such a report is not false in stating that the capital was paid in full because of the mere fact that the property for which it was issued has decreased in value. DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

No Personal Liability on Part of Bank Officer: The Supreme Court held that Scott was entitled to summary judgment, dismissing Kuhns's suit against him because Kuhns had presented no evidence, merely speculation, that Scott had acted for his own pecuniary interest and against the best interests of the corporation. Kuhns v. Scott, 259 M 68, 853 P2d 1200, 50 St. Rep. 685 (1993).

Effect of Failure to Give Notice: Director of closely held corporation was estopped to assert invalidity of vote by which remaining directors elected to repurchase his shares of stock pursuant to repurchase agreement when he was notified several times during a 90-day period of the board's resolution to repurchase his stock and when at no time during this period did he ever object to not receiving notice of the meeting at which the resolution was passed. State ex rel. Howeth v. D. A. Davidson & Co., 163 M 355, 517 P2d 722 (1973), overruled, with regard to elements of collateral estoppel, in Dagel v. Great Falls, 250 M 224, 819 P2d 186, 48 St. Rep. 919 (1991).

Statute Supplanted by Bylaws When They Provide for Special Meetings: Under the express terms of section 15-502, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the method therein provided for the calling of special meetings of the directors of a corporation had no application when the bylaws declare how such meetings shall be called. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Am. Brewing Co., 63 M 474, 208 P 921 (1922).

When Notice Is Dispensable: Notice in writing to the members of the board of directors of a corporation of the holding of a special meeting was not indispensable to the legality of the proceedings when all the directors attended and participated without objection in the dispatch of the business in hand. The only object of the notice is that the directors have an opportunity of being present at the meeting and taking part in its proceedings. O'Rourke v. DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

When Consent Judgment Against Corporation a Nullity: When the president of a corporation disregarded stockholders, directors, officers, bylaws, and the statutes in the conduct of corporate affairs, the contention that under a resolution adopted at a directors' meeting (held without a quorum) he had a right to compromise actions against the corporation and that therefore a judgment entered against it with his consent constituted a consent judgment by the corporation, the rights of which were not considered in entering it, was without merit since the corporation could not have consented to it under such circumstances. Hanrahan v. Andersen, 108 M 218, 90 P2d 494 (1939).

Quorum Sufficient to Transact Business: When only three out of five directors provided for in the articles of incorporation as the number constituting the board of directors of a railroad corporation had been selected by the stockholders, the corporate acts of the three, constituting as they did a quorum, were valid as against an attack by one outside the corporation or by the State so long as they acted either unanimously or by a majority of such quorum. Great Falls & Teton County Ry. v. Ganong, 48 M 54, 136 P 390 (1913).

35-1-439. Committees.

Official Comments

Official Comments: The RMBCA allows committees unless prohibited by the articles or bylaws while the MBCA allows committees only if authorized by the articles or bylaws. The RMBCA also clarifies the various rules governing committee meetings. Unlike the current law, the RMBCA allows committees to appoint corporate officers. These changes are appropriate in light of the more widespread use of committees and the increasing trust board places on committees. Further, this section establishes a minimum committee membership of two (8.25(a) [subsection (1) of this section]), unlike existing law which sets no minimum.

35-1-441. Required officers.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Prior law, at MCA §35-1-410 [now repealed], required certain corporate officers. Section 8.40 [this section] provides the ability to appoint only those officers deemed necessary by the Board of Directors. Officers may also appoint assistant officers if allowed by the bylaws. The prohibition on acting as both president and secretary has been eliminated. Finally the corporate board of directors may establish offices. These provisions are designed to give maximum flexibility to the corporation.

Powers of President:

The general implication, that when the president of a corporation makes a contract within the ordinary scope of the corporation a person dealing with the president may proceed upon the assumption that the officer has authority to bind his principal, must be more strongly drawn when the instrument in question is a promissory note of the corporation; but when it is shown that like notes issued by the officer in the name of the corporation and signed by its president and secretary with the corporate seal affixed were ratified thereby, the testimony tends to prove a custom and acquiescence from which implied authority may be presumed. Alley v. Butte & W. Min. Co., 77 M 477, 251 P 517 (1926).

Notwithstanding section 15-406, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the general executive officer of a corporation may specifically or by implication be authorized by the directors thereof to conduct its business under their directions. Edwards v. Plains Light & Water Co., 49 M 535, 143 P 962 (1914).

False Certificate: The bylaws of a corporation provided that a special meeting of the board of directors could be called by the president or at his request by the secretary. The secretary and the third member of the board were without authority to call such a meeting. A surety company which relied upon the secretary's certificate that he had been empowered at the meeting to enter into a contract of indemnity in behalf of the corporation did so at its peril. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Am. Brewing Co., 63 M 474, 208 P 921 (1922).

Powers of Secretary: The secretary of a corporation has no authority by virtue of his office alone to bind the corporation by contract. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Am. Brewing Co., 63 M 474, 208 P 921 (1922).

35-1-443. Standards of conduct for officers.

Official Comments

Official Comments: There is no directly comparable MCA section. This section essentially requires of non-director officers the same standards of conduct required of directors under §8.30 RMBCA [35-1-418] and MCA §35-1-401(2) - (3) [now repealed]. In Montana, by court decision, officers are already subjected to the same standards of liability as directors. Ski Roundup v. Hall, 658 P.2d 1071 (1983). Codifying the general rule established by case law that officers have duties similar to directors adds certainty to the law.

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Applicability of Business Judgment Rule to Conflict of Interest Transaction: On a certified question from the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals, the Montana Supreme Court held that the business judgment rule does not apply to challenges based on a director's conflict of interest. Warren v. Campbell Farming Corp., 2011 MT 324, 363 Mont. 190, 271 P.3d 36.

Use of Corporation by Individual as Subterfuge — Piercing Corporate Veil to Hold Individual Liable for Breach of Lease: Defendant formed a corporation to render dental services and leased a building for a dental practice with two other dentists, including plaintiff. After the practice became successful, defendant demanded possession of the entire property by letter. When plaintiff did not respond, defendant vacated the building on behalf of the corporation and discontinued paying rent, but the decision was never documented in the corporation's records. Plaintiff sued for breach of the lease contract. Following trial, the District Court concluded that defendant was the alter ego of the corporation and the real party in interest under the lease and that it would be inequitable to allow defendant to use the corporation as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience or justify wrong. Thus, the corporate veil was pierced, and defendant was held personally responsible for damages arising from the breached lease. On appeal, the Supreme Court applied the test in Berlin v. Boedecker, 268 M 444, 887 P2d 1180 (1994), to determine whether circumstances were appropriate for piercing the corporate veil. The court noted that the veil may not be pierced simply because an individual is the alter ego of a corporation and the true party in interest. There must be substantial evidence that the corporate entity was used as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, or commit fraud, but bad faith alone may be a sufficient cause for piercing the veil. Here, the corporation was unable to satisfy the judgment because it was undercapitalized from its inception, suggesting defendant acted in bad faith. Further, it was inequitable for defendant to personally profit from renting property to the corporation and protect himself from liability with the undercapitalized corporation. The judgment was affirmed. Peschel Family Trust v. Colonna, 2003 MT 216, 317 M 127, 75 P3d 793 (2003).

Breach of Fiduciary Duty in Conversion of Corporate Property Without Requisite Notice and Shareholder Approval — Punitive Damages Unavailable Absent Showing of Actual Malice or Fraud: Phil was two-thirds majority shareholder in Trifad Entertainment, Inc. (Trifad), and Brad was one-third minority shareholder and Trifad director. Following Phil's extradition to Florida on racketeering charges, Brad secured a loan for $15,000, deposited the money in the Trifad account, and then sold virtually all of Trifad's assets to himself for $15,000. In addition, Brad wrote checks on Trifad's account for taxes owed and for estimated tax payments and withdrew one-third of the remaining balance and left two-thirds in the account, all without attempting to contact Phil. Phil later sued Brad for breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and conversion and requested punitive damages, contending that Brad's actions were performed with actual malice and constituted actual fraud.

At trial, Brad contended that the actions were reasonable considering Phil was in jail facing criminal charges, and Brad cross-claimed for indemnification from Trifad for litigation expenses and liabilities incurred in his capacity as Trifad director. The District Court found for Brad on all counts, but denied corporate indemnification. Both Phil and Brad appealed. The Supreme Court reversed, finding that Brad failed to comply with 35-1-823 by selling corporate property without the requisite notice and shareholder approval. Although contacting Phil would have been difficult, it was not impossible. However, even if Phil had been unavailable for consultation, 35-1-823 does not contain any exceptions to the notice and approval requirements governing the sale of corporate assets. Further, the sale constituted conversion because Brad exercised unauthorized dominion over Trifad property by transferring ownership to himself. The case was remanded for a determination of damages, including possible damages other than those provided in 27-1-320 if peculiar circumstances warranted compensation for future lost income and profits. The District Court erred in concluding that Brad did not breach his fiduciary duties to Trifad; however, absent proof of actual malice or actual fraud, punitive damages were not warranted. Because a breach of fiduciary duty occurred, Brad could not claim to be wholly successful in the action, so Brad's claim for corporate indemnification also failed under 35-1-453. Trifad Entertainment, Inc. v. Anderson, 2001 MT 227, 306 M 499, 36 P3d 363 (2001).

Misvaluation of Corporate Stock Not Constituting Breach of Fiduciary Duty: Following termination from employment with Bitterroot International Systems, Inc. (Bitterroot), Knutson sought to exercise his buyout rights under the shareholders' agreement. Bitterroot refused to pay and sought rescission on grounds that Knutson breached his fiduciary duty to Bitterroot, arguing that Knutson's mistaken valuation of stock acquired during the purchase of another business constituted a breach of that duty. Bitterroot did not contend that Knutson acted in bad faith, but only that he was wrong about the stock value. Applying the standard in this section, the Supreme Court found that Knutson's inaccurate stock valuation did not constitute a breach of fiduciary duty and that the District Court did not err in dismissing Bitterroot's claim that Knutson breached his fiduciary obligation. Knutson v. Bitterroot Int'l Sys., Inc., 2000 MT 203, 300 M 511, 5 P3d 554, 57 St. Rep. 800 (2000). See also 18A Am. Jur. 2d Corporations §451 and 18B Am. Jur. 2d Corporations §1705.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Pro Se Practice of Law by Corporate Shareholders and Directors Prohibited: Although shareholders and directors of a corporation have the right under 35-1-930 (now repealed) to take action on behalf of the corporation, that does not entitle those persons to practice law on behalf of the corporation. A corporation is a separate legal entity and cannot appear through an agent other than an attorney. Representation by a stockholder or director who is not an attorney constitutes contempt of court punishable under 37-61-210. Weaver v. Law Firm of Graybill, Ostrem, Warner & Crotty, 246 M 175, 803 P2d 1089, 47 St. Rep. 2316 (1990).

Loans by Officers Contrary to Resolution — Estoppel to Deny Loan: Even though a corporate resolution stated that the president, vice president, and secretary or any two of them were empowered to act in the name of the corporation, a note and security agreement signed only by two vice presidents was enforceable because if a corporation receives and retains the fruit of a loan, impliedly ratifying it, the corporation is estopped to deny the authority of the vice presidents to borrow the money. Farmers St. Bank v. Johnson, 188 M 55, 610 P2d 1172 (1980).

Property Listed as Corporate Property — Estoppel From Asserting Personal Ownership: A corporate officer was estopped from defending against a conversion action by a bank involving the sale and retention of proceeds by him of property that he claimed he personally owned but that was listed, with his knowledge and acquiescence, as company property in company financial statements and as company assets to secure a company loan. The Supreme Court, in applying the principles of equitable estoppel enumerated in Hustad v. Reed, 133 M 211, 321 P2d 1083 (1958), determined that by allowing others to rely on documents that purported to show company ownership of the property, the officer may not now assert he is the true owner. Farmers St. Bank v. Johnson, 188 M 55, 610 P2d 1172 (1980).

Malicious Inducement of Breach of Contract — Individual Liability of Corporate Agents, Employees, Officers, or Directors: In a case of first impression in Montana, the issue was whether agents, employees, officers, or directors of a corporation may be held liable individually for the tort of malicious inducement of a breach of an employment contract. The resolution of the appeal depended upon a weighing of public policy considerations. The court held that the corporate veil should not be utilized as a protective device by those who employ corporate power or authority to serve their own ends. Tort liability for the inducement of breach of contract should be imposed when a corporate agent, employee, officer, or director induces a breach of contract for private benefit or because of personal feeling and purposes relative to a third party. The privilege of limited liability should be applicable in those situations where actions are motivated and taken in the furtherance of corporate purposes, policies, and interests. When plaintiff/appellant failed to show that the actions of individual defendants were not taken in furtherance of corporate purposes and interests, the summary judgment granted to the defendants was affirmed. Phillips v. Mont. Educ. Ass'n, 187 M 419, 610 P2d 154 (1980), followed in Bottrell v. Am. Bank, 237 M 1, 773 P2d 694, 46 St. Rep. 561 (1989), Lachenmaier v. First Bank Sys., Inc., 246 M 26, 803 P2d 614, 47 St. Rep. 2244 (1990), Mannix v. Butte Water Co., 249 M 372, 816 P2d 441, 48 St. Rep. 782 (1991), and King v. Zimmerman, 266 M 54, 878 P2d 895, 51 St. Rep. 659 (1994).

Must Be in Office for Liability to Attach — Estoppel: One who was not the treasurer of a corporation at the time a stockholder demanded a financial statement of its condition under section 15-606, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), could not be made such under the doctrine of estoppel based on certain annual reports that bore his name as treasurer; the rule being otherwise when the rights of a third person dealing with the corporation through the treasurer relied upon such reports to his damage, in which case the corporation would be estopped. The liability attaches to the treasurer as an official by virtue of the office, and not otherwise. Stanton Trust & Sav. Bank v. Johnson, 107 M 348, 85 P2d 336 (1938).

Requirement That Evidence Support Contention of Fictitious Resignation: When defendant, sought to be held for the penalty prescribed by section 15-606, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), for failure to furnish a statement of the financial condition of his corporation as treasurer, showed by the records of a special meeting of directors some 6 weeks prior to the demand for such statement that his resignation had been accepted and his successor elected, the contention of plaintiff that the records were sham and fictitious was not supported by evidence. Stanton Trust & Sav. Bank v. Johnson, 107 M 348, 85 P2d 336 (1938).

Venue for Action to Recover Penalty: The Legislature, in enacting section 15-606, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), did not intend to repeal or change the then existing laws relating to the right to demand a change of venue. "Jurisdiction" is the authority to hear and determine; "venue" is the place of trial. With no statutory direction as to manner of delivery of the statement, the treasurer could mail it from the county seat where he lived and where the corporation had its principal place of business, hence the cause of action resulting from his refusal arose in that county and place of trial was properly changed to that county. Stanton Trust & Sav. Bank v. Johnson, 104 M 235, 65 P2d 1188 (1937).

False Report: The trustees of a corporation, who filed a report which did not specify as a debt of the company its liability on a covenant of title, are not liable for a false report if at the time the report was filed the breach of the covenant was not known to them, and such a report is not false in stating that the capital was paid in full because of the mere fact that the property for which it was issued has decreased in value. Giddings v. Holter, 19 M 263, 48 P 8 (1897).

Right as Corporate Director Unsubstantiated — Injunction Properly Denied: Plaintiff, once the sole shareholder and director of Electronic Parts, Inc. (EPI), sold all interest in the corporation pursuant to a stock redemption agreement. When the director of EPI died, plaintiff sought two injunctions, alleging that as the sole remaining director of EPI, plaintiff was entitled to terminate EPI's legal counsel, to prohibit officers, agents, and employees from altering EPI documents, to inspect and review corporate records, and to prevent a shareholders' meeting. When the District Court denied both injunctions, plaintiff appealed, alleging that the court abused its discretion. The Supreme Court affirmed, ruling that the lower court's finding that the evidence did not support plaintiff's claim of directorship was not clearly erroneous. As a result, plaintiff had no right to terminate EPI's legal counsel, to inspect records, or to enjoin a shareholders' meeting. Smith v. Electronic Parts, Inc., 274 M 252, 907 P2d 958, 52 St. Rep. 1215 (1995).

Official Comments

Official Comments to 35-1-451 Through 35-1-459: While the RMBCA addresses "Indemnification" under §§8.50 through 8.58 [35-1-451 through 35-1-459], the MCA indemnification provisions are set forth inclusively under §35-1-414 [now repealed].

Major revisions in the ABA Model Act relating to indemnification were made in 1979-1980 (see 34 Bus. Law. 1598) and are largely reflected in our existing statute. The existing language of §35-1-414 [now repealed] has been more clearly organized in the RMBCA, but according to the Comments, "the substance of [the 1980 provisions] are retained unchanged in §§8.50 through 8.58 [35-1-451 through 35-1-459] of the 1984 Model Act." The ABA Official Comments state:

Section[s] 8.50 through 8.58 [35-1-451 through 35-1-459] reorganize [the 1970 revisions] into a separate subchapter and make numerous stylistic changes. The division of a single section of the former Act into nine different sections in the current Act was designed to simplify the use of this section; no significant substantive change but several clarifying changes were made.

Case Notes

Breach of Fiduciary Duty in Conversion of Corporate Property Without Requisite Notice and Shareholder Approval — Punitive Damages Unavailable Absent Showing of Actual Malice or Fraud: Phil was two-thirds majority shareholder in Trifad Entertainment, Inc. (Trifad), and Brad was one-third minority shareholder and Trifad director. Following Phil's extradition to Florida on racketeering charges, Brad secured a loan for $15,000, deposited the money in the Trifad account, and then sold virtually all of Trifad's assets to himself for $15,000. In addition, Brad wrote checks on Trifad's account for taxes owed and for estimated tax payments and withdrew one-third of the remaining balance and left two-thirds in the account, all without attempting to contact Phil. Phil later sued Brad for breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and conversion and requested punitive damages, contending that Brad's actions were performed with actual malice and constituted actual fraud. At trial, Brad contended that the actions were reasonable considering Phil was in jail facing criminal charges, and Brad cross-claimed for indemnification from Trifad for litigation expenses and liabilities incurred in his capacity as Trifad director. The District Court found for Brad on all counts, but denied corporate indemnification. Both Phil and Brad appealed. The Supreme Court reversed, finding that Brad failed to comply with 35-1-823 by selling corporate property without the requisite notice and shareholder approval. Although contacting Phil would have been difficult, it was not impossible. However, even if Phil had been unavailable for consultation, 35-1-823 does not contain any exceptions to the notice and approval requirements governing the sale of corporate assets. Further, the sale constituted conversion because Brad exercised unauthorized dominion over Trifad property by transferring ownership to himself. The case was remanded for a determination of damages, including possible damages other than those provided in 27-1-320 if peculiar circumstances warranted compensation for future lost income and profits. The District Court erred in concluding that Brad did not breach his fiduciary duties to Trifad; however, absent proof of actual malice or actual fraud, punitive damages were not warranted. Because a breach of fiduciary duty occurred, Brad could not claim to be wholly successful in the action, so Brad's claim for corporate indemnification also failed under this section. 35-1-461. Definitions.

Official Comments

Official Comments to 35-1-461 Through 35-1-464: The existing law states that corporate actions that are conflict of interest transactions are void or voidable unless it fell within certain exceptions. The language of §35-1-413 [now repealed] is very general and at times ambiguous. Material changes include:

1. "Conflicting interest" is clearly defined in §8.60 [35-1-461]. The new definition of a "conflicting interest" transaction requires that the director know of the transaction.

2. The definitional section at §8.60 [35-1-461] defines clearly who the parties to a conflicting interest transaction are. The existing law leaves the definition of who the parties are either to the imagination or case law. The law clarifies that the rule applies to transactions with subsidiary corporations.

3. The required disclosure of directors to the transaction are clearly defined.

4. The fairly vague references to transactions being void or voidable is replaced with more specific standards for when damages or an injunction might be obtained.

5. In §8.62 [35-1-463], the RMBCA specifies which directors are entitled to vote to ratify the transaction and the procedure for doing so.

6. In §8.62 [35-1-463], the RMBCA specifies which shareholders are entitled to vote to ratify and the procedures for doing so.

Legislation is necessary to address director conflicts of interest because of the inadequacies of the common law. As aptly stated by the ABA's Official Introductory Comments to Subchapter F [35-1-461 through 35-1-464]:

The common law, drawing its analogy on the fiduciary principles of the law of trusts, initially took the position that any transaction between X Co. and a director of X Co. was contaminated by the director's conflicting interest, that the transaction was null and void or voidable and, at least by implication, that the interested director who benefitted from the transaction could be required to disgorge any profits and be held liable for any damages. In time, this rule was perceived to be demonstrably unworkable in the real business world and contrary to the best interests of the corporation.

In order to correct those problems, the RMBCA takes the following approach, as described by the Official Introductory Comments to Subchapter F [35-1-461 through 35-1-464]:

Predecessor provisions to subchapter F [35-1-461 through 35-1-464] were sweeping and generalized in character. Subchapter F [35-1-461 through 35-1-464] is not. Its key objectives are to increase predictability and to enhance practical administrability. To that end, the new subchapter spells out a safe harbor procedure more meticulously than its predecessors. To the same end, the subchapter goes further. Earlier statutes left entirely to judicial interpretation — and to the guess of corporate counsel — the central question as to what does and what does not constitute a conflicting interest of a director. Great uncertainty has arisen as to the scope of that concept. Subchapter F [35-1-461 through 35-1-464] takes the new step of spelling out a practical working definition of "conflicting interest" and declares that definition to be exclusive. Circumstances that fall outside the statutory definition of conflicting interest cannot constitute the basis for an attack on a transaction on grounds of a director's interest conflict, although they may, of course, afford basis for legal attack on some other ground. Finally, to a greater degree than its predecessors, the subchapter specifies when judicial intervention is appropriate and when it is not.

A more detailed analysis of Chapter [Subchapter] F [35-1-461 through 35-1-464] is found at 44 Bus. Law. 1307 (1989).

Official Comments: The Committee has revised Section 7.20(d) [subsection (4) of this section] as drafted by the ABA to delete all language after "corporation's expense" and in its place, insert "and may provide recovery to a shareholder for costs (including reasonable attorneys fees)." As such, the court does not have the statutory authority to enjoin the meeting. Hence, it is incumbent upon the shareholder to bring an action early enough that, if the shareholder is successful, the shareholder will have time to utilize the list to his or her advantage without the necessity of a postponed meeting.

Official Comments

Official Comments: MCA §35-1-505(1) [now repealed] requires a minimum quorum standard of one-third of the shares entitled to vote at the meeting (RMBCA does not set any minimum quorum standards, except the normal majority standard if a quorum is not stated.)

MCA §35-1-505(3) [now repealed] also provides for adjournment in absence of a quorum. Apparently the RMBCA considered the obviousness of this provision and has not incorporated it in the current Model Act.

The new provisions also provide that action can be approved by a plurality of votes cast rather than a majority of shares represented at the meeting.

35-1-531. Voting for directors — cumulative voting.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is not derived from the RMBCA, but is derived from MCA §35-1-506(4) [now repealed]. Mandatory cumulative voting has long been a part of the Montana Business Code Annotated. See also Sensabaugh v. Polson Plywood Co., 135 Mont. 562, 342 P.2d 1064 (1959). Because, however, some shareholders may find cumulative voting burdensome, or otherwise undesirable, a provision has been added to the law allowing shareholders to opt out of cumulative voting (a) when the corporation is newly incorporated, or (b) when the vote to eliminate cumulative voting is sufficiently strong so as not to prejudice the rights of any shareholders able to elect directors. Note also that shareholders are entitled to dissenter's rights under §13.02(a)(4)(iii) [35-1-827(1)(d)(iii)] if cumulative voting rights are abolished.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Basic Elements of Partnership by Estoppel: The two basic elements required to demonstrate partnership by estoppel are: (1) that a person or entity represent to a third party that he is dealing with a partnership even though no partnership exists; and (2) that the third party rely to his detriment. When an oral contract was negotiated and entered, the contracting party did not specifically state that he represented either a partnership or a corporation, but did refer to the other individuals involved as his "partners". This representation could lead a reasonable person to believe he was dealing with a partnership and, when coupled with the fact that the "partners" would have benefited financially by having the third party perform the contracted work, demonstrated a partnership by estoppel. Springer v. Opsahl, 229 M 10, 744 P2d 884, 44 St. Rep. 1738 (1987).

Partnership by Estoppel — Corporate Shareholders: The shareholders of a corporation can be liable as partners to a person dealing with the corporation if through some action or inaction of the corporation the person reasonably believes he is dealing with a partnership and relies upon that belief in dealing with the corporation. In this case there were various partnerships and a corporation, all with similar names and consisting of the same people, and although some evidence tended to show that operations of the corporation were apparently partnership operations, the existence of a partnership by estoppel is a factual issue, and in this case summary judgment finding such a partnership was improperly granted because factual issues remained. Gamble Robinson Co. v. Carousel Properties, 212 M 305, 688 P2d 283, 41 St. Rep. 1757 (1984).

Disregard of Corporate Identity: The corporate identity may be disregarded and the identity of purchasers on a contract may be considered one where an individual controlling shareholder utilizes the corporation as a subterfuge to perpetrate fraud. Motion to dismiss is properly denied. Flemmer v. Ming, 190 M 403, 621 P2d 1038, 37 St. Rep. 1916 (1980).

Secondary Liability: In the case of Kelly v. Clark, 21 M 291, 53 P 959 (1898), and King v. Pony Gold Min. Co., 28 M 74, 72 P 309 (1903), this court construed section 15-615, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), imposing liability upon stockholders "until the whole amount of the capital stock subscribed for shall be paid in", as imposing a liability secondary to that of the company for its debts, and held that the remedy against the stockholders did not accrue until the remedy against the company had been exhausted. Mitchell v. Banking Corp. of Mont., 83 M 581, 273 P 1055 (1929).

Void Assessment: Prior to the 1919 amendment, section 15-721, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), providing for other corporations making stock assessable, was intended to and did make the individual stockholder and not the share of stock the unit of voting power, and such a change made with the consent of only 96 out of 301 stockholders, though it was made by those owning more than three-fourths of the company's stock, was without effect, and an assessment levied in pursuance thereof was void. Smith v. Iron Mtn. Tunnel Co., 46 M 13, 125 P 649 (1912).

Attorney General's Opinions

Eligibility of Subchapter S. Shareholder for Tuition Offset: A shareholder in a closed, or family, type Subchapter S. corporation is not eligible to claim tuition offset under 20-5-303 (now repealed) when the corporation is the taxpayer responsible for the district and county property taxes referred to in that section. 40 A.G. Op. 42 (1984).

35-1-535. Shareholders' preemptive rights.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-511 [now repealed], although §6.30 [this section] more clearly defines the nature of the preemptive right. Preemptive rights are particularly important to protect the interests of minority shareholders in close corporations. The Committee expressed some concern with the language of §6.30(b)(3)(iv) [subsection (2)(c)(iv) of this section] that provides there will be no preemptive right if the shares are sold for other than money. Although the Official Comment's RMBCA fails to offer a rationale for this provision, the following comment appearing after Minnesota Statute Annotated §302A.412 were [was] adopted by the Committee.

"Comment: Reporter's Notes (1981) — Shares issued for nonmonetary consideration. The consideration may well be unique, it may be the services of a particular person, land, plant or an entire business. In this situation the original shareholders have nothing comparable to offer unlike the usual case where the corporation seeks only cash. It may also be impossible to act quickly under the articles to issue a new class or series of shares to take advantage of opportunities."

Research indicates that 25 of the 35 states that exclude preemptive rights in specific instances exclude preemptive rights when the consideration is other than for cash. The RMBCA is consistent with common law cases holding that preemptive rights do not accrue when consideration is other than cash. See Fletcher, Cyclopedia Corporations §5136.4 (1986).

Committee members were concerned that the board could effectively neutralize the preemptive right by routinely issuing stock for property or services. This concern, upon further analysis, is mitigated by (a) cases (Fox v. 7L Bar Ranch, 645 P.2d 929 (Mont. 1982), Maddox v. Norman, 669 P.2d 230 (Mont. 1983)) that hold a plan to squeeze out shareholders is oppression, allowing courts to apply equitable remedies and (b) articles can be drafted to expand the preemptive right to those circumstances when stock is issued for other than money.

35-1-541. Definitions.

Official Comments

Official Comments to 35-1-541 Through 35-1-548: The RMBCA is much more specific than the MCA in defining when derivative actions may be brought. Because the MCA is vague with respect to specific standards, the Montana Supreme Court has been forced to adopt standards to clarify the statute. SW Company v. John Wight, Inc., 587 P.2d 348 (Mont. 1978). Even those standards are not very precise. Likewise, those standards are, to a certain extent, out of step with the law in other jurisdictions, particularly Delaware. See, e.g., Zapata Corporation v. Maldonado, 430 A.2d 779 (Del. 1981) and Aronson v. Lewis, 473 A.2d 805 (Del. 1984). Both of these decisions generally give the board more control over derivative suits than SW Company.

The provisions of Subchapter D [35-1-541 through 35-1-548] address the issues that the courts are currently forced to deal with without the help of a statute. Issues such as when a demand on directors must precede a suit, when a disinterested committee of the board may dismiss a suit, and when the corporation must pay the plaintiffs attorneys fees are vexing issues. The drafters of RMBCA surveyed the case law and statutes from other jurisdictions to provide guidance. In doing so, the proposed legislation balances the needs of shareholders to challenge illegal action by management with the need to limit nuisance suits or strike suits.

The ABA Official Comments to Subchapter D [35-1-541 through 35-1-548] are found at 45 Bus. Law. 1241 (May 1990).

Official Comments: The provision makes it clear that beneficial owners may bring suits.

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Assertion of Error in Redesignation of Custodian as Receiver — Claim Dismissed for Lack of Jurisdiction: A shareholder did not have standing to defend any claims properly belonging to the corporation or to pursue an appeal on behalf of the corporation for claims belonging to the corporation. Thus, the shareholder's claim on appeal that the District Court erred by redesignating a custodian as a receiver pursuant to 35-1-941 was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. Johnson v. Booth, 2008 MT 155, 343 M 268, 184 P3d 289 (2008), following Richland Nat'l Bank & Trust v. Swenson, 249 M 410, 816 P2d 1045 (1991).

Corporation Considered Real Party in Interest on Claim for Lost Corporate Profits — No Exception for S. Corporations: Gullett paid $10,000 earnest money for the purchase of real property. The money was drawn on the account of Gullett's corporation. When defendants refused to return the money after the purchase agreement failed, Gullett filed a complaint for return of the money and for profits allegedly suffered by the corporation's business through lack of the funds. Although the money was ultimately repaid to Gullett, the District Court summarily dismissed the claim for lost business profits on grounds that the corporation, not Gullett, was the real party in interest. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The cause of action for recovery of lost business profits belonged to the corporation, not to a shareholder. Gullett's argument that he should not be barred from the claim because the corporation was an S. corporation also failed because even though an S. corporation is treated differently for taxation purposes, it remains a corporation in all other ways, and the corporation and its shareholders remain separate entities. Gullett v. Van Dyke Constr. Co., 2005 MT 105, 327 M 30, 111 P3d 220 (2005), following Richland Nat'l Bank & Trust v. Swenson, 249 M 410, 816 P2d 1045 (1991). See also Smith Setzer & Sons, Inc. v. S.C. Procurement Review Panel, 20 F3d 1311 (4th Cir. 1994).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Contract Action — Sole Owners Asserting Wrongs Done to Corporation: In bank's action against corporation to collect on corporation's note, two sole owners of the corporation did not, as individuals and sole owners, have a right to assert any cause of action arising from bank's refusal to continue financing the corporation because sole owners were attempting to assert as wrongs to themselves claims that belonged to the corporation. Richland Nat'l Bank & Trust v. Swenson, 249 M 410, 816 P2d 1045, 48 St. Rep. 730 (1991), followed in Johnson v. Booth, 2008 MT 155, 343 M 268, 184 P3d 289 (2008).

Exception Allowing Direct Shareholder Action Not Adopted: Some jurisdictions recognize an exception to the need for derivative remedies by allowing a shareholder to bring a direct action when the defendants control the corporation and a derivative action would place any judgment into the corporate treasury and therefore under the defendants' control (citing cases). However, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals declined to adopt the exception, finding on overriding policy concern in avoiding unnecessary litigation resulting from separate suits by individual shareholders whenever the value of shares is impaired by a wrong to the corporation. Sax v. World Wide Press, Inc., 809 F2d 610 (1987).

35-1-543. Demand.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section requires a written demand in all cases, even when no member of the board is disinterested. As such, this provision overrules the exceptions to the written demand requirements set forth in SW Company v. John Wight, Inc., 587 P.2d 348 (Mont. 1978). The reasons are best set forth in the ABA Official Comments:

First, even though no director may be independent, the demand will give the board of directors the opportunity to reexamine the act complained of in the light of a potential lawsuit and take corrective action. Secondly, the provision saves the litigants and the court the time and expense they would incur in litigating the question of whether demand is required. It is believed that requiring a demand in all cases does not impose an onerous burden since a relatively short waiting period of 90 days is provided and this period may be shortened if irreparable injury to the corporation would result by waiting for the expiration of the 90-day period.

The issue of whether the directors of the corporation are independent is still relevant, but relevant to the issue of whether this corporation by their directors may successfully move to dismiss the litigation.

35-1-545. Dismissal.

Official Comments

Official Comments: These provisions are the heart of the derivative proceedings statute and are consistent with the position of SW Company that independent directors can stop a derivative action. The definition of independent directors is broader in the RMBCA than in SW Company. The mere fact that the (1) director is a defendant in the action or (2) approved of the complained action (but received no benefit) does not cause the director to lose his or her independent status under the RMBCA. These factors apparently do cause directors to lose their independent status under SW Company. The RMBCA definition of independence is consistent with Delaware case law. See, e.g. Aronson v. Lewis, 473 A.2d 805, 816 (Del. 1984). The reasons for the suggested definition are set forth in the ABA's Official Comments.

Subsection (c)(1) [subsection (3)(a) of this section] makes it clear that the participation of non-independent directors or shareholders in the nomination or election of a new director shall not prevent the new director from being considered independent. This sentence therefore rejects the concept that the mere appointment of new directors by the non-independent directors makes the new directors not independent in making the necessary determination because of an inherent structural bias. Clauses (2) and (3) [subsections (3)(b) and (3)(c) of this section] also confirm the decisions by a number of courts that the mere fact that a director has been named as a defendant or approved the action being challenged does not cause the director to be considered not independent. See Aronson v. Lewis, 473 A.2d 805, 816 (Del. 1984); Lewis v. Graves, 701 F.2d 245 (2d Cir. 1983). It is believed that a court will be able to assess any actual bias in deciding whether the director is independent without any presumption arising out of the method of the director's appointment, the mere naming of the director as a defendant or the director's approval of the act where the director received no personal benefit from the transaction.

More importantly, if the SW Company rationale is followed, directors will almost never be able to stop a derivative action because they are almost always named as defendants and have frequently approved of the transaction. The RMBCA remedies this deficiency. In short, instead of creating presumptions about lack of independence, the statute suggests courts examine whether, in fact, the director is independent.

The appropriate persons may, in good faith and after reasonable inquiry, compel the court to dismiss the suit. The ABA Official Comments state:

The word "inquiry" rather than "investigation" has been used to make it clear that the scope of the inquiry will depend upon the issues raised and the knowledge of the group making the determination with respect to the issues. In some cases, the issues may be so simple or the knowledge of the group so extensive that little additional inquiry is required. In other cases, the group may need to engage counsel and other professionals to make an investigation and assist the group in its evaluation of the issues.

The phrase "in good faith" modifies both the determination and the inquiry. The test, which is also included in sections 8.30 [35-1-418] (general standards of conduct for directors) and 8.51 [35-1-452] (authority to indemnify), is a subjective one, meaning "honestly or in an honest manner." "The Corporate Director's Guidebook," 33 Bus Law. 1595, 1601 (1978). As stated in Abella v. Universal Leaf Tobacco Co., 546 F. Supp. 795, 800 (E.D. Va. 1982), "the inquiry intended by this phrase goes to the spirit and sincerity with which the investigation was conducted, rather than the reasonableness of its procedures or basis for conclusions."

The phrase "upon which its conclusions are based" requires that the inquiry and the conclusions follow logically. This provision authorizes the court to examine the determination to ensure that it has some support in the findings of the inquiry. The burden of convincing the court about this issue lies with whichever party has the burden under section 7.44(e) [subsection (5) of this section]. This phrase does not require the persons making the determination to prepare a written report that sets forth their determination and the bases therefor, since circumstances will vary as to the need for such a report. There may, however, be many instances where good corporate practice will commend such a procedure.

Subsection (e) [subsection (5) of this section] addresses the issue of what happens if the board, though not independent at the time the complaint is filed, becomes independent later. Section (e) [subsection (5) of this section] addresses this issue by shifting the burden of proof to the newly disinterested board.

Official Comments: MCA §35-1-514 [now repealed] allows the court to require the plaintiff to pay defendant's reasonable expenses if the case was brought without reasonable cause. The statute is currently silent as to any corresponding duty of the corporation to pay plaintiff's fees. Case law, however, provides that a court may order payment of plaintiff's reasonable expenses. See also Sullivan v. Mountain, 117 Mont. 224 (1945); Mills v. Electric Auto-Lite Co., 396 U.S. 375 (1970). Section 7.46(1) [subsection (1) of this section] codifies this case law.

Fees and Costs, Including Costs of Appeal, Properly Awarded in Derivative Claim Action: In Sletteland v. Roberts, 2000 MT 382, 304 M 21, 16 P3d 1062 (2000), the Supreme Court held that the District Court committed reversible error in ruling in favor of plaintiff on a derivative claim action because the claim was not reasonable in light of the serious jeopardy in which it placed the corporation and its refinancing efforts. On remand, the District Court awarded defendant attorney fees and costs pursuant to this section, and plaintiff appealed. In determining an award for statutory attorney fees, a court may grant the prevailing party fees incurred in its litigation of the initial claim and the corresponding counterclaim if the court cannot clearly segregate the attorney's time in litigating both claims. In this case, the derivative claim and counterclaim shared a common core of complex facts and interrelated issues, so segregation of fees was not possible. Therefore, the District Court did not err in awarding defendants' fees incurred in litigating both the derivative claim and counterclaim. Further, defendants successfully defended this appeal, incurring further attorney fees and costs, so the Supreme Court remanded for a calculation of fees owed to defendants for this appeal. Sletteland v. Roberts, 2003 MT 17, 314 M 76, 64 P3d 979 (2003), following Donnes v. Orlando, 221 M 356, 720 P2d 233 (1986), and Nason v. Leistiko, 1998 MT 217, 290 M 460, 963 P2d 1279 (1998).

Shares

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Equitable Power of District Court to Order Stock Sale in Place of Dissolution: Where the plaintiff petitioned the District Court to appoint a receiver and dissolve a family ranching corporation in which she held 75 out of 1,000 outstanding shares, the District Court did not err in refusing to appoint the receiver and instead ordering the plaintiff to sell and the defendants to buy her corporate shares. Past decisions of the Montana Supreme Court show that the courts may use equitable powers in resolving disputes between shareholders, and decisions from other jurisdictions have recognized and approved the fashioning of equitable remedies less drastic than dissolution in cases where dissolution is not warranted. Because the facts show dissolution was not warranted in this case, the District Court's order was an appropriate equitable remedy. Maddox v. Norman, 206 M 1, 669 P2d 230, 40 St. Rep. 1463 (1983), distinguished in Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990).

Equitable Order for Purchase of Shares in Dissolution Proceeding — Improper Valuation of Shares: Where the District Court properly invoked its equitable powers in a dissolution proceeding to order the plaintiff to sell and the defendants to buy the plaintiff's 75 outstanding shares, the District Court erred in its valuation of those shares by not establishing the net value of the corporation, by rejecting consideration of an earlier offer to purchase shares (which lapsed by a failure to obtain financing), and by failing to establish the value of 20 acres of land ordered exchanged for the shares. Without considering these facts, the court could not properly value the shares of the plaintiff. Maddox v. Norman, 206 M 1, 669 P2d 230, 40 St. Rep. 1463 (1983).

Repurchase of Capital Stock: The mere repurchase of capital stock by a corporation would not tend to decrease it unless the directors should absolutely merge or extinguish the stock after its repurchase. If it is unlawful to decrease the capital stock, presumptively the directors did not violate the law. It would require some positive showing to the contrary to overturn this presumption. Porter v. Plymouth Gold Min. Co., 29 M 347, 74 P 938 (1904).

35-1-618. Authorized shares.

Official Comments

Official Comments: The ABA Official Comments state:

Section 6.01 [this section] adopts a new terminology from that traditionally used in corporation statutes to describe classes of shares that may be created, but makes only limited substantive changes from earlier versions of the Model Act. Traditional corporation statutes work from a perceived inheritance of concepts of "common shares" and "preferred shares" that at one time may have had considerable meaning but that today often do not involve significant distinctions. It is possible under modern corporation statutes to create classes of "common" shares that have important preferential rights and classes of "preferred" shares that are subordinate in all important economic aspects or that are indistinguishable from common shares in either voting rights or entitlement to participate in the assets of the corporation upon dissolution. The revised Model Act breaks away from the inherited concepts of "common" and "preferred" shares and develops more general language to reflect the actual flexibility in the creation of classes of shares that exists in modern corporate practice. The words "common shares" or "preferred shares" are no longer used in the revised Model Act, though the words appear in a few instances in examples appearing in the Official Comment.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Failure to Pay Purchase Price on Time — Lost Income to Be Paid: Failure to pay the purchase price for stock in the time required deprives a corporation of the purchase price, and as a result the corporation suffers a loss equivalent to the income it would have earned, which must be paid by the delinquent stock purchaser. Ski Roundtop, Inc. v. Hall, 202 M 260, 658 P2d 1071, 40 St. Rep. 74 (1983).

Amount of Capital Stock: There being no statutory provision as to the amount of capital stock of a corporation that must be subscribed before the corporation can do business, the general rule applies that all of such stock must be subscribed before the corporation can recover on a stock subscription. Enterprise Sheet Metal Works v. Schendel, 55 M 42, 173 P 1059 (1918).

35-1-623. Issuance of shares.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section continues the elimination of the concepts of par value and stated capital. The reasons are best described in the ABA's Official Comments:

The financial provisions of the Model Act reflect a modernization of the concepts underlying the capital structure and limitations on distributions of corporations. This process of modernization began with amendments in 1980 to the 1969 Model Act that eliminated the concepts of "par value" and "stated capital," and further modernization occurred in connection with the development of the revised Act in 1984. Practitioners and legal scholars have long recognized that the statutory structure embodying "par value" and "legal capital" concepts is not only complex and confusing but also fails to serve the original purpose of protecting creditors and senior security holders from payments to junior security holders. Indeed, to the extent security holders are led to believe that it provides this protection, these provisions may be affirmatively misleading. The Model Act has therefore eliminated these concepts entirely and substituted a simpler and more flexible structure that provides more realistic protection to these interests.

The RMBCA allows stock to be issued for future services on promissory notes. This is consistent with State v. Clements, 37 Mont. 314, 96 P. 498 (1908) (capital stock of a corporation need not be paid for in money); See also Gallatin County Farmers' Alliance v. Flannery, 59 Mont. 534, 537, 197 P. 996, 998 (1921) (citing Clements). The ABA Official Comments best describe the reasons for allowing stock to be issued for future services and promissory notes.

Section 6.21(b) [subsection (2) of this section] specifically validates contracts for future services (including promoters' services), promissory notes, or "any tangible or intangible property or benefit to the corporation," as consideration for the present issue of shares. The term "benefit" should be broadly construed to include, for example, a reduction of a liability, a release of a claim, or benefits obtained by a corporation by contribution of its shares to a charitable organization or as a prize in a promotion. In the realities of commercial life, there is sometimes a need for the issuance of shares for contract rights or such intangible property or benefits. And, as a matter of business economics, contracts for future services, promissory notes, and intangible property or benefits often have value that is as real as the value of tangible property or past services, the only types of property that may older statutes permit as consideration for shares. Thus, only business judgment should determine what kind of property should be obtained for shares, and a determination by the directors meeting the requirements of section 8.30 [35-1-418] to accept a specific kind of valuable property for shares should be accepted and not circumscribed by artificial or arbitrary rules.

Summary Judgment — Alleged Invalidity of Promissory Notes — Stockholder Status Not Prerequisite for RICO Claim: In a suit seeking payment on promissory notes, the first of which was executed in exchange for 1,500 shares of stock, the validity of the note was challenged on the grounds that it was in violation of 35-1-606 (now repealed), which provided that neither promissory notes nor future services constitute payment for shares of a corporation. The Supreme Court held that it was error for the lower court to grant summary judgment when the record did not contain sufficient facts to allow a determination of the invalidity of the promissory notes at issue and that it was further error to dismiss defendant's RICO counterclaims because stockholder status is not a prerequisite for standing to bring a RICO claim. Stock Issue Sales — Duty to Minority Stockholders — Business Judgment Rule: When director and majority stockholder at time of suit became such during the life of the corporation by subscribing to stock issues when other stockholders did not, there was no breach of fiduciary duty by him to minority stockholders because his subscriptions saved the corporation; they were available to all stockholders with a detailed prospectus setting forth pertinent matter; and although the issues may not have been a perfect solution to corporate problems, they were acceptable under the "business judgment rule". Ski Roundtop, Inc. v. Hall, 202 M 260, 658 P2d 1071, 40 St. Rep. 74 (1983), followed in Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990).

Payment for Stock as Consideration for Services: Payments of money made to a television cable corporation upon the issuance of stock to Class B stockholders, which were not made for stock but rather for services rendered and to be rendered by the corporation, constituted ordinary taxable income under section 61(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The purported stock purchases were in fact payments required of subscribers in consideration of such services. Community T.V. Ass'n of Havre v. U.S., 203 F. Supp. 270 (D.C. Mont. 1962).

Mode of Payment: There can be no presumption that the capital stock of a corporation shall be considered to be paid for in money. St. v. Clements, 37 M 314, 96 P 498 (1908).

Purchase of Property: Section 15-619, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), was direct authority for the receipt by a domestic corporation of mines, manufactories, and other like property in payment of the capital stock, and such stock shall be considered fully paid-up stock; it tends with other provisions of the law to show that the capital stock of a foreign corporation may consist in whole or in part of something other than money. St. v. Clements, 37 M 314, 96 P 498 (1908).

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-617 [now repealed]; however, it clarifies the existing law in several regards:

(1) The restriction need not be noted in the front of the certificate. As such, cases such as Ling. & Co. v. Trinity Savings and Loan Ass'n, 482 S.W.2d 841 (Tex. 1982) (a notation of the restriction must be on the face of the certificate) should not be controlling in Montana.

(2) Consent restrictions (i.e., those described in §6.27(d)(2) [subsection (4)(b) of this section]) must not be manifestly unreasonable.

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Restrictive Transfer Provision Not Intended to Prohibit Corporation Liquidation: Plaintiff, a minority stockholder in a closely held family corporation, filed an action alleging that the corporation's preemptive right provision was triggered when the remaining stockholders accepted plaintiff's offer to purchase the stock at book value. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's reliance on Dobry v. Dobry, 262 P2d 691 (Okla. 1953), ruling that a minority shareholder may not rely on a restrictive transfer provision to prohibit the liquidation and sale of corporate assets. Stufft v. Share Transfer Restrictions Valid and Enforceable: Shareholders in a closely held farming and ranching corporation executed a buy-sell agreement providing that as long as the shareholders were alive, stock could not be sold by one shareholder without the written consent of the other shareholders. The agreement also provided that a shareholder wishing to sell stock must first offer it to the corporation and then to the remaining shareholders. The District Court properly held that such share transfer restrictions contained within the buy-sell agreement were valid and enforceable. Gray v. DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Commonality of Interests Insufficient to Justify Disregard of Corporate Separateness: On appeal from a declaratory judgment that a proposed transaction to merge into a subsidiary triggered preemptive right and resignation provisions of a venture agreement, the Supreme Court found that evidence did not establish a commonality of interests between defendant corporations sufficient to justify disregard of their corporate separateness. Meridian Minerals Co. v. Nicor Minerals, Inc., 228 M 274, 742 P2d 456, 44 St. Rep. 1516 (1987).

Corporate Control by Single Shareholder Insufficient to Warrant Piercing Corporate Veil: Where a mining venture agreement provided for corporate merger by which the "surviving entity shall possess substantially all of the stock, or all of the property rights and interests, and be subject to substantially all of the liabilities and obligations" of the incorporating participant, the Supreme Court held that control over a corporation by a single shareholder was not, by itself, enough to warrant piercing the corporate veil. Meridian Minerals Co. v. Nicor Minerals, Inc., 228 M 274, 742 P2d 456, 44 St. Rep. 1516 (1987).

Acquisition of Stock in Another Corporation: At the time of the case, the only provisions concerning merger of corporations were found in sections 15-104, 15-620, and 15-1603, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), authorizing one corporation to acquire shares of stock in another. United Missouri River Power Co. v. Yoder, 41 M 245, 108 P 912 (1910).

Mining Corporation: If mining corporations may consolidate in any manner and upon any terms without restriction, they may proceed by conveying all their property to a corporation organized for that purpose or by the purchase by one of the companies of stock of the others in whole or in part. MacGinniss v. Boston & Mont. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co., 29 M 428, 75 P 89 (1904).

35-1-813. Merger.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-801 [now repealed] and particularly to §801(1) [now repealed]. Note the absence in the RMBCA of any reference to consolidations as found in §35-1-801(2) [now repealed]. The ABA "Official Comments" indicate that this was an intended omission based on the realities of the modern corporate world in that it is considered generally advantageous for one of the parties to remain the surviving corporation. Under the RMBCA, in order to effectuate what was a consolidation, a new corporate entity could be created prior to the merger and then have both parties to the transaction subsequently merged into this new entity.

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Punitive Damages Correctly Awarded Against Successor Corporation — False Affidavits — Failure to Supplement Discovery: The plaintiff financed a home through the defendant bank's predecessor. The plaintiff requested a 30-year residential loan and was told by the predecessor bank that she received this loan. However, the predecessor bank issued an 18-month commercial loan and did not inform the plaintiff. The plaintiff sued alleging fraud. A jury eventually awarded $1 million in compensatory damages and $5 million in punitive damages against the successor bank. On appeal, the defendant argued that it can't be liable for punitive damages as a successor corporation and that the punitive damages award was grossly excessive. The Supreme Court held that the federal Bank Merger Act and 35-1-817 required the bank to be liable for punitive damages and that the award was not excessive in light of U.S. Supreme Court decisions. McCulley v. U.S. Bank of Montana, 2015 MT 100, 378 Mont. 462, 347 P.3d 247.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Effect of Merger on Claims Against Companies Involved: The accident upon which a negligence claim was based occurred when the manufacturer of the garage door involved was insured by Western. When this lawsuit was filed, the manufacturer had been acquired through a merger by another company. The second company was insured by Travelers. Each of the policies involved was an "occurrence" policy. Under 35-1-817 (now repealed), it was proper to name the second company as defendant in the action, but Western, the only company insuring the manufacturer at the time of the injury, was the only company obligated to pay any claim arising from the accident. Travelers Ins. Co. v. W. Fire Ins. Co., 218 M 452, 709 P2d 639, 42 St. Rep. 1735 (1985).

35-1-818. Merger of subsidiary.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-805 [now repealed]. Note that §11.04 [this section] reduces the percentage requirement for the parent corporation to 80% from 95% [35-1-805(1)(a)] [now repealed]. Also, §11.04 [this section] permits shareholders of the subsidiary to waive the mailing requirements.

In addition, §11.04(e) [subsection (5) of this section] prohibits the articles of merger from containing amendments to the articles of incorporation of the parent corporation.

While the RMBCA suggests that parent corporations owning 90% or more of the stock of the subsidiary have the benefit of this statute the Committee opted to reduce the percentage to 80%. It did so because of the widely held belief (particularly for tax purposes) that 80% of a corporation is sufficient control as to make that corporation a subsidiary.

This simplified procedure is afforded to mergers of parent and subsidiary corporations to provide the parent corporation with a way to eliminate minority shareholders' interest in a subsidiary without calling a shareholders' meeting. The subsidiaries' shareholders, however, have the right to dissent pursuant to §13.02 [35-1-827]. In addition, if the purpose of a merger is to "freeze out" minority shareholders of the subsidiary corporation, the merger may give rise to claim of breach of a fiduciary duty. See, e.g. Singer v. Magnavox Co. 380 A.2d 969 (Del. 1977) and Weinberger v. UOP Inc., 426 A.2d 1333 (Del. Ch. 1981).

35-1-822. Sale of assets in regular course of business — mortgage of assets.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds to MCA §35-1-808 [now repealed]. The authority to take the actions stated in §12.01(a)(1) and (2) [subsections (1)(a) and (1)(b) of this section] are found in MCA §35-1-808 [now repealed]. Section 12.01(a)(3) [subsection (1)(c) of this section] is new and allows easy formation of a holding company. The committee carefully examined the advantages and disadvantages of subsection (a)(3) [subsection (1)(c) of this section]. The advantage of (a)(3) [subsection (1)(c) of this section] is ease of formation of a subsidiary. The disadvantage of (a)(3) [subsection (1)(c) of this section] is that a corporation, in a thinly disguised step transaction, could transfer all assets to a subsidiary, then have the subsidiary transfer all assets to the third party, circumventing the need for a shareholder vote and the shareholder's right to the appraisal remedy. Under theories of Farris v. Glen Alden, 143 A.2d 25 (Del. 1948) (constructive merger), this step transaction may be a "constructive sale of assets outside the ordinary course of business" allowing shareholders appraisal rights.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Option to Purchase: Section 15-901, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), did not restrict powers of corporation's officers and directors in prosecuting corporation's business with respect to transactions incident to its ordinary activities and calculated to further its continuance in business. When a mining corporation could not meet the terms of an option to purchase mining claims within the few days remaining, its officers acted as ordinarily prudent businessmen carrying on their business affairs, without evasion of statute, by conveying the claims to an individual who paid off the option and gave the corporation an option to purchase the claims from him on a later date. N. Min. Corp. v. Trunz, 124 F2d 14 (9th Cir. 1941).

Allegation That Contract Entered Into by Lawful Authority — Sufficiency: Complaint, in an action for breach of a contract of sale of corporate mining property which also included a sale of its stock, alleging that the contract was entered into by the defendant corporation by lawful authority under section 15-901, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), was sufficient at least so far as its property was concerned, irrespective of whether the sale of the stock could be enforced, and therefore a general demurrer to the complaint did not lie. Smith v. Jack Pot Min. Co., 109 M 445, 97 P2d 368 (1939).

Mortgage of Corporate Property: Under section 15-901, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), a corporation had power to mortgage all its property either by a two-thirds vote of its stockholders at a meeting called for that purpose or by adopting a bylaw empowering its board of directors to do so; hence when the complaint in an action to foreclose a corporate mortgage and trust deed alleged that the corporation had, "pursuant to lawful authority and corporate action of its stockholders and board of directors", etc., executed such deed, the pleading was sufficient to show authority in the corporation to mortgage its property. Thomson v. Nygaard, 98 M 529, 41 P2d 1 (1935).

Sale of Leasehold Interest: Under the common-law powers reserved to corporations by the proviso in section 15-901, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and enumerated in a general way in sections 15-401 and 15-801, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the board of directors of a going corporation could in the proper pursuit of its business and within the purposes of its creation, against the dissent of a minority of its stockholders, sell a leasehold interest in realty with improvements thereon. When such sale was made before plaintiffs had judgment against the selling corporation, they acquired no title under execution sale, and nonsuit was properly granted in their action in ejectment against the purchaser. Wortman v. Luna Park Amusement Co., 61 M 89, 201 P 570 (1921), explained in N. Min. Corp. v. Trunz, 124 F2d 14 (9th Cir. 1941).

35-1-823. Sale of assets other than in regular course of business.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Subsection (h) [subsection (8) of this section] has been added to the RMBCA to allow corporations the flexibility to approve the sale with majority shareholder approval, instead of two-thirds approval scheme. In order not to jeopardize the rights of minority shareholders of existing corporations, opting into the majority approval scheme requires a vote of owners of two-thirds of the shares.

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Breach of Fiduciary Duty in Conversion of Corporate Property Without Requisite Notice and Shareholder Approval — Punitive Damages Unavailable Absent Showing of Actual Malice or Fraud: Phil was two-thirds majority shareholder in Trifad Entertainment, Inc. (Trifad), and Brad was one-third minority shareholder and Trifad director. Following Phil's extradition to Florida on racketeering charges, Brad secured a loan for $15,000, deposited the money in the Trifad account, and then sold virtually all of Trifad's assets to himself for $15,000. In addition, Brad wrote checks on Trifad's account for taxes owed and for estimated tax payments and withdrew one-third of the remaining balance and left two-thirds in the account, all without attempting to contact Phil. Phil later sued Brad for breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and conversion and requested punitive damages, contending that Brad's actions were performed with actual malice and constituted actual fraud. At trial, Brad contended that the actions were reasonable considering Phil was in jail facing criminal charges, and Brad cross-claimed for indemnification from Trifad for litigation expenses and liabilities incurred in his capacity as Trifad director. The District Court found for Brad on all counts, but denied corporate indemnification. Both Phil and Brad appealed. The Supreme Court reversed, finding that Brad failed to comply with this section by selling corporate property without the requisite notice and shareholder approval. Although contacting Phil would have been difficult, it was not impossible. However, even if Phil had been unavailable for consultation, this section does not contain any exceptions to the notice and approval requirements governing the sale of corporate assets. Further, the sale constituted conversion because Brad exercised unauthorized dominion over Trifad property by transferring ownership to himself. The case was remanded for a determination of damages, including possible damages other than those provided in 27-1-320 if peculiar circumstances warranted compensation for future lost income and profits. The District Court erred in concluding that Brad did not breach his fiduciary duties to Trifad; however, absent proof of actual malice or actual fraud, punitive damages were not warranted. Because a breach of fiduciary duty occurred, Brad could not claim to be wholly successful in the action, so Brad's claim for corporate indemnification also failed under 35-1-453. Trifad Entertainment, Inc. v. Anderson, 2001 MT 227, 306 M 499, 36 P3d 363 (2001).

Exchange of Corporate Property Not Contemplated in Stockholder Agreement — Minority Shareholder Entitled to Notice of Dissenters' Rights: The provisions of a stockholders' agreement dealt with procedures for the sale and transfer of shares but did not contemplate an exchange transaction of all corporate property or a fundamental change in the corporate form. Therefore, the Montana Business Corporation Act, Title 35, ch. 1, including provisions giving rise to dissenters' rights, rather than the provisions of the stockholders' agreement itself, controlled the resolution of the exchange transaction. Under the Act, a dissenting shareholder may demand that the corporation buy back that shareholder's shares at fair value if the corporation takes an action that fundamentally alters the character of the shareholder's investment. Because the corporation president and majority shareholder exchanged virtually all the corporate property other than in the ordinary course of business, all minority shareholders should have been notified of the proposed exchange or should have been allowed to vote on the proposal at a stockholders' meeting and should have been notified of dissenters' rights within 10 days after the exchange.

The minority shareholders' mere failure to object to the exchange did not constitute a waiver of their dissenters' rights because they were never given notice of their right to dissent. Hansen v. 75 Ranch Co., 1998 MT 77, 288 M 310, 957 P2d 32, 55 St. Rep. 322 (1998).

Relinquishment of Corporate Assets by Directors Holding Fifty Percent of Stock: By a 2-to-1 vote, directors holding 50% of the stock of corporation being dissolved outvoted the third director, who held the other 50%, and voted to relinquish the corporation's ownership of stained glass windows. A law firm the corporation designated to hold and disburse the proceeds from the sale of corporate assets filed an interpleader action to determine who should receive what funds. The court properly found that if relinquishment of the windows had been put to a shareholder vote, the vote would have been equal and concluded that the disposal was not in the regular course of business and violated 35-1-809 (now repealed). The court awarded the dissenting director-shareholder damages against the other two equal to one-half the value the court placed on the windows. Schulz, Davis & Warren v. Marinkovich, 203 M 12, 661 P2d 5, 40 St. Rep. 262 (1983).

Implied Authority of Corporate President — Doctrine of Estoppel to Enforce Lease Option: When two of the corporation's three directors, one of whom was the corporate president and controlling shareholder, signed an option to lease land agreement, the corporation could not assert lack of corporate authority as a defense to the lease option obligation because of the implied authority of a corporate president to act on behalf of the corporation. The doctrine of estoppel was applicable. Hauptman v. Edwards, Inc., 170 M 310, 553 P2d 975 (1976).

Gifts Ultra Vires: Corporations have no power to make gifts of their property; hence when the directors of a corporation, after purporting to convey its property to another corporation, executed without consideration a deed of trust to a third party covering the same property and the capital stock of the second company received therefor, the transaction was void not only under section 15-901, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), but as ultra vires the corporation. Hanrahan v. Andersen, 108 M 218, 90 P2d 494 (1939).

Without Essential Compliance, Conveyance a Nullity: It was essential to comply with section 15-901, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), as to holding special stockholders' meetings to consider selling or otherwise disposing of the whole or any part of a corporation's property, and the conveyance was a nullity when two of such meetings were held on an 11 and 5 days' notice irrespective of the fact that the corporation may thereafter have maintained an office and transacted business or had some property remaining. Hanrahan v. Andersen, 108 M 218, 90 P2d 494 (1939), distinguished in N. Min. Corp. v. Trunz, 124 F2d 14 (9th Cir. 1941).

When Neither Directors Nor Stockholders Have Right to Sell Property Against Stockholder's Dissent: When corporation was solvent and prosperous and well able to achieve object of its creation, neither directors nor stockholders would have right to sell corporation property against dissent of stockholder unless authority was granted by statute; in instant case, proposition for transfer of corporate property for period of years for development purposes was held too vague to form basis of contract against dissent of stockholder. Schwartz v. Inspiration Gold Min. Co., 15 F. Supp. 1030 (D.C. Mont. 1936).

Transfer of Business to President: The finding that a corporation which claimed to have transferred its business to its president had ceased to do business and was therefore not taxable was held unwarranted under the evidence (sections 15-901 through 15-911, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and 72-20-201 and 72-20-204, MCA) (now repealed). Case Notes

Sale of Minority Shares to Majority Shareholder or Corporation — Discount Inappropriate: A minority discount is inappropriate when calculating fair value for the sale of a minority shareholder's shares in a closely held corporation to a majority shareholder or to the corporation. A minority discount recognizes that controlling shares are worth more in the market than are noncontrolling shares. However, because there is no market involved in an inside transfer of shares, the minority discount should not be applied to an inside transfer. Rather, the minority shareholder is entitled to fair value for the shares, pursuant to 35-1-827. Fair value, as set out in this section, means the value of the shares immediately before the effectuation of the corporate action to which the dissenter objects. Hansen v. 75 Ranch Co., 1998 MT 77, 288 M 310, 957 P2d 32, 55 St. Rep. 322 (1998), overruling McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239 (1996).

"Fair Value" of Minority Shares Not Precluding Application of Minority Discount Value: McCann Ranch, Inc. (MRI), brought a declaratory judgment action against Sharon in order to determine the value of her 600 minority shares for purposes of the dissolution of her marriage. Sharon argued that she would not be paid the fair value of her shares if the shares were valued using a discount for minority shares. The Supreme Court held that nothing in this section precluded the consideration of a minority shareholder's lack of control over the affairs of the corporation and of the lack of marketability of minority shares in determining the fair value of those shares. McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239, 53 St. Rep. 349 (1996), overruled in Hansen v. 75 Ranch Co., 1998 MT 77, 288 M 310, 957 P2d 32, 55 St. Rep. 322 (1998).

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Decrease of Voting Interest From 18% to 10.75% — Material and Adverse Impact to Shareholder — Remanded to Calculate Value of Shares: The defendants were shareholders of a closely held family corporation. The board of directors granted voting rights to a new class of stock, which reduced the defendants' overall voting power, and subsequently sought a declaratory judgment on the matter. The District Court concluded that none of the defendants were entitled to be paid for any of their shares because they had not been materially and adversely impacted. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the decision as it applied to one of the shareholders whose voting interest decreased from 18% to 10.75% due to the board action, and it remanded the matter for the District Court to calculate the value of that shareholder's shares. Wyo-Ben, Inc. v. Bixby, 2014 MT 334, 377 Mont. 318, 339 P.3d 1255.

Exchange of Corporate Property Not Contemplated in Stockholder Agreement — Minority Shareholder Entitled to Notice of Dissenters' Rights: The provisions of a stockholders' agreement dealt with procedures for the sale and transfer of shares but did not contemplate an exchange transaction of all corporate property or a fundamental change in the corporate form. Therefore, the Montana Business Corporation Act, Title 35, ch. 1, including provisions giving rise to dissenters' rights, rather than the provisions of the stockholders' agreement itself, controlled the resolution of the exchange transaction. Under the Act, a dissenting shareholder may demand that the corporation buy back that shareholder's shares at fair value if the corporation takes an action that fundamentally alters the character of the shareholder's investment. Because the corporation president and majority shareholder exchanged virtually all the corporate property other than in the ordinary course of business, all minority shareholders should have been notified of the proposed exchange or should have been allowed to vote on the proposal at a stockholders' meeting and should have been notified of dissenters' rights within 10 days after the exchange. The minority shareholders' mere failure to object to the exchange did not constitute a waiver of their dissenters' rights because they were never given notice of their right to dissent. Hansen v. 75 Ranch Co., 1998 MT 77, 288 M 310, 957 P2d 32, 55 St. Rep. 322 (1998).

Sale of Minority Shares to Majority Shareholder or Corporation — Discount Inappropriate: A minority discount is inappropriate when calculating fair value for the sale of a minority shareholder's shares in a closely held corporation to a majority shareholder or to the corporation. A minority discount recognizes that controlling shares are worth more in the market than are noncontrolling shares. However, because there is no market involved in an inside transfer of shares, the minority discount should not be applied to an inside transfer. Rather, the minority shareholder is entitled to fair value for the shares, pursuant to this section. Fair value, as set out in 35-1-826, means the value of the shares immediately before the effectuation of the corporate action to which the dissenter objects. Hansen v. 75 Ranch Co., 1998 MT 77, 288 M 310, 957 P2d 32, 55 St. Rep. 322 (1998), overruling McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239 (1996).

Declaratory Judgment Action by Ranching Corporation Not Action for Full Value of Minority Shares: McCann Ranch, Inc. (MRI), brought a declaratory judgment action against Sharon in order to determine the value of her 600 minority shares for purposes of the dissolution of her marriage. Sharon argued that she should have been paid the full value of her shares because certain actions of MRI were illegal, oppressive, fraudulent, or unfairly prejudicial. The Supreme Court held that the actions of MRI in paying outstanding corporate debts, ceasing payment of dividends, and leasing corporate property did not constitute illegal, oppressive, fraudulent, or unfairly prejudicial acts. The Supreme Court also held that the action brought by Sharon was not pursuant to 35-9-501 because it was brought as a declaratory judgment action by the corporation. McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239, 53 St. Rep. 349 (1996), overruled, to the extent that a majority discount was held to be appropriate when calculating fair value for the sale of a minority shareholder's shares in a closely held corporation to a majority shareholder or to the corporation, in Hansen v. 75 Ranch Co., 1998 MT 77, 288 M 310, 957 P2d 32, 55 St. Rep. 322 (1998).

Payment of Attorney Fees Not Required — Inclusion of Litigation Cost in Corporate Value Approved: McCann Ranch, Inc. (MRI), brought a declaratory judgment action against Sharon in order to determine the value of her 600 minority shares for purposes of the dissolution of her marriage. Sharon argued that the District Court erred in refusing to award her attorney fees and costs. The Supreme Court held that inasmuch as the action was a declaratory judgment action brought by the corporation, attorney fees were not payable. The Supreme Court noted that even if the action had been a minority shareholder action, award of attorney fees was discretionary. The District Court did not abuse its discretion because there was no "prevailing party" in the action. The Supreme Court also held that the District Court did not err in the calculation of MRI's litigation expenses for inclusion in the corporate assets prior to valuation of Sharon's shares because the expenses as valued by Sharon were not supported by the record. McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239, 53 St. Rep. 349 (1996).

Estoppel: A stockholder in a reservoir company, a corporation organized for profit with power to sell its assets upon a proper vote, who, upon a sale having been made, took no timely steps to assail its legality nor brought suit until after the lapse of 5 years was estopped by his delay under sections 15-912 and 15-913, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), from questioning the proceedings leading to the sale. DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Sufficiency of Attorney's Signature After Expiration of Statute of Limitations on Reply: A petition for valuation of shares of stock was timely filed but without the signature of a Montana attorney. The signing of the petition after expiration of the 60-day statute of limitations on the reply, accomplished promptly after the attorney was made aware of objection by defense counsel, clearly was within the exception of former Rule 11, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), allowing late signatures. Gold Reserve Corp. v. McCarty, 228 M 512, 744 P2d 160, 44 St. Rep. 1723 (1987).

Equitable Order for Purchase of Shares in Dissolution Proceeding — Improper Valuation of Shares: Where the District Court properly invoked its equitable powers in a dissolution proceeding to order the plaintiff to sell and the defendants to buy the plaintiff's 75 outstanding shares, the District Court erred in its valuation of those shares by not establishing the net value of the corporation, by rejecting consideration of an earlier offer to purchase shares (which lapsed by a failure to obtain financing), and by failing to establish the value of 20 acres of land ordered exchanged for the shares. Without considering these facts, the court could not properly value the shares of the plaintiff. Maddox v. Norman, 206 M 1, 669 P2d 230, 40 St. Rep. 1463 (1983).

Dissolution and Liquidation

Part Case Notes

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Receivership Denied — Sale of Stock to Corporation Ordered — Value of Stock: Brother and sister, each owning 75 shares of family ranch incorporated into 1,000 shares, sued brother (owning 849 shares) and mother (owning 1 share) who lived on the ranch for receivership and sale of the ranch. Plaintiff brother settled for $20,000 and 20 acres of the ranch land in return for his shares. The court ordered sister to settle on the same terms. On remand for valuation of the corporation and its land, the lower court computed the net worth of the corporation, found the sister's shares worth $49,326.38, and ordered her to transfer her shares to the corporation for $9,326.38 and 20 acres of the ranch that would be worth $40,000. This was also overturned on appeal, the Supreme Court ordering that sister be paid $20,000 and 20 acres. Maddox v. Norman, 215 M 458, 697 P2d 1368, 42 St. Rep. 539 (1985).

Equitable Power of District Court to Order Stock Sale in Place of Dissolution: Where the plaintiff petitioned the District Court to appoint a receiver and dissolve a family ranching corporation in which she held 75 out of 1,000 outstanding shares, the District Court did not err in refusing to appoint the receiver and instead ordering the plaintiff to sell and the defendants to buy her corporate shares. Past decisions of the Montana Supreme Court show that the courts may use equitable powers in resolving disputes between shareholders, and decisions from other jurisdictions have recognized and approved the fashioning of equitable remedies less drastic than dissolution in cases where dissolution is not warranted. Because the facts show dissolution was not warranted in this case, the District Court's order was an appropriate equitable remedy. Maddox v. Norman, 206 M 1, 669 P2d 230, 40 St. Rep. 1463 (1983).

Equitable Order for Purchase of Shares in Dissolution Proceeding — Improper Valuation of Shares: Where the District Court properly invoked its equitable powers in a dissolution proceeding to order the plaintiff to sell and the defendants to buy the plaintiff's 75 outstanding shares, the District Court erred in its valuation of those shares by not establishing the net value of the corporation, by rejecting consideration of an earlier offer to purchase shares (which lapsed by a failure to obtain financing), and by failing to establish the value of 20 acres of land ordered exchanged for the shares. Without considering these facts, the court could not properly value the shares of the plaintiff. Maddox v. Norman, 206 M 1, 669 P2d 230, 40 St. Rep. 1463 (1983), distinguished in Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990).

35-1-931. Dissolution by incorporators or initial directors.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.01 [this section], however, provides for dissolution by the incorporators or the initial directors if no shares have been issued (even though business may have commenced) or if shares have been issued but no business has commenced. MCA §35-1-901 [now repealed] provides for dissolution by the incorporators or initial directors only if no business has commenced and no shares have been issued. 35-1-932. Dissolution by board of directors and shareholders.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Subsection (f) [subsection (6) of this section] has been added to the RMBCA to allow corporations the flexibility to approve dissolutions with majority shareholder approval, instead of a two-thirds approved scheme. In order not to jeopardize the rights of minority shareholders of existing corporations, opting into the majority approval scheme requires a vote of owners of two-thirds of the shares.

35-1-933. Articles of dissolution.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Note that a corporation may be dissolved by filing only one document. Under existing law corporations must file a statement of intent to dissolve and articles of dissolution. The two-step proviso, according to the comments, is "unnecessarily complex." Although a "statement of intent to dissolve" may arguably notify creditors of an impending dissolution, creditors are given substantial rights at §§14.06 and 14.07 [35-1-936 and 35-1-937].

The proposal also eliminates the requirement that the articles set forth a tally of the vote for the dissolution.

Case Notes

Plaintiff's Ability to Maintain Action Against Defunct Corporation: In an asbestos contamination case, 47 plaintiffs sued 53 defendants in Cascade County, including one defendant, Robinson Insulation Company (Robinson), that was a defunct corporation. Another defendant, Atlantic Richfield Company (Atlantic) moved for a change of venue to Flathead County, contending that as a defunct corporation, Robinson did not reside in Cascade County at the commencement of the action and had been improperly joined so that venue could be maintained in Cascade County. However, Robinson's status as a defunct corporation did not mandate a change of venue. The corporate survival statutes, 35-1-937 and this section, maintained the status quo concerning corporate rights and responsibilities before and after dissolution, including actions against defunct corporations. Atlantic's argument that application of this interpretation to Robinson would require impermissible retroactive application of the corporate survival statutes failed because Robinson acquired no vested right to be free from liability before the running of the statute of repose in former 35-1-930 (repealed 1991). Denial of Atlantic's motion to change venue was affirmed. Allen v. Atl. Richfield Co., 2005 MT 281, 329 M 230, 124 P3d 132 (2005), following Williams v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co., 174 M 387, 571 P2d 90 (1977).

Venue Determined by Allegations in Complaint — Venue for Case Against Defunct Corporation: In an asbestos contamination case, 47 plaintiffs sued 53 defendants in Cascade County, including one defendant, Robinson Insulation Company (Robinson), that was a defunct corporation that had resided in and operated out of Cascade County. Defendant Atlantic Richfield Company (Atlantic) moved for a change of venue to Flathead County, contending that Robinson did not reside in Cascade County at the commencement of the action and had been improperly joined so that venue could be maintained in Cascade County. The motion for change of venue was denied, and Atlantic appealed. The Supreme Court noted that a motion to change the place of trial brought in a proper county may not be granted and that for tort actions the proper venue is the county where any defendant resided at the commencement of the action or the county where the tort was committed. The court applied the principles of Petersen v. Tucker, 228 M 393, 742 P2d 483 (1987), in holding that the court will not go beyond the allegations in the complaint to determine questions of venue. Plaintiffs named Robinson as a defendant in both the original and amended complaint, and the District Court did not dismiss Robinson as a defendant, so Cascade County was a proper venue for the case. Denial of the motion for change of venue was affirmed. Allen v. Atl. Richfield Co., 2005 MT 281, 329 M 230, 124 P3d 132 (2005).

In-Kind Distribution of Company Assets to Estate Not Error: Following a noncite opinion, Estate of James v. Hunt, 312 M 525N, 55 P3d 419N (2002), the personal representative petitioned for an in-kind distribution of the estate's real property held by trustees of a mining company. Prior to a hearing on the petition, the company board of directors purported to liquidate the estate's property interests by sale to one of its members and then moved to dismiss the petition for in-kind distribution as moot. The District Court voided the liquidation sale on equitable grounds and ordered the board of directors to immediately distribute the estate's fractional share of the now-defunct corporation's assets to the estate in kind. The board of directors appealed on grounds that the District Court erred in ordering the in-kind distribution. The Supreme Court disagreed. Under this section, in-kind distribution of some corporate assets after dissolution is allowed. Rights to the property that James deeded to the company devolved upon the estate when the sale offer was made, so the board of directors had no authority to sell it. Although the distribution was informal, all company shareholders received a distribution in kind, so the District Court did not err in voiding the sale and ordering the board of directors to deed real property to the state. However, the Supreme Court remanded the case for a determination of James's testamentary intent. In re Estate of James, 2004 MT 314, 324 M 24, 102 P3d 12 (2004).

Dissolved Corporation's Officer's Use of Corporate Funds for Personal Expenses: Although the Montana Business Corporation Act does not specifically limit a director's use of corporate property to corporate purposes, the limitation is implied by the duties of good faith and care fundamental to a director's relationship to the corporation. Absent shareholders consent, defendant, who was president, director, and majority shareholder of a corporation, was not authorized to use its money for noncorporate purposes, and after it was dissolved, he was required to hold its assets in trust until creditor and shareholder debts were satisfied. Therefore, he was not authorized to write checks on the corporation's account to pay his personal debts to his attorney and former wife. He produced no evidence to support his claim that his need to pay child support to his wife and that his arrest for failure to do so would negatively affect the company's future and therefore justified the checks to her. Furthermore, it was not in the best interests of winding up the dissolved corporation. Moreover, it was not a defense that because of his ownership interest in the company he was spending his own money. The shareholders have a vested equitable interest in a dissolved corporation's property, but do not have a legal ownership interest in the property until the creditors are paid and the winding up is complete, at which point the shareholders have a legal ownership interest deriving from their right to a pro rata share of the assets remaining after the creditors are paid. Because the corporation was insolvent when the checks were written, there would have been no assets left for the shareholders had the creditors been paid off at the time that the checks were written. Therefore, it could not be said that defendant stole their money, and the theft conviction was set aside. St. v. Debus, 2002 MT 307, 313 M 57, 59 P3d 1154 (2002).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Payment of Director's Wage Claims by Directors: Stockholders adopted a plan of liquidation and dissolution which provided that after the sale of assets, the corporation would not engage in any business and the directors and officers would continue in office solely to wind up the corporate affairs. Almost 10 months later, the directors voted to grant a director's claim for wages not provided for prior to the dissolution. The liquidating directors improperly granted the claims, and the Supreme Court ordered disbursal of the corporate funds without regard to any such wage claims or attorney fees based on them. The grant of the wage claim was especially improper where, by a 2-to-1 vote, two directors holding 50% of the stock granted the wage claim of one of them and denied the similar wage claims of persons related to the third director, who held the other 50% of the stock. Schulz, Davis & Warren v. Marinkovich, 203 M 12, 661 P2d 5, 40 St. Rep. 262 (1983).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Payment of Director's Wage Claims by Directors: Stockholders adopted a plan of liquidation and dissolution which provided that after the sale of assets, the corporation would not engage in any business and the directors and officers would continue in office solely to wind up the corporate affairs. Almost 10 months later, the directors voted to grant a director's claim for wages not provided for prior to the dissolution. The liquidating directors improperly granted the claims, and the Supreme Court ordered disbursal of the corporate funds without regard to any such wage claims or attorney fees based on them. The grant of the wage claim was especially improper where, by a 2-to-1 vote, two directors holding 50% of the stock granted the wage claim of one of them and denied the similar wage claims of persons related to the third director, who held the other 50% of the stock. Schulz, Davis & Warren v. Marinkovich, 203 M 12, 661 P2d 5, 40 St. Rep. 262 (1983).

Suits by Stockholders: Individuals cannot maintain an action for a corporation on the theory that they are the possible successors to the corporation's title upon the expiration of the corporate life. Malcom v. Stondall Land & Inv. Co., 129 M 142, 284 P2d 258 (1955).

Liabilities Accrued Before Dissolution: Section 15-1202, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), saves the remedy against a domestic corporation for liabilities accrued before dissolution. Mont. Valley Land Co. v. Bestul, 126 M 426, 253 P2d 325 (1953).

Ownership of Stock — Determination: In action to determine ownership of corporate stock of dissolved corporation, letter from one of organizers showing original distribution of stock was admissible in evidence. Henningsen v. Stromberg, 124 M 185, 221 P2d 438 (1950).

Action in Tort Against Statutory Trustees Triable to Jury: An action by a stockholder in a dissolved corporation against its statutory trustees in their individual capacity to recover damages for breach of obligation to wind up affairs, engaging in business in conjunction with a bank causing trust estate to become insolvent, was one in tort and as such triable to a jury, and not one in equity as for an accounting, triable without a jury, and necessity of introduction of books and records no obstacle. State ex rel. Word v. District Court, 112 M 458, 117 P2d 494 (1941).

Trustees Engaging in Business Instead of Winding Up Affairs — Stockholder's Right of Action: A stockholder of a dissolved corporation may maintain in his own behalf an action in tort for damages against its former directors as trustees, who instead of winding up corporate affairs as required by section 15-1102, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), engaged with a bank in a business enterprise with an alleged fraudulent design that brought on insolvency and depreciation of the corporation's stocks and bonds. Other stockholders and creditors need not be joined. Word v. Union Bank & Trust Co., 111 M 279, 107 P2d 1083 (1940).

Claim for Personal Services Rendered Prior to Dissolution: Court's decree, finding all allegations of the petition setting forth, inter alia, as required by section 15-1109, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), that all claims and demands against the corporation had been satisfied and discharged, were true, was not res judicata as to a claim thereafter made for personal services rendered prior to dissolution, in view of the provision of section 15-1202, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), that the dissolution shall not take away or impair any remedy given against the corporation for any liability previously incurred. In re Courtney Bros., Inc., 110 M 289, 100 P2d 471 (1940).

Purpose to Safeguard Rights of Creditors: The chief purpose of the provision in section 15-1102, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), that directors of a dissolved corporation, acting as trustees of the creditors and stockholders thereof, shall settle corporate affairs and apply proceeds of liquidation to payment of debts, etc., is to safeguard the rights of creditors against attempts by the directors to cut off their claims by secret or summary proceedings and to dispose of corporate assets by an unauthorized conveyance. In re Courtney Bros., Inc., 110 M 289, 100 P2d 471 (1940).

Creditor's Remedy — Petition in Probate: A creditor of a dissolved corporation, who claimed that its directors had failed in their duty as trustees of its creditors and stockholders, filed a document denominated "Petition and Affidavit for Order to Show Cause", which prayed that the court require the directors to show cause why they should not proceed forthwith to the liquidation of their trust as such trustees. It was held on application for a Writ of Supervisory Control to review the court's action in dismissing the proceeding, that relator's remedy under section 15-1102, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), is by petition in probate for appointment of the directors or some others as trustees to proceed under the statute. State ex rel. Stoddard v. District Court, 108 M 51, 88 P2d 34 (1939).

Applies Although No Assets: While there cannot be a trust without there being trust property in existence, section 15-1102, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), making the directors of a dissolved bank "trustees" with power to sue and be sued in behalf of the corporation and to settle and liquidate its affairs, applies even though there be no assets to be administered. Fitzpatrick v. Stevenson, 104 M 439, 67 P2d 310 (1937).

Failure to Allege "Other Persons Not Appointed": The complaint in an action against the trustees of a dissolved state bank to recover damages from the bank for breach of an option contract to purchase land held by the bank was not insufficient for failure to allege that other persons were not appointed in place of the directors of the bank to act as trustees to settle and liquidate its affairs, when dissolution was voluntary and not by judicial proceedings. Fitzpatrick v. Stevenson, 104 M 439, 67 P2d 310 (1937).

Right of Action Unimpaired By Dissolution: Under section 15-1202, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), dissolution of a corporation does not take away or impair a remedy given against it; hence the plaintiff in an action against the statutory trustees of a dissolved bank to fasten liability upon the bank for breach of contract was not deprived by the dissolution of his right to institute the action for the purpose of reducing his claim to judgment, taking his chances to realize thereon. Fitzpatrick v. Stevenson, 104 M 439, 67 P2d 310 (1937).

Voluntary Dissolution — Preference of Creditors: A bank going into voluntary liquidation may not prefer one creditor to another; and if its assets be distributed to others in preference to one who has a claim against it, he has a right of action. The complaint is not insufficient because it shows affirmatively that the corporation has no assets. Fitzpatrick v. Stevenson, 104 M 439, 67 P2d 310 (1937).

Property of Corporation Subject to Attachment or Levy of Execution: It is the public policy of this state that the property of a dissolved corporation, other than a banking corporation, while being administered by its directors as trustee for the creditors and stockholders under section 15-1102, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), is subject to attachment or levy of execution in the same manner and in the same cases where those writs would run against the property of the corporation itself. Mieyr v. Fed. Sur. Co. of Davenport, Iowa, 97 M 503, 34 P2d 982 (1934), affirmed in Clark v. Williard, 294 US 211 (1935).

Duties of Statutory Trustees: Under section 15-1102, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), statutory trustees of a defunct corporation were required to settle and liquidate its affairs. In an action of debt against such trustees, the facts disclose that defendants had not completed their duties as trustees and that a demurrer to their plea in bar was properly sustained. Gilna v. Barker, 78 M 357, 254 P 174 (1927), explained in Clark v. Williard, 292 US 112 (1934).

Failure to Observe Statutory Requirements: After a corporation has come into existence by virtue of a statute relative to the formation of corporations, failure to observe the requirements of other statutes, though rendering the corporate franchise subject to forfeiture under section 15-808, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), by affirmative action by the state, does not ipso facto work a dissolution of it or lay its corporate capacity open to attack by a private citizen in a controversy between him and the corporation. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913).

Receivership Unnecessary: A receiver should not be appointed to take charge of a building and loan company, when the directors are acting as trustees to wind up its affairs after its charter has expired, unless it appears that the party complaining has been or is about to be injured by unwarranted procedure on the part of such trustees. Ferrell v. Evans, 25 M 444, 65 P 714 (1901), explained in Clark v. Williard, 292 US 112 (1934).

35-1-937. Unknown claims against dissolved corporation.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-906 [now repealed], but contains several material changes. Only subsection (b) [subsection (2) of this section] is from the RMBCA.

This provision changes the law as follows:

(1) The existing statute may not allow claims arising after dissolution to be made against the corporation. As a result if a defective product is manufactured before dissolution, but the injury occurs after dissolution, the plaintiff would have two potential problems recovering against the corporation or its assets: (a) the claim arguably did not arise before dissolution and (b) the 5 year limitation period in §35-1-930 [now repealed] may have run, even though the tort limitation period (which may have commenced at the date of discovery of the negligence or defect) has not run. See, e.g. Blankenship v. Demmler Manufacturing Co., 89 Ill. App. 3d 569, 411 N.E.2d 1153 (1980). The problem is addressed by (a) specifically allowing claims accruing after the date of dissolution and (b) removing the 5 year limitation period. Of course, the applicable state law statute of limitation period for the claim made (e.g., contract or tort statute of limitations) would still apply. In eliminating a separate statutory limitation period from the corporate code, Montana joins the ranks of twelve other jurisdictions (see 3 Model Business Corporation Act 1505 (1989)).

The issue of whether to establish a separate limitation period for dissolved corporations is a difficult one. On the one hand, corporations and shareholders have an interest in protection from extended litigation after dissolution. Opting for no separate limitation period impairs the ability of the corporation to wind up its affairs and forces shareholders who receive assets to hold them subject to the claim of creditors. On the other hand, a short limitation period impairs the rights of injured parties for injuries arising before dissolution (or after dissolution if a product was manufactured before dissolution).

The committee carefully weighed these competing considerations. It was decided that the tort, contract and other applicable statutes of limitations (which are not changed by this legislation) were sufficient to protect the interest of the corporation in avoiding extended litigation after dissolution. Further, the committee was convinced that injured parties should not have different rights to pursue the assets of a dissolved business causing injury, depending on whether that business happened to be a proprietorship, partnership or corporation.

Finally, Montana law evidences a strong policy to insure that creditors of a corporation (including injured plaintiffs) are paid before shareholders of a corporation. Section 14.07(c) [subsection (3) of this section] is consistent with that policy.

(2) Subsection (b) [subsection (2) of this section] codifies the common law trust fund doctrine that provides that the property of a corporation is considered a trust fund for the payment of corporate debts. As such, shareholders take assets upon dissolution subject to the claims of creditors. Codifying this doctrine adds certainty to the law.

(3) Subsection (c) [subsection (3) of this section] codifies the holding in North American Asbestos Corp. v. Superior Court, 180 Cal. App.3d 902, 225 Cal. 877 (1986). This case holds that when the corporate code of the state of incorporation regarding limitation periods for claims against dissolved corporations differs from the corporate code in the jurisdiction where a claim arises, the law of the jurisdiction where the claim arises applies.

This section accomplishes the following objectives:

(a) It allows plaintiffs injured in Montana to have the same rights with respect to corporate limitation periods against foreign corporations as it has against domestic corporations. One's rights should not depend on the state of incorporation of the defendant.

(b) It effectuates Montana's strong policy that corporations doing business in this state must pay their creditors (including injured plaintiffs) before the shareholders enjoy distributions or liquidations.

(c) It protects codefendants, by helping assure that codefendants jointly liable for damages are not required to pay the share of damages attributable to those dissolved corporations incorporated in a state with a short limitation period for dissolved corporations.

Case Notes

Plaintiff's Ability to Maintain Action Against Defunct Corporation: In an asbestos contamination case, 47 plaintiffs sued 53 defendants in Cascade County, including one defendant, Robinson Insulation Company (Robinson), that was a defunct corporation. Another defendant, Atlantic Richfield Company (Atlantic) moved for a change of venue to Flathead County, contending that as a defunct corporation, Robinson did not reside in Cascade County at the commencement of the action and had been improperly joined so that venue could be maintained in Cascade County. However, Robinson's status as a defunct corporation did not mandate a change of venue. The corporate survival statutes, 35-1-935 and this section, maintained the status quo concerning corporate rights and responsibilities before and after dissolution, including actions against defunct corporations. Atlantic's argument that application of this interpretation to Robinson would require impermissible retroactive application of the corporate survival statutes failed because Robinson acquired no vested right to be free from liability before the running of the statute of repose in former 35-1-930 (repealed 1991). Denial of Atlantic's motion to change venue was affirmed. Allen v. Atl. Richfield Co., 2005 MT 281, 329 M 230, 124 P3d 132 (2005), following Williams v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co., 174 M 387, 571 P2d 90 (1977).

Venue Determined by Allegations in Complaint — Venue for Case Against Defunct Corporation: In an asbestos contamination case, 47 plaintiffs sued 53 defendants in Cascade County, including one defendant, Robinson Insulation Company (Robinson), that was a defunct corporation that had resided in and operated out of Cascade County. Defendant Atlantic Richfield Company (Atlantic) moved for a change of venue to Flathead County, contending that Robinson did not reside in Cascade County at the commencement of the action and had been improperly joined so that venue could be maintained in Cascade County. The motion for change of venue was denied, and Atlantic appealed. The Supreme Court noted that a motion to change the place of trial brought in a proper county may not be granted and that for tort actions the proper venue is the county where any defendant resided at the commencement of the action or the county where the tort was committed. The court applied the principles of Petersen v. Tucker, 228 M 393, 742 P2d 483 (1987), in holding that the court will not go beyond the allegations in the complaint to determine questions of venue. Plaintiffs named Robinson as a defendant in both the original and amended complaint, and the District Court did not dismiss Robinson as a defendant, so Cascade County was a proper venue for the case. Denial of the motion for change of venue was affirmed. Allen v. Atl. Richfield Co., 2005 MT 281, 329 M 230, 124 P3d 132 (2005).

Official Comments

Official Comments: Compare with MCA §§35-6-102 and 35-1-921 [now repealed]. Note that under §14.30(4) [subsection (4) of this section] a corporation itself may elect to petition a court to supervise its own dissolution. There is no comparable MCA provision.

Section 14.30(2)(i) [subsection (2)(a) of this section] adds "or the business and affairs of the corporations can no longer be conducted to the advantage of the shareholders generally."

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 REVISION

Claims for Breach of Duties Against Corporate Representatives Not Prohibited by Corporate Dissolution: The plaintiff sued the defendant, a corporation owned by the plaintiff and his estranged siblings, seeking dissolution of the entity and damages. The plaintiff alleged breach of fiduciary duties and misappropriation of corporate funds. After the parties eventually agreed to the dissolution, the District Court dissolved the company under 35-1-938 and appointed a receiver. Subsequently, the plaintiff filed a motion seeking to amend his complaint to assert punitive damages and clarify compensatory damages and other discovery motions. The District Court dismissed the complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, reasoning that 35-1-939 authorizes dissolution of a corporation or other equitable remedies, but not both. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed, holding that after a court grants dissolution, 35-1-938 and 35-1-939 do not foreclose a claimant from pursuing claims against individual shareholders or officers or directors for breach of fiduciary duties. Kulko v. Davail, Inc., 2015 MT 340, 381 Mont. 511, 363 P.3d 430.

Claim for Stockholder Oppression Properly Dismissed — Legitimate Business Reason for Action: The defendants were shareholders of a closely held family corporation. The board of directors granted voting rights to a new class of stock, which reduced the defendants' overall voting power, and subsequently sought a declaratory judgment on the matter. Ultimately, the defendants counterclaimed alleging oppression and asking the District Court to dissolve the corporation. The District Court dismissed the counterclaim, ruling that the board had a legitimate business purpose in granting the voting rights and had taken reasonable efforts to protect the defendants' interests. On appeal, the Supreme Court agreed that the defendants had not provided a legally sufficient basis for maintaining an oppression claim and affirmed the dismissal of the claim. Wyo-Ben, Inc. v. Bixby, 2014 MT 334, 377 Mont. 318, 339 P.3d 1255.

Fiduciary Duty — Oppressed Shareholder Claim: Brian Whitehorn took and sold grain belonging to Whitehorn Farms, Inc., beyond what had been authorized by the corporation. The other officers, directors, and shareholders of the corporation viewed Brian's actions of taking the additional bushels as theft or conversion. They held a special meeting and removed Brian as a director, officer, and employee of the corporation. The special meeting was properly noticed, and Brian received notice of the meeting but did not attend. Brian filed suit claiming he was an oppressed shareholder and that the corporation should be dissolved or that it should be forced to repurchase his shares. The corporation filed a counterclaim for conversion of corporate property. The District Court found no oppression and denied Brian's petition and granted the corporation's counterclaim. Brian appealed. The Supreme Court found that Brian was not an oppressed shareholder. The termination of Brian's employment and officer status was properly conducted at a meeting for which notice was given and was in response to Brian's wrongdoing. The court also found that the corporation was under no obligation to buy Brian's shares and the failure to purchase the shares was not oppression. Brian's situation regarding the shares was the same as that of the other shareholders. The fact that the shares are not readily marketable is typical of closely held corporations. In addition, Brian did not have any capital investment in the shares, having acquired them by inheritance. Whitehorn v. Whitehorn Farms, Inc., 2008 MT 362, 346 M 405, 195 P3d 844 (2008).

Damages Payable for Corporate Partner's Breach of Fiduciary Duty: In dissolving a corporation, the District Court found that one partner had breached a fiduciary duty to the corporation, causing damages. However, the District Court did not make a specific dollar finding for the amount of damages or award the corporation any compensation. The Supreme Court reversed and remanded for a determination of damages to be paid to the corporation by the partner who breached the fiduciary duty. Attorney fees were properly denied because the corporate agreement contained no provision for award of attorney fees to the prevailing party in a civil action. Sartori v. S&S Trucking, Inc., 2006 MT 164, 332 M 503, 139 P3d 806 (2006), following Nat'l Cas. Co. v. Am. Bankers Ins. Co. of Fla., 2001 MT 28, 304 M 163, 19 P3d 223 (2001).

Dissolution of Corporation Based on Director Deadlock and Inability to Conduct Business to Advantage of Shareholders: Although two partners, who were the sole corporate shareholders, were undisputedly deadlocked in the management of corporate affairs, one partner contended that the District Court erroneously dissolved the corporation without finding that the corporation had been or was threatened with irreparable injury. However, the threat of corporate injury is only one condition for dissolution under subsection (2)(a) of this section. Another condition exists if the business and affairs of the corporation can no longer be conducted to the advantage of the shareholders because of the deadlock. Here, the deadlock led one of the partners to take numerous steps to sabotage the corporation, so business was no longer conducted to the advantage of both shareholder partners. A threat of irreparable injury is not a prerequisite to dissolution, and the District Court had statutory authority to dissolve the corporation. Sartori v. S&S Trucking, Inc., 2006 MT 164, 332 M 503, 139 P3d 806 (2006), followed in Kulko v. Davail, Inc., 2015 MT 340, 381 Mont. 511, 363 P.3d 430.

Attachment of Conditions Not Necessarily Indicative of Oppression — Possible Future Oppression Insufficient to Warrant Liquidation: The District Court found that a corporate director's negotiation tactics were oppressive and threatening and that he unfairly used his position to influence negotiations sufficient to trigger this section. His offer, however, was never accepted. Reversing, the Supreme Court found that the director's actions were more consistent with negotiation tactics than oppressive actions. Merely because he attached conditions to his offer did not necessarily mean his actions were oppressive. If the director had carried through on his threats, a cause of action for oppression may have arisen; however, the mere possibility of future oppressive actions is not sufficient to invoke the liquidation provisions of this section. Citing Alaska Plastics, Inc. v. Coppock, 621 P2d 270 (Alaska 1980), the court found no authority that would allow specific performance on the basis of an unaccepted offer, particularly on terms totally different from those offered. Such a rule would place a court in an impossible position of making and enforcing contracts between unwilling parties. Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990).

Action Based on Misapplication or Waste as Derivative in Nature: An action by a shareholder to liquidate a corporation under 35-1-921(1)(a)(iv) (now repealed) because corporate assets are being misapplied or wasted is based on an injury to the corporation rather than an injury to an individual shareholder and may therefore be maintained only as a derivative shareholder action. Sax v. World Wide Press, Inc., 809 F2d 610 (1987).

Personal Injury as Prerequisite to Maintaining Direct Shareholder Action: A direct shareholder action to liquidate a corporation is permitted by 35-1-921(1)(a)(ii) (now repealed), but the shareholder must allege and prove that the acts of the directors alleged to be illegal, oppressive, or fraudulent injured him personally rather than the corporation. Absent such an allegation of personal injury, the suit may be maintained only as a derivative action. Sax v. World Wide Press, Inc., 809 F2d 610 (1987).

Receivership Denied — Sale of Stock to Corporation Ordered — Value of Stock: Brother and sister, each owning 75 shares of family ranch incorporated into 1,000 shares, sued brother (owning 849 shares) and mother (owning 1 share) who lived on the ranch for receivership and sale of the ranch. Plaintiff brother settled for $20,000 and 20 acres of the ranch land in return for his shares. The court ordered sister to settle on the same terms. On remand for valuation of the corporation and its land, the lower court computed the net worth of the corporation, found the sister's shares worth $49,326.38, and ordered her to transfer her shares to the corporation for $9,326.38 and 20 acres of the ranch that would be worth $40,000. This was also overturned on appeal, the Supreme Court ordering that sister be paid $20,000 and 20 acres. Maddox v. Norman, 215 M 458, 697 P2d 1368, 42 St. Rep. 539 (1985).

Error to Order Liquidation of Family Corporation in Marital Property Disposition Decree: The court agreed with husband's contention that the trial court erred in ordering contingent liquidation of a family corporation for the enforcement and security of the wife's property division if the husband failed to make installment payments as ordered. The corporation was not a party, and thus the court had no jurisdiction over its property. Section 35-1-921 (now repealed) does not include dissolution of a corporation for nonpayment of marital obligations by one of the corporation's stockholders. However, the court remanded the case, since the trial court does have power to secure a marital settlement by granting a security interest in stock or such further security arrangements necessary to enforce the decree. In re Marriage of Buxbaum, 214 M 1, 692 P2d 411, 41 St. Rep. 2243 (1984).

Liquidation Denied Owner of 13.33 Percent of Ranch — Desire for Quick Money Inadequate Cause for Liquidation: Where the plaintiff petitioned for the appointment of a receiver and liquidation of a ranching corporation in which she owned 75 of 1,000 outstanding shares, the District Court did not err in refusing to appoint a receiver, since the evidence showed the corporation was solvent, that other shareholders who had worked to improve the ranch would be harmed by liquidation, and that the plaintiff only wanted money out of the corporation quickly in exchange for her shares. Because the comments to 35-1-921 (now repealed) indicated that the power to appoint a receiver is discretionary and that such a remedy is an extraordinary step reserved for cases in which no other remedy will provide an adequate solution, the District Court's decision will not be disturbed as it was not clearly erroneous under the circumstances. Maddox v. Norman, 206 M 1, 669 P2d 230, 40 St. Rep. 1463 (1983).

Oppression — Case-by-Case Analysis — Sophistication of Parties: Oppression, being a visible departure from the standards of fair dealing, must be examined on a case-by-case basis. The District Court's determination that defendants committed no oppression is supported by credible evidence, including the fact that approximately 20 businessmen with extensive financial and investment backgrounds were involved, and thus the District Court's determination will not be overturned. Ski Roundtop, Inc. v. Hall, 202 M 260, 658 P2d 1071, 40 St. Rep. 74 (1983).

Oppression Through Attempt to "Squeeze Out" a Shareholder: Although a corporation was in a position to declare dividends, the board of directors refused to so declare in an attempt to "squeeze out" the plaintiff shareholder. This, in addition to many other acts, constituted evidence of oppressive conduct. Oppression is to be defined in terms of the reasonable expectations of minority shareholders in light of the particular circumstances of each case. Fox v. 7L Bar Ranch Co., 198 M 201, 645 P2d 929, 39 St. Rep. 862 (1982).

Additional Requirements for Deadlock — Equitable Grounds: In addition to the statutory requirements for deadlock, there is a further burden of proving equitable grounds for dissolution of a corporation. The trial court should consider the seriousness of the deadlock, whether the deadlock prevents a profitable operation of the corporation, and the benefit or detriment to the shareholders and the public if the corporation is dissolved. Fox v. 7L Bar Ranch Co., 198 M 201, 645 P2d 929, 39 St. Rep. 862 (1982).

Corporate Liquidation — Records of Related Family Corporations Relevant: In an action for liquidation of a corporation because of oppression and shareholder deadlock, corporate minutes and financial statements of two separate but closely related family corporations were relevant and therefore admissible. Fox v. 7L Bar Ranch Co., 198 M 201, 645 P2d 929, 39 St. Rep. 862 (1982).

Probate Distribution — Not Res Judicata for Corporate Liquidation: In a previous probate proceeding, the plaintiff, as one of several legatees of a corporation, moved to have the corporation liquidated and distributed in cash or assets. The District Court, in an interpretation of the will, denied the motion and ordered distribution to be made "in kind". This ruling was not res judicata in a subsequent action for liquidation of the corporation based on oppression and shareholder deadlock. Although seeking the same relief, the two actions rested on a different set of facts. Fox v. 7L Bar Ranch Co., 198 M 201, 645 P2d 929, 39 St. Rep. 862 (1982).

Oppression in Closely Held Family Corporation — Brother Overreaching as to Deceased Brother's Wife — Heir: Plaintiff's husband and defendant were brothers and partners in a ranching operation, although each owned the land individually. Plaintiff's husband died and defendant was named executor. A corporation was formed to operate the ranch on May 1, 1973. Both parties transferred all assets to the corporation. Defendant's family got 364 more shares than plaintiff, and defendant was named president of the corporation. Restrictions were placed on the valuation and transfer of stock. On May 29, 1975, plaintiff consulted her own attorney and for the first time fully realized her position. All corporate votes became deadlocked. On April 29, 1977, plaintiff filed suit to dissolve the corporation, alleging fraud and oppressive conduct by defendant and mistake at the formation. The court found that defendant occupied a position of trust and confidence in relation to plaintiff. He was executor of her husband's estate and partner to her husband at the date of death; that status imposed on defendant the duties of a trustee. Plaintiff sought liquidation of the corporation on the grounds of oppression in that defendant had fixed the stock valuation at which plaintiff could sell and defeated plaintiff's motion to create an office giving plaintiff power equal to defendant. Oppression may be more easily found in a closely held family corporation than in a larger public corporation. The trial court properly allowed corporate liquidation if the parties are unable to agree upon property division and transfer. Skierka v. Skierka Bros., Inc., 192 M 505, 629 P2d 214, 38 St. Rep. 754 (1981).

Expiration of Corporation's Term of Existence — Receivership Unnecessary: The dissolution of a corporation by the expiration of its term of existence does not authorize a court to take its property from trustees, not charged with wrongdoing, and appoint a receiver. Merges v. Altenbrand, 45 M 355, 123 P 21 (1912).

35-1-939. Discretion of court to grant relief other than dissolution.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is from the former South Carolina Code. There are similar provisions in Illinois, Minnesota, New Jersey, North Carolina, California, Connecticut, Maryland, New York and Rhode Island.

This provision properly recognized that the liquidation remedy is a draconian remedy. It allows a minority shareholder to hold a sword over the head of the majority. In the case of Maddox v. Norman, 669 P.2d 230 (1983), the Montana Supreme Court recognized this problem and fashioned a less drastic remedy — a compelled share purchase. It held it had the inherent power to shape the appropriate equitable remedy. See Bahls, "Resolving Shareholder Dissension: Selection of the Appropriate Equitable Remedy," 15 J. Corp. Law 285 (1990). Scholarly comment would agree that the Maddox case was properly decided. Less drastic remedies often allow all shareholders to maximize value. As such, we recommend the codification of Maddox by adopting the above language.

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 REVISION

Claims for Breach of Duties Against Corporate Representatives Not Prohibited by Corporate Dissolution: The plaintiff sued the defendant, a corporation owned by the plaintiff and his estranged siblings, seeking dissolution of the entity and damages. The plaintiff alleged breach of fiduciary duties and misappropriation of corporate funds. After the parties eventually agreed to the dissolution, the District Court dissolved the company under 35-1-938 and appointed a receiver. Subsequently, the plaintiff filed a motion seeking to amend his complaint to assert punitive damages and clarify compensatory damages and other discovery motions. The District Court dismissed the complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, reasoning that 35-1-939 authorizes dissolution of a corporation or other equitable remedies, but not both. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed, holding that after a court grants dissolution, 35-1-938 and 35-1-939 do not foreclose a claimant from pursuing claims against individual shareholders or officers or directors for breach of fiduciary duties. Kulko v. Davail, Inc., 2015 MT 340, 381 Mont. 511, 363 P.3d 430.

Fiduciary Duty — Oppressed Shareholder Claim: Brian Whitehorn took and sold grain belonging to Whitehorn Farms, Inc., beyond what had been authorized by the corporation. The other officers, directors, and shareholders of the corporation viewed Brian's actions of taking the additional bushels as theft or conversion. They held a special meeting and removed Brian as a director, officer, and employee of the corporation. The special meeting was properly noticed, and Brian received notice of the meeting but did not attend. Brian filed suit claiming he was an oppressed shareholder and that the corporation should be dissolved or that it should be forced to repurchase his shares. The corporation filed a counterclaim for conversion of corporate property. The District Court found no oppression and denied Brian's petition and granted the corporation's counterclaim. Brian appealed. The Supreme Court found that Brian was not an oppressed shareholder. The termination of Brian's employment and officer status was properly conducted at a meeting for which notice was given and was in response to Brian's wrongdoing. The court also found that the corporation was under no obligation to buy Brian's shares and the failure to purchase the shares was not oppression. Brian's situation regarding the shares was the same as that of the other shareholders. The fact that the shares are not readily marketable is typical of closely held corporations. In addition, Brian did not have any capital investment in the shares, having acquired them by inheritance. Whitehorn v. Whitehorn Farms, Inc., 2008 MT 362, 346 M 405, 195 P3d 844 (2008).

Damages Payable for Corporate Partner's Breach of Fiduciary Duty: In dissolving a corporation, the District Court found that one partner had breached a fiduciary duty to the corporation, causing damages. However, the District Court did not make a specific dollar finding for the amount of damages or award the corporation any compensation. The Supreme Court reversed and remanded for a determination of damages to be paid to the corporation by the partner who breached the fiduciary duty. Attorney fees were properly denied because the corporate agreement contained no provision for award of attorney fees to the prevailing party in a civil action. Sartori v. S&S Trucking, Inc., 2006 MT 164, 332 M 503, 139 P3d 806 (2006), following Nat'l Cas. Co. v. Am. Bankers Ins. Co. of Fla., 2001 MT 28, 304 M 163, 19 P3d 223 (2001).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Equitable Power of District Court to Order Stock Sale in Place of Dissolution: Where the plaintiff petitioned the District Court to appoint a receiver and dissolve a family ranching corporation in which she held 75 out of 1,000 outstanding shares, the District Court did not err in refusing to appoint the receiver and instead ordering the plaintiff to sell and the defendants to buy her corporate shares. Past decisions of the Montana Supreme Court show that the courts may use equitable powers in resolving disputes between shareholders, and decisions from other jurisdictions have recognized and approved the fashioning of equitable remedies less drastic than dissolution in cases where dissolution is not warranted. Because the facts show dissolution was not warranted in this case, the District Court's order was an appropriate equitable remedy. Maddox v. Norman, 206 M 1, 669 P2d 230, 40 St. Rep. 1463 (1983), distinguished in Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990).

Assertion of Error in Redesignation of Custodian as Receiver — Claim Dismissed for Lack of Jurisdiction: A shareholder did not have standing to defend any claims properly belonging to the corporation or to pursue an appeal on behalf of the corporation for claims belonging to the corporation. Thus, the shareholder's claim on appeal that the District Court erred by redesignating a custodian as a receiver pursuant to 35-1-941 was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. Johnson v. GENERAL COMMENTS

This section simply incorporates into the corporate dissolution statutes a requirement that all appropriate taxes have been paid prior to the actual dissolution of a corporation by requiring that the corporation obtain a tax clearance certificate. No change from [pre-1981] law.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 69 at end of second sentence substituted "a dissolution or withdrawal certificate issued pursuant to 15-31-552(1) verifying that the corporation has filed all applicable returns and has paid all taxes owing the state up to the date of the request for dissolution or withdrawal" for "a certificate to the effect the department of revenue is satisfied from the available evidence that all taxes imposed by Title 15 have been paid"; in third sentence at beginning substituted "the dissolution or withdrawal certificate or tax clearance certificate" for "the certificate" and at end inserted "including taxes, penalties, or interest incurred after the date of dissolution"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 15, 1999.

1985 Amendment: In first sentence near middle, after "brought by the", substituted "secretary of state" for "attorney general".

1981 Amendment: Substituted "application for a certificate of withdrawal" for "certificate of surrender".

Revocation of Agent's Authority to Receive Service of Process: A foreign corporation may revoke the authority of its statutory agent to receive service even after a cause of action has accrued against it. United Missouri River Power Co. v. Wisconsin Bridge & Iron Co., 44 M 343, 119 P 796 (1911).

Official Comments

Official Comments: The language of the RMBCA, in subsection (b)(9) [subsection (2)(i) of this section] has been revised. The RMBCA provides "owing, without more, real or personal property." This language is too ambiguous. Instead, the language of (b)(9) [subsection (2)(i) of this section] is based on Vermont Statutes, Title 11 §2101(a).

1999 Amendment: Chapter 363 inserted (4) providing that, except for goods or services prepared out of state for delivery or use in this state, a foreign corporation transacts business when it enters into a contract with the state or one of its political subdivisions and needs a certificate of authority to transact business, requiring the secretary of state to so notify the contracting parties, giving the foreign corporation 30 days from the date of the notice to obtain a certificate, and prohibiting the voiding of an existing contract prior to the expiration of the 30 days. Case Notes

Certificate of Authority Not Required to Execute Foreclosure: When defendants defaulted on a mortgage loan, the bank attempted to collect the loan through foreclosure. Defendants alleged that as a foreign corporation, the bank was required to obtain a certificate of authority before conducting business in the state. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the District Court ruling, holding that a certificate of authority was not needed to execute a foreclosure, regardless of whether the bank was a foreign corporation. Farm Credit Bank of Spokane v. Fulbright, 274 M 261, 907 P2d 956, 52 St. Rep. 1219 (1995).

Interstate Commerce:

The activities of a foreign corporation engaged in constructing a motel and a foreign corporation furnishing material for the project were not incidental to interstate commerce, and mechanics' liens (now construction liens) were unenforceable under section 15-1703, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), when failure of principal contractor and materialman to qualify to do business in Montana in violation of section 15-1701, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), made principal contract unenforceable under section 15-1703, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Greene Plumbing & Heating Co. v. Morris, 144 M 234, 395 P2d 252 (1964).

Activities of a foreign corporation in Montana that are in interstate commerce are not subject to the provisions of section 15-1701, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Minnehoma Fin. Co. v. Van Oosten, 198 F. Supp. 200 (D.C. Mont. 1961); Union Interchange, Inc. v. Parker, 138 M 348, 357 P2d 339 (1960).

Financing Mobile Homes — Business by Mail With Dealers Only — Not Doing Business: A corporation engaged in financing mobile homes was not doing business in the state of Montana since there was no evidence that it had any office, place of business, or resident agents or employees in Montana; it did not deal directly with any customers or purchasers, but solely with dealers; and this business was conducted by mail pursuant to an agreement reciting that it was made and entered into in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Minnehoma Fin. Co. v. Van Oosten, 198 F. Supp. 200 (D.C. Mont. 1961).

Real Estate Transactions as Doing Business — Factual Determination: The determination whether plaintiff was doing business in Montana within the purview of section 15-1701, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), or was carrying on the business of a real estate broker within the purview of Title 37, ch. 51, was a question of law under 25-7-102 and 26-1-201. Union Interchange, Inc. v. Parker, 138 M 348, 357 P2d 339 (1960), explained in Minnehoma Fin. Co. v. Van Oosten, 198 F. Supp. 200 (D.C. Mont. 1961).

Status of a Foreign Corporation:

The fact that corporation does not comply with the laws of Montana and has ceased to do business does not prevent it from redeeming its property sold at delinquent tax sale. Stensvad v. Ottman, 123 M 158, 208 P2d 507 (1949).

A foreign corporation has no actual existence outside the state of its creation and may do business in a sister state only by reason of comity between states; it is not a "person" within the privilege and immunity clause of the federal Constitution, and while it is considered a person or citizen within its equal protection clause, it cannot invoke that clause in another state until it has been duly admitted to do business therein. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pac. R.R. v. Harmon, 89 M 1, 295 P 762 (1931).

Section 15-1701, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), gave to foreign corporations the right to do business in this state upon their filing a copy of their charter and designating an agent and the filing of his consent to act, etc.; that right is a mere license to engage in the business in this state which its charter authorizes it to engage in and is based upon comity between the states. Helena Power Transmission Co. v. Spratt, 35 M 108, 88 P 773 (1907).

Suit in Justice's Court: In the absence of statute giving foreign corporations a domestic residence, they remain nonresidents of the state and may under Title 25, ch. 31, part 2, be sued in a Justice's Court in any township of the state. Pue v. N. Pac. Ry., 78 M 40, 252 P 313 (1926).

Isolated Transactions by Foreign Corporation With Montana Corporation for Its Use Not Doing Business: Isolated transactions, whereby a foreign corporation sells goods manufactured in another state and shipped into Montana by such corporation for use or installation, does not constitute the doing of business in this state within the meaning of sections 15-1701 and 15-1703, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), prescribing the conditions under which foreign corporations may do business in the state. State ex rel. Am. Laundry Mach. Co. v. District Court, 98 M 278, 41 P2d 26 (1934); Gen. Fire Extinguisher Co. v. NW. Auto Supply Co., 65 M 371, 211 P 308 (1922), distinguished in Greene Plumbing & Heating Co. v. Morris, 144 M 234, 395 P2d 252 (1964).

Single Contract or Purchase Not Doing Business: Making a single contract or purchase does not constitute doing business in this state within the meaning of sections 15-1701 and 15-1703, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Dover Lumber Co. v. Whitcomb, 54 M 141, 168 P 947 (1917); Uihlein v. Caplice Commercial Co., 39 M 327, 102 P 564 (1909).

Foreign Corporation's Shipping of Beer Into State and Sale to Distributor Not Doing Business: The shipping of beer into the state by a foreign corporation and selling the same to distributing agent did not constitute a carrying on of business in the state within the meaning of section 15-1701, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), prescribing requirements for the doing of business in Montana by foreign corporations. Uihlein v. Caplice Commercial Co., 39 M 327, 102 P 564 (1909).

Right to Sue — Issue Raised by Answer: Since it is unnecessary for a foreign corporation plaintiff, bringing action on a domestic contract, to allege in its complaint that it complied with the statutes of the state entitling it to do business therein, the question of its noncompliance therewith can only be raised by answer. Am. Hand-Sewed Shoe Co. v. O'Rourke, 23 M 530, 59 P 910 (1900).

Right to Sue Before Filing Charter: When bringing an action based on a domestic contract, it is not necessary for a foreign corporation plaintiff to allege that it has complied with the statutory conditions precedent to doing business in the state when the petition shows facts making the transaction prima facie interstate commerce. Zion Co-op Mercantile Ass'n v. Mayo, 22 M 100, 55 P 915 (1899). See Am. Hand-Sewed Shoe Co. v. O'Rourke, 23 M 530, 59 P 910 (1900); Leggat v. Gerrick, 35 M 91, 88 P 788 (1907); Wilson v. Yegen Bros., 38 M 504, 100 P 613 (1909).

35-1-1027. Consequences of transacting business without authority.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Note that the RMBCA allows courts to stay (instead of dismissing actions) pending the foreign corporation filing for a certificate of authority. Subsection (e) [subsection (5) of this section] clarifies that the unregistered foreign corporation may defend an action, consistent with the Montana case of Duran v. Buttrey Food, Inc., 189 Mont. 381, 616 P.2d 327 (1980).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Suit Filed by Unauthorized Foreign Corporation Tolls Statute of Limitations: A foreign corporation with an expired certificate of authority to do business in Montana filed suit for legal malpractice. The suit was dismissed due to the lapsed certificate. When the corporation refiled the lawsuit, defendants argued that the action was barred by the statute of limitations. Section 35-1-1004 (now repealed) merely suspends rather than bars further legal proceedings until a certificate is obtained. The Supreme Court held that the corporation could file a lawsuit even though its certificate was expired and the filing had tolled the statute of limitations. Watson & Associates, Inc. v. Green, MacDonald, & Kirscher, 253 M 291, 833 P2d 199, 49 St. Rep. 550 (1992).

Foreign Corporation Transacting Business Without Certificate — No Authority to Bring Suit: In an action by an out-of-state corporation against Montana parties for interference with a contract, the foreign corporation was without authority to bring suit in Montana because it was a foreign corporation transacting business in the state without a certificate of authority. The corporation received a certificate more than 10 years ago, but it was suspended in 1978. Another company incorporated by the same principals presently holds a valid certificate of authority in this state, but the record contains no evidence that the two businesses have been merged. If the second foreign corporation is the real party in interest, it should have brought suit in its own name. Under 30-13-216, a corporation acting under an assumed name has no right of access to state courts. Mktg. Specialists, Inc. v. Serv. Mktg. of Mont., Inc., 214 M 377, 693 P2d 540, 42 St. Rep. 32 (1985).

Corporation Not Authorized to Do Business in Montana — Counterclaim Allowed:

A nonresident corporate defendant that does not have a certificate of authority to do business in Montana is entitled to assert a compulsory counterclaim in an action filed against it. Doll v. Major Muffler Centers, Inc., 208 M 401, 687 P2d 48, 41 St. Rep. 429 (1984).

The plaintiff argued that the defendant corporation cannot assert its counterclaim because it is not authorized to do business in Montana. The defendant, however, is merely defending the action brought against it by the plaintiff, which it has a right to do under 35-1-1004 (now repealed). The counterclaim is just one aspect of the defense which the defendant is entitled to raise and can therefore be brought. Wortman v. Griff, 200 M 528, 651 P2d 998, 39 St. Rep. 1916 (1982).

Foreign Corporation Improperly Registered — May Defend Suit: The records of the Secretary of State showed that Buttrey Food, Inc. is an Illinois corporation. In the defense of a suit, Buttrey Food designated itself as a New York corporation. Appellant contends that because Buttrey neglected to notify the Secretary of State of the corporate change and lacked a valid certificate of authority to transact business in this state, a default judgment should have been entered against Buttrey. Section 35-1-1004 (now repealed) prohibits a foreign corporation who has not obtained a certificate of authority from maintaining a suit in this store. Buttrey however is not seeking to maintain a suit; it is merely defending an action which it is permitted to do even if improperly registered. Duran v. Buttrey Food, Inc., 189 M 381, 616 P2d 327 (1980).

Foreign Corporation No Longer Admitted: Insurance company no longer authorized to transact business in Montana was able to maintain suit in equity enjoining its conservation agent, whose duties were to service present policyholders, from using list of policyholders to solicit business for another insurance company who subsequently employed him as sales manager. Empire Life Ins. Co. of Am. v. Sorenson, 347 F. Supp. 987 (D.C. Mont. 1972).

License Tax Delinquency: Neither foreign corporation which created and assigned accounts receivable before complying with laws of state nor foreign corporation to which accounts receivable were assigned had right of enforcement until assignor paid license taxes under former statute providing that no contract of a foreign corporation was enforceable during the period of delinquency in payment of its fees and licenses, and although a subsequent compliance with statute would remove bar of nonenforceability, removal would not relate back to date of original delinquency and would not bar superior rights of others that accrued during period of delinquency. Manufacturers Acceptance Corp. v. Krsul, 151 M 28, 438 P2d 667 (1968).

Furnishing Material for Construction Project: The activities of a foreign corporation engaged in constructing a motel and a foreign corporation furnishing material for the project were not incidental to interstate commerce, and mechanics' liens (now construction liens) were unenforceable where failure of principal contractor and materialman to qualify to do business in Montana in violation of section 15-1701, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), made principal contract unenforceable. Greene Plumbing & Heating Co. v. Morris, 144 M 234, 395 P2d 252 (1964).

Enforcement of Guaranties: A corporation engaged in financing mobile homes, who was not doing business in the state of Montana, could enforce guaranties of conditional sales contracts assigned to it by a mobile home dealer in Montana. Minnehoma Fin. Co. v. Van Oosten, 198 F. Supp. 200 (D.C. Mont. 1961).

Enforcement of Contract: When foreign corporation for 5 years conducted business without qualifying, paid no corporation license tax, and filed no annual report, the foreign corporation could not enforce a contract made during those 5 years. Later compliance is not sufficient to remove the bar of the statute. Hutterian Brethren of Wolf Creek v. Haas, 116 F. Supp. 37 (D.C. Mont. 1953). See also Mktg. Specialists, Inc. v. Serv. Mktg. of Mont., Inc., 214 M 377, 693 P2d 540, 42 St. Rep. 32 (1985).

Right to Sue Before Filing Charter:

In an action which is brought to recover the value of goods sold in this state and in which the answer alleges and the reply admits that the plaintiff is a foreign corporation and at and before the time of the sale was engaged in the business of selling goods, wares, and merchandise in the state of Montana and that plaintiff had never complied with the laws of the state relating to foreign corporations, it is necessary for plaintiff to allege facts which show that the sale and delivery of the goods were of the nature of interstate commerce; and if he fails so to allege, a motion for judgment on the pleadings is properly granted. Kent & Stanley Co. v. Tuttle, 20 M 203, 50 P 559 (1897). See Zion Co-op Mercantile Ass'n v. Mayo, 22 M 100, 55 P 915 (1899).

The failure of a foreign corporation to file a copy of its charter or certificate of incorporation with the Secretary of the Territory and in the recorder's office of the county wherein it intended to transact business, under section 442, 5th Div. Comp. Stat. 1887, did not deprive it of the right to sue in the courts of the territory, since the cause of action was not based upon any act or contract of the corporation in the conduct of its business. Powder River Cattle Co. v. Comm'rs of Custer County, 9 M 145, 22 P 383 (1889).

Suit Against Foreign Corporation Before Charter Filed: Noncompliance by a foreign corporation with a statute requiring the filing by such corporation of a copy of its charter or certificate with the county recorder, and subjecting it to a penalty and rendering void all its acts and contracts during the period it neglects to do so, is of no avail to a plaintiff seeking to enjoin an act of such corporation where the complaint fails to state a cause of action. Hershfield v. Rocky Mtn. Bell Tel. Co., 12 M 102, 29 P 883 (1892).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Venue: The Montana Business Corporation Act does not grant a foreign corporation residency in a particular county of this state for venue purposes. Foley v. Gen. Motors Corp., 159 M 469, 499 P2d 774 (1972).

Citizenship of Qualifying Corporation: A U.S. District Court in Montana had jurisdiction of an action by a Montana resident against a joint venture composed of a New Jersey and an Arizona corporation, each qualified to do business in Montana under sections 15-1701 through 15-1713, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), since neither corporation became a citizen of Montana by qualifying to do business and consenting to be sued in Montana. Carson Constr. Co. v. Fuller-Webb Constr., 198 F. Supp. 464 (D.C. Mont. 1961).

Suit on Causes of Action Arising Outside Montana: A Minnesota corporation complying with section 15-1701, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), by filing certificate consenting to be sued in courts of Montana on causes of action arising in Montana did not thereby consent to be sued in Montana U.S. District Court by inhabitant of Illinois on cause of action arising in Minnesota so as to "waive" privilege in actions in which jurisdiction is based on diversity of citizenship of being sued only in district in which such corporation or plaintiff was a resident (prior to enactment of 28 U.S.C. §1391 by act June 25, 1948, Ch. 646, 62 Stat. 869). N. Butte Min. Co. v. Tripp, 128 F2d 588 (9th Cir. 1942).

Attachment Before Foreign Liquidator Has Taken Possession of Property: In action by liquidator of foreign corporation attacking attachment of corporation's property in Montana to satisfy Montana judgment which was secured after dissolution of corporation in New York, decisions of Supreme Court of Montana construing local constitution and statutes, that local creditor of corporation may protect himself by attachment of corporation's property before foreign liquidator has taken possession of property, were binding on U.S. District Court. Van Schaick v. Parsons, 11 F. Supp. 654 (D.C. Mont. 1935).

Dissolution — Liabilities Not Extinguished: Under section 15-1202, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), declaring that dissolution of a domestic corporation did not take away or impair any remedy given against it for a liability previously incurred, and section 15-1709, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), providing that foreign corporations doing business in the state were subject to all the liabilities and restrictions imposed upon domestic corporations, and Art. XV, sec. 11, 1889 Mont. Const., saying that no foreign corporation shall enjoy any greater rights or privileges in the state than those created under its laws, an action against an Iowa surety company pending in a state court did not abate upon its dissolution in Iowa and a judgment obtained after decree of dissolution was valid. Mieyr v. Fed. Sur. Co. of Davenport, Iowa, 94 M 508, 23 P2d 959 (1933), reversed on other grounds in Clark v. Williard, 292 US 112 (1934).

Jurisdiction of District Court: District Court has jurisdiction under resident stockholders' bill against nonresident directors and foreign corporation, all of whose property, except books and office furniture, is within state, to conserve through receivership corporation's business and assets from looting by nonresident directors. Shoemaker v. Merrill Mortuaries, 2 F. Supp. 672 (D.C. Mont. 1933).

Taxation — Corporations — "Franchise" — When Taxable: The franchise which was made taxable by Art. XII, sec. 1, 1889 Mont. Const., was not the bare right conferred upon corporations to do business in the state but that special privilege, not enjoyed by citizens generally, which represents something out of which the tax may be realized by forced sale, if necessary, as, for instance, the franchise of street railway, telephone and telegraph, gas, and water companies; hence the franchise of an express company, under which it enjoys no such special privilege, is not subject to taxation. Wells Fargo & Co. v. Harrington, 54 M 235, 169 P 463 (1917).

Eminent Domain: By section 15-1708, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the Legislature intended to give foreign corporations the same power to exercise eminent domain as domestic corporations enjoy. Spratt v. Helena Power Transmission Co., 37 M 60, 94 P 631 (1908).

Effect of Suspension on Statute of Limitations: A statute of limitation against a foreign corporation is not tolled by the suspension of the corporation's right to do business within the state since a person with a claim against the corporation could get service of process that would support a personal judgment under section 93-3007, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and under section 93-3011, R.C.M. 1947 (superseded by former Rule 4D, M.R.Civ.P., now superseded). Mont. Valley Land Co. v. Bestul, 126 M 426, 253 P2d 325 (1953).

2011 Amendment: Chapter 26 in (1)(c) before "address" inserted "business mailing"; and in (1)(d) and (1)(e) after "names" inserted "and business mailing addresses". Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2007 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 33 in (1) near end of introductory clause after "report" inserted "executed as provided in 35-1-217"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Chapter 240 in (1)(a) near middle substituted "jurisdiction" for "state or country"; substituted (1)(b) concerning information required by 35-7-105(1) for former text that read: "the mailing address and, if different, street address of its registered office and the name of its registered agent at that office in this state"; in (1)(c) at end inserted "wherever located"; in (1)(d) near beginning after "names" deleted "and business addresses", after "of its" deleted "directors and", and at end inserted exception clause; deleted former (1)(e) through (1)(g) that read: "(e) a brief description of the nature of its business;

(f) the total number of authorized shares, itemized by class and series, if any, within each class; and

(g) the total number of issued and outstanding shares, itemized by class and series, if any, within each class"; inserted (1)(e) concerning names of directors; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2008.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 139 deleted former (2) that read: "Each foreign corporation shall also include a statement, expressed in dollars, of the value of all the property owned by the corporation, wherever located, and the value of the property of the corporation located within Montana and a statement, expressed in dollars, of the gross amount of business transacted by the corporation for the year ending December 31 preceding the date provided in this section for the filing of the report and the gross amount of business transacted by the corporation at or from places of business in Montana. If on December 31 preceding the time provided in this section for the filing of the report the corporation had not been authorized to transact business in Montana for 1 year, the statement with respect to business transacted must be furnished for the period between the date of its authorization to transact business in Montana and December 31. If all the property of the corporation is located in Montana and all of its business is transacted at or from places of business in Montana, the information required by this subsection need not be reported"; and made minor changes in style.

ARM 44.5.302 Form of annual report.

Case Notes

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Liability of Directors: The failure of a corporation to file its annual report no longer imposes the sanction of personal liability upon the directors of the corporation for all debts and judgments of the corporation; that sanction, found at section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), was replaced by 35-1-1103 (now repealed), which imposed misdemeanor criminal sanctions against nonfiling corporations. Mont. Williams Double Diamond v. Royal Village, Inc., 186 M 359, 607 P2d 1120 (1980).

Verification:

In an action by a creditor of a corporation to recover from its directors for failure to file the annual report of its financial condition, the requirement of section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), that such report shall be verified by oath is met by verification on information and belief by one of the officers enumerated in the section, in the absence of a provision that it shall be made positively. Fisk Tire Co. v. Lanstrum, 96 M 279, 30 P2d 84 (1934).

Before the 1909 amendment, section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), did not seem to require that the annual report of a corporation be acknowledged in any event or that it be verified except when in the absence or inability of the president of the corporation to act the vice-president signs the report in his stead. Minneapolis Steel & Mach. Co. v. Thomas, 54 M 132, 168 P 40 (1917).

Effect of Amendment and Repeal of Statute Declaring Liability of Directors for Default in Making Annual Report, Without Saving Clause: In view of 1-2-203, relating to effect of amendment of statutes, and section 15-1202, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), providing that amendment or repeal of a code section relating to corporations shall not impair or take away a remedy given against a corporation or its officers for a liability previously incurred, prior decisions, holding that amendment of section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), "to read as follows" and repealing "all Acts and parts of Acts in conflict herewith" worked the extinction of the amended section "as though it had never existed" in the absence of a saving clause, were erroneous and are overruled. Cont. Supply Co. v. Abell, 95 M 148, 24 P2d 133 (1933). For decision overruled, see Cont. Oil Co. v. Mont. Concrete Co., 63 M 223, 207 P 116 (1922); First Nat'l Bank of Brockton v. Cosier, 66 M 352, 213 P 442 (1923); First Nat'l Bank of Plains v. Barto, 72 M 437, 233 P 963 (1925).

Nature of Liability:

Judgments are debts; hence in providing in section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), that corporate directors failing to make timely report of their corporation's financial condition shall be liable for the debts of and judgments against the corporation which may thereafter be incurred, the Legislature must by the use of the term "judgments" have intended judgments other than for debt, the latter being impliedly included in the word "debts". Cont. Supply Co. v. Abell, 95 M 148, 24 P2d 133 (1933).

The basis of an action to recover on the statutory liability of a director of a corporation for failure of the corporation to file the annual report of its financial condition required by section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), is an antecedent debt due to plaintiff; the liability commences with and is dependent upon such debt at the time of the first default, is direct and primary and having once attached is not affected by the renewal of a note evidencing the debt, and is not renewed by subsequent defaults. Williams v. Hilger, 77 M 399, 251 P 524 (1926).

The statutory liability of a director of a corporation for all its debts or judgments for failure to file its annual financial report is in the nature of a penalty imposed for omission to obey the mandate of the law and is not contractual in character. Butler v. Peters, 62 M 381, 205 P 247 (1922).

The right of action created in favor of a corporation's creditors to enforce the liability of a director, imposed upon him by reason of the failure of the company to file the annual report required by statute, survives his death and may be prosecuted against his estate. First Nat'l Bank of Missoula v. Cottonwood Land Co., 51 M 544, 154 P 582 (1916), explained in Anderson v. Wirkman, 67 M 176, 215 P 224 (1923). See N. Pac. Ry. v. Crowell, 245 F 668 (D.C. N.J. 1917).

The liability fixed by the statute requiring corporations to file an annual report is penal in its nature. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913); Manhattan Trust Co. v. Davis, 23 M 273, 58 P 718 (1899); Giddings v. Holter, 19 M 263, 48 P 8 (1897); St. Sav. Bank of Butte City v. Johnson, 18 M 440, 45 P 662 (1896); Wethey v. Kemper, 17 M 491, 43 P 716 (1896); Elkhorn Trading Co. v. Tacoma Min. Co., 16 M 322, 40 P 606 (1895); Gaus v. Switzer, 9 M 408, 24 P 18 (1890).

Short Existence of Corporation Not Excuse for Not Filing: The fact that a corporation was in existence but a few months prior to the expiration of the year covering which it is required by section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), to make a report on or before March 1 succeeding of its financial condition does not excuse it from making it. Cont. Supply Co. v. Abell, 95 M 148, 24 P2d 133 (1933).

Sufficiency of Complaint:
When a creditor of a corporation seeks to recover a debt reduced to judgment from its directors for failure to file the annual report mentioned in section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), a suit on the judgment is not required; in such a case the complaint must show liability on the defendants' part, not at the time the judgment was secured but at the time the debt was incurred and that it was incurred during the period of their default. Cont. Supply Co. v. Abell, 95 M 148, 24 P2d 133 (1933).

As statutes making the trustees of a corporation personally liable for company debts upon failure to file an annual report are penal in their nature and must be strictly construed, a complaint seeking to enforce such liability is insufficient if it fails to state the county in which the business of the company is conducted or that it was engaged in any business in any county. Wethey v. Kemper, 17 M 491, 43 P 716 (1896). See Whitefoot v. Nat'l Fraternity Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 18 M 164, 44 P 514 (1896); Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913).

Venue of Action: The liability of directors of a domestic corporation created by section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), under which they became answerable for its debts if they should fail to file within the proper time the annual financial statement provided for therein, whether such debts were created before or after such failure, is in the nature of a penalty and is not based upon contract, and therefore the venue of an action to recover on such liability is in the county where the cause of action or some part thereof arose. Nat'l Supply Co.-Midwest v. Abell, 87 M 555, 289 P 577 (1930).

Cooperative Associations: The provisions of section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), declaring that the directors and trustees of a corporation who fail to file with the County Clerk and Recorder of the county of its principal place of business an annual report of its condition shall jointly and severally be liable for all corporate debts or judgments then existing, or which may thereafter be incurred, until such report is made and filed, are applicable to cooperative associations organized for profit. Anderson v. Equity Cooperative Ass'n of Roy, 67 M 291, 215 P 802 (1923).

Liability for Failure to Make Annual Statement — Jury Trial: When the primary purpose of an action against a corporation was to recover on promissory notes aggregating the sum of $27,000 and to enforce liability of its directors as comakers and guarantors and for failure to file the annual statements required by statute, and the only equitable relief prayed for was the foreclosure of a mortgage given by one of the directors on two town lots as security for the notes, the answers of defendants consisting inter alia of denials and counterclaims which were put in issue by reply, the defendants were entitled to a trial by jury of the strictly legal issues presented by the pleadings, and denial of such jury trial was error. Benson-Stabeck Co. v. Farmers' Elevator Co., 66 M 395, 214 P 600 (1923), explained in Butler Bros. Dev. Co. v. Butler, 111 M 329, 108 P2d 1041 (1941).

Attachment Improper to Recover Statutory Liability: The liability of a director for the debts of his corporation imposed by section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), for failure of the corporation to file its annual report exhibiting its financial condition, etc., does not arise out of a contract, express or implied, for the direct payment of money, and a Writ of Attachment was improperly issued in an action by a creditor of a corporation against one of its directors to recover a debt owing to plaintiff by the corporation. Butler v. Peters, 62 M 381, 205 P 247 (1922).

Time for Filing: When a corporation mailed its annual report to the County Clerk on January 16, but failed to enclose the filing fee of $1 and the Clerk received the report on January 17 or 19, retained it in his office and mailed the sender a bill for the fee, and on January 23 the fee was received and the Clerk thereupon endorsed the report as filed on the latter date, it was held in an action commenced to enforce the directors' individual liability that the evidence was insufficient to show that the report was not filed in time. Minneapolis Steel & Mach. Co. v. Thomas, 54 M 132, 168 P 40 (1917).

Constitutionality: Section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), requiring annual statement of corporations, before its amendment in 1909, was not unconstitutional as casting "liabilities and burdens upon domestic corporations from which foreign corporations are exempt", the penalty for failure to file the annual report being placed upon the officers and directors and not upon the corporation. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913). See First Nat'l Bank of Missoula v. Cottonwood Land Co., 51 M 544, 154 P 582 (1916).

Denial of Proper Corporate Formation as a Defense: If an active director of a corporation that has been engaged in business, apparently in good faith, is sued and sought to be held for his failure as president and director of the corporation to file or have filed the annual report of the corporation, he cannot escape personal liability by denying the existence of the corporation on the ground that the forms of law had never been observed in perfecting its organization, whether he was properly chosen as director or not. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913). See N. Pac. Ry. v. Crowell, 245 F 668 (D.C. N.J. 1917).

Nature of Corporate Penalty:

A fine, in the sense in which the term is used in the 1889 Montana Constitution prohibiting excessive fines, is a penalty exacted by the state for some criminal offense and has no application to the penalty imposed upon the directors of a corporation for neglect to file the annual statement required by statute. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913).

While the liability imposed by a statute requiring corporations to file an annual statement is often called penal, it is not so in the sense in which that term is commonly used. It is so only in the sense that it creates a liability which was not known at the common law and therefore must be construed strictly. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913). See N. Pac. Ry. v. Crowell, 245 F 668 (D.C. N.J. 1917).

Trustees' Liability — False Report: The trustees of a corporation who filed a report, wherein they failed to specify as a debt of the company its liability on a covenant of title, were not liable for a false report if, at the time the report was filed, the breach of the covenant was not known to them. Giddings v. Holter, 19 M 263, 48 P 8 (1897).

Trustees' Liability: If a corporation fails to file its annual report as required by statute, all the trustees of the company become jointly and severally liable for all its indebtedness existing at the time such report should have been filed. Elkhorn Trading Co. v. Tacoma Min. Co., 16 M 322, 40 P 606 (1895); Gaus v. Switzer, 9 M 408, 24 P 18 (1890).

Effect of Insolvency and Corporate Abeyance as a Defense: When, in an action against the trustees of a corporation to charge them with individual liability for failure to file an annual report, it was alleged in defense that before the time for filing such report the corporation was insolvent and had entirely abandoned its business, that all its property belonged to one of its trustees, having been delivered to him in satisfaction of an indebtedness, and that for a period of 2 months no officer or trustee had exercised any corporate act or function and that there was no intention to resume the business of said corporation, the acts set forth did not dissolve the corporation and constituted no defense to the action. Gaus v. Switzer, 9 M 408, 24 P 18 (1890). See Ames & Frost v. Heslet, 19 M 188, 47 P 805 (1897); N. Pac. Ry. v. Crowell, 245 F 668 (D.C. N.J. 1917).

35-1-1106. Corporate records.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-513(1) [now repealed]. The RMBCA section, however, provides more detail as to what records must be kept and, in some cases, for how long.

Section 16.01 [this section] contains several departures from the RMBCA:

(1) Section 16.01 [this section] allows storage of records at a location other than the principal office, if those records can easily be retrieved.

(2) The RMBCA states that the corporation keep all written communications to shareholders. This requirement was judged too burdensome and has been eliminated from this proposal.

Subsection (b) does not require that financial records be kept in any particular form. As described by the ABA Official Comments:

Section 16.01(b) [subsection (2) of this section] relates to accounting records. The word "appropriate" is used to indicate that the nature of the financial records to be kept is dependent to some extent on the nature of the corporation's business; the phrase "adequate records" is used in some state statutes to convey essentially the same meaning. "Appropriate" records are generally records that permit financial statements to be prepared which fairly present the financial position and transactions of the corporation. In some very small businesses operating on a cash basis, however, "appropriate" accounting records may consist only of a check register, vouchers, and receipts.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Entries in Records as Evidence: It will be presumed that all entries made in the books of the corporation against the president and controlling stockholder were rightfully made, such books being therefore admissible against him and his personal representatives in an accounting against him arising out of the fraudulent purchase of certain shares of the corporation's stock from the executor of a deceased owner. Smith v. Moore, 199 F 689 (9th Cir. 1912).

35-1-1107. Inspection of records by shareholders.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds to MCA §35-1-513 [now repealed], but more clearly sets out what may be inspected. This section eliminates the penalty against officers or agents refusing the inspection. Section 16.04 [35-1-1109] provides new sanctions. The ABA Official Comments state:

"The penalty approach was rejected, in part, because of courts' reluctance to impose penalties on officers or agents for actions taken on behalf of their principal and, in part, because of concern for personal responsibilities for large penalties may cause officers or agents to ignore their responsibilities to their principals."

While the RMBCA suggests deletion of subsection (c)(4) [subsection (3)(d) of this section], it was included to minimize the threat of harassing requests by shareholders without an established or substantial stake in the corporation.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 42 in (2)(a) substituted "subsection (1)" for "35-1-1107(1)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

35-1-1109. Court-ordered inspection.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section provides that the court, if it finds in favor of the shareholder, may require the corporation to pay his or her costs.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 240 in (1) and (2) near middle after "principal office" inserted "is located" and after "state" substituted "in Lewis and Clark County" for "where its registered office is located". Amendment effective October 1, 2008.

35-1-1110. Financial statement for shareholders.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is not derived from the RMBCA. The RMBCA, and its comments, arguably mandate more detailed recordkeeping requirements than required under existing law. The committee does not desire to increase this burden on corporations.

35-1-1111. Other reports to shareholders.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 16.21(b) [subsection (2) of this section] is new to the RMBCA with no comparable MCA provision as heretofore a corporation was prohibited from issuing shares under the conditions set forth in this subsection. The reason for this addition is stated in the ABA Official Comments:

Section 16.21(b) [subsection (2) of this section] requires reporting to shareholders of transactions in which the corporation issues shares for promissory notes or promises for future services. These transactions may involve dilution of the interests of shareholders and it was therefore concluded that disclosure of these transactions to the shareholders was appropriate as part of the decision (reflected in chapter 6 [Title 35, ch. 1, part 6]) to broaden the permissible consideration for shares.

Fees and Charges

35-1-1206. Fees for filing, copying, and services.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is not derived from the RMBCA. Instead it is derived from MCA §§35-1-1201 and 35-1-1202 [both repealed]. The RMBCA suggests that the legislature establish filing fees by statute. Establishing fees by statute is cumbersome. Further, amending those fees as a result of increased costs would require legislative action.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 396 substituted current text concerning establishing certain fees to be set and deposited in accordance with 2-15-405 for former text that read: "(1) The secretary of state shall establish by rule fees for filing documents and issuing certificates as required by this chapter.

(2) The secretary of state shall establish by rule fees for copying documents, priority handling, transmitting or filing facsimile copies, and providing computer-generated information.

(3) The fees prescribed under this section must be reasonably related to the costs of processing the documents and preparing and providing the services. The secretary of state shall maintain records sufficient to support the fees established under this section." Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Part 13
Secretary of State

35-1-1307. Secretary of state — powers — rulemaking.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds to MCA §35-1-1301 [now repealed]. Subsection (1) [of this section] is from the RMBCA and subsection (2) [of this section] is not. Subsection (2) [of this section] clarifies the power of the secretary of state to make rules to perform, the duties required of it by this Act.

Compiler's Comments

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 368, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the secretary of state is authorized to adopt rules prescribing forms and establishing fees. The fees should be established to be commensurate with the cost of the services provided. Existing forms should be modified to the extent necessary to conform to this bill whenever possible. New forms should be as easy to use as possible."

Administrative Rules

ARM 44.5.202 Certificate of existence for foreign entities.

35-1-1308. Forms.

Official Comments

Official Comments: The Committee suggests adoption of this language which, while derived from the RMBCA, contains two deviations:

1) The section makes it clear that the forms should be promulgated by administrative rule.

2) This section allows the secretary of state to prescribe computer formats for forms, when desirable.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 75 in (1) after "computer formats" inserted "including standard forms"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

35-1-1309. Filing duty of secretary of state.

Official Comments

Official Comments: The current law does not provide for an inclusive filing duty of the secretary of state. The ABA's Official Comments state:

Under section 1.25 [this section] the secretary of state is required to file a document if it "satisfies the requirements of section 1.20 [35-1-217]." This language should be contrasted with earlier versions of the Model Act (and many state statutes) that required the secretary of state to ascertain whether the document "conformed with law" before filing it. The purpose of this change is to limit the discretion of the secretary of state to a ministerial role in reviewing the contents of documents. If the document submitted is in the form prescribed and contains the information required by section 1.20 [35-1-217] and the applicable provision of the Model Act, the secretary of state under section 1.25 [this section] must file it even though it contains additional provisions the secretary of state may feel are irrelevant or not authorized by the Model Act or by general legal principles. Consistently with this approach, section 1.25(d) [subsection (4) of this section] states that the filing duty of the secretary of state is ministerial and provides that filing a document with the secretary of state does not affect the validity or invalidity of any provision contained in the document and does not create any presumption with respect to any provision. Persons adversely affected by provisions in a document may test their validity in a proceeding appropriate for that purpose.

This section eliminates the necessity of documents such as the certificate of incorporation and other documents. The ABA Official Comments set forth the reasons:

Section 1.25(b) [subsection (2) of this section] provides that acceptance of articles of incorporation or other documents is evidenced merely by the issuance of a fee receipt or acknowledgement of receipt if no fee is required. Earlier versions of the Model Act and the statutes of many states provided that acceptance by the secretary of state is evidenced by a "certificate" (e.g., of incorporation, of merger, or of amendment). This older practice was not retained in the revised Model Act because it was felt desirable to reduce the number of pieces of paper issued by the secretary of state. Under the older practice most state offices routinely issued both fee receipts and certificates. A single document — the fee receipt or acknowledgment — should sufficiently indicate that the document has been accepted for filing, and in fact many states in recent years have dispensed with the formal certificate.

2007 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 33 in (3) near middle after "10" inserted "business"; inserted (5) allowing the secretary of state to correct errors caused by a filing officer; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Chapter 240 in (2) at beginning of second sentence deleted "Except as provided in 35-1-315 and 35-1-1034"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2008.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 71 in (2) in first sentence after "the secretary of state's" deleted "name" and at end substituted "time the document was received by the secretary of state for filing" for "time of receipt, on the original, the document copy, and the receipt for the filing fee" and near middle of second sentence after "shall deliver" substituted "a certification letter" for "a confirmation letter" and near end after "representative" substituted "as acknowledgment that the document has been filed and all applicable fees have been paid" for "along with the filing fee receipt or acknowledgment of receipt if no fee is required"; in (3) near end after "delivered" inserted "to the secretary of state"; and made minor changes in style. Chapter Case Notes

Determination of Church Corporation Property Dispute Not Considered Interference With Establishment of Religion: Plaintiff, the Council, was organized in 1991 and incorporated in 1993 as a nonprofit corporation. The Council is the ultimate authority for the hierarchical denomination of the Baha'i faith known as the Baha'is Under the Provision of the Covenant. A controversy arose in the church over who was the leader of the faith and corporate president of the Council. Defendant Chase claimed the title. The Council brought a claim against Chase for wrongful interference with the conduct of the corporation and conversion of church property. Chase moved to dismiss on grounds that a judicial resolution of the church property dispute would require inquiry into and interpretation and application of religious doctrine, which is forbidden to civil courts by the first amendment to the U.S. Constitution, and the District Court agreed and dismissed the case. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that states have a legitimate interest in the peaceful resolution of property disputes and that the civil courts are generally proper forums for those disputes, but also recognized that courts must exercise great care to avoid resolving disputes on the basis of religious doctrine and practice. The court cited Maktab Tarighe Oveyssi

Shah Maghsoudi, Inc. v. Kianfar, 179 F3d 1244 (9th Cir. 1999), holding that a court may resolve church property disputes by applying neutral secular principles of property, trust, and corporate law when the instruments upon which those principles operate are at hand and that no first amendment issue arises when a court resolves a church property dispute by relying on state statutes concerning the holding of religious property, the language in the relevant deeds, and the terms of the religious organization's corporate charter. Although no civil court may presume to ascertain the proper successor to a religious office, the first amendment does not preclude a District Court from consulting corporate bylaws, state statutes, and general corporate property law to determine the powers of the Council presidency regarding the corporate property at issue. The case was reversed and remanded with instructions to the District Court to determine the composition of the Council and the powers of the presidency in relation to the church property and then, if those issues could be resolved on purely secular grounds, to apply corporate, property, and tort law in determining the merits of the Council's claims. Second Int'l Baha'i Council v. Chase, 2005 MT 30, 326 M 41, 106 P3d 1168 (2005), followed in New Hope Lutheran Ministry v. Official Comments

Official Comments: The MCA contains no comparable section which delineates an all inclusive list of document filing requirements. Instead, those MCA sections requiring filing contain sections setting forth document filing requirements for particular filings.

Section 1.20 [this section] standardizes the filing requirements for all documents required or permitted by the RMNCA, instead of enumerating the filing requirements in different parts as the MCA does. Other sections of RMNCA impose additional requirements which also must be complied with if a certain document is to be filed, as does the MCA. Section 1.20 [this section] of the RMNCA has been modified to include provisions on fax filing similar to the existing provisions of the MCA.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 1.80 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The RMNCA limits state intrusion and restrictions upon religious corporations, yet it still provides an orderly structure in which religious corporations can be formed and operated.

The ABA Official Comments state:

While in one sense section 1.80 [this section] simply states the obvious, it is helpful to remind those dealing with religious corporations that they must consider constitutional mandates. The approach of section 1.80 [this section] also allows a case-by-case determination of difficult questions and automatically conforms the Model Acts to the opinions of the United States Supreme Court and the applicable state courts.

35-2-130. Judicial relief.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 1.60 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The ABA Official Comments describe the reasons for this section:

Section 1.60 [this section] provides an escape valve allowing nonprofit corporations to conduct meetings or obtain the consent of members, delegates or directors when it is otherwise impractical or impossible to do so. For example, a corporation may have a high quorum requirement preventing it from holding a meeting of members because the required number of members won't attend a meeting. It may have inaccurate records and be unable to identify its members or directors. The section allows directors, officers, delegates, members or the attorney general to petition the appropriate court for an order allowing the members or directors to vote or hold a meeting even if the order dispenses with requirements of the Model Act, the articles or bylaws concerning voting or holding meetings. The court in exercising its discretion should provide a procedure that is fair and equitable under all the circumstances.

35-2-131. Attorney general.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 1.70 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 1.70 [this section] allows the attorney general to intervene or commence a proceeding to protect the public interest. The attorney general has limited powers to regulate mutual benefit and religious corporations, but the powers are expanded to provide proper supervision over public benefit corporations. In a public benefit corporation members generally have no personal economic incentive to monitor corporate activities and prevent abuses. Members and contributors may have an incentive to monitor corporate activities but they may not have the practical means to do so.

Reports of fraud within charitable institutions are common place in the news. See Stienberg, "Economic Perspectives on Regulation of Charitable Solicitation, 39 Case W. Res. L. Rev. 775 (1989). Empowering the attorney general to intervene in certain affairs of nonprofit organizations to protect against abuses is not new. See 2 Blackstone's Commentaries on the Laws of England 334 (1872). Under existing statutory law, the attorney general may dissolve a corporation if it acts in an unauthorized way or may commence action to enjoin the corporation from performing unauthorized acts. MCA §35-2-110(3) [now repealed]. The power of the attorney general to intervene in the affairs of a charitable organization that fails to act in accordance with its purpose has been well established in other jurisdictions. Brown v. Concerned Citizens for Sickle Cell Anemia, Inc., 56 Ohio St. 2d 85, 382 N.E.2d 1155 (1978). See generally, 15 Am.Jur. (Charities) §144 (1976). The rationale for the traditional rule that attorney generals are allowed to intervene is the same as the rationale for applicable provisions of the RMNCA: the attorney general represents the interest of the public in insuring that a charitable organization acts in such a way as to accomplish its charitable purpose.

The preliminary position of the Montana Attorney General is that changes in the law are "sensible and appropriate." He notes that the changes "are somewhat similar to the recent authority given the Attorney General in the area of charitable trusts." Letter from Marc Racicot to Steven Bahls dated January 9, 1990.

Official Comments

Official Comments: In §2.02(a)(2) [subsection (1)(b) of this section] the incorporators must choose the category of nonprofit corporation they believe is most appropriate for the corporation's intended activities. Once having chosen a category, mutual benefit, public benefit or religious corporation, the corporations is required to abide by the rules applicable to that category. The statutes provide an incentive to choose the appropriate category and a disincentive to choose an inappropriate category. See M. Hone, Revised Model Nonprofit Corporation Act xxii-xxiii (1987).

Authority for Creation of Public Benefit Nonprofit Corporation to Operate Electric and Natural Gas Utility Business: The Montana Nonprofit Corporation Act, Title 35, ch. 2, allows the creation of a public benefit nonprofit corporation and an interlocal agreement creating a corporation as the nonprofit corporation's sole member to operate an electric and natural gas utility. The authority created by interlocal agreement between self-governing municipalities may exercise only those powers that any of the municipalities might exercise. 51 A.G. Op. 5 (2005). MCA §35-2-109 [now repealed] is broader than RMNCA §2.02 [evidently this was intended to refer to §2.04, now this section]; MCA §35-2-109 [now repealed] provides that all persons who assume to act as a corporation and without authority to do so are jointly and severally liable.

35-2-224. Class voting by members on amendments.

Official Comments: Section 10.04 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 10.04 [this section] is necessary since the RMNCA allows a nonprofit corporation to have different classes of members.

35-2-226. Restated articles of incorporation.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 229 at end of (8) substituted "a statement of whether the restated articles were approved by the board, the members, or any other person" for former (8)(a) that read: "(a) whether the restatement contains an amendment to the articles requiring approval by the members or any other person other than the board of directors and, if it does not, that the board of directors adopted the restatement"; inserted (8)(c) requiring statement as to whether approval is made by board or other person if no member approval on restatement is required; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 2, 1999.

35-2-227. Amendment pursuant to judicial reorganization.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 10.07 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. It corresponds to changes in the RMBCA. Section 10.07 [this section] updates the nonprofit corporate law to bring it in conformity with other legal developments.

35-2-229. Amendment by directors.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 10.20 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 10.20 [this section] allows directors in a nonprofit corporation without members to amend the bylaws, unless the articles of incorporation require approval by a specific person(s).

35-2-230. Amendment by directors and members.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 10.21 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 10.21 [this section] applies to nonprofit corporations with members. Since the basic rights of members are usually set forth in a nonprofit corporation's bylaws and not its articles, the RMNCA requires the same vote to amend bylaws or articles.

35-2-231. Class voting by members on amendments.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 10.22 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 10.22 [this section] is necessary since the RMNCA allows a nonprofit corporation to have different classes of members.

35-2-232. Approval by third persons.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 10.30 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 10.30 [this section] provides flexibility in control over amendments by allowing parent or affiliated corporations and others (government bodies, bishops, etc.) a veto power over amendments. The veto power must be provided for in the articles of incorporation.

35-2-233. Amendment terminating members or redeeming or canceling memberships.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 10.31 [this section] is an optional section under the RMNCA. Section 10.31 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. These procedures are in addition to the normal requirements for amending articles or bylaws and are required due to the extraordinary nature of the amendment. The rationale for this optional section is set forth by the ABA as follows:

"Some public benefit corporations may decide that the benefits of having members are outweighed by the costs, possible harassment, or lack of contribution by members. If so, section 10.31 [this section] provides a method of amending articles or bylaws to convert from a membership corporation to a corporation with a self-perpetuating board of directors . . . ."

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Absence of Provisions in Articles of Incorporation for Removal of Board of Directors — Actions by Subsequent Board Invalid: Under former 35-2-403, when there were no provisions in the articles of incorporation of a home owners' association regarding the removal from office of the board of directors, any actions taken by a new board appointed without authority were invalid and unenforceable. Trieweiler v. Spicher, 254 M 321, 838 P2d 382 (1992).

35-2-414. Requirement for and duties of board.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.01(c) [subsection (3) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 8.01(c) [subsection (3) of this section] allows considerable flexibility in structuring nonprofit corporations. The ABA Official Comments state:

Boards of nonprofit corporations are sometimes called boards of trustees, regents, overseers, or by some other name. Section 8.01 [this section] applies to the person or group under whose authority corporate powers are exercised and under whose directions the affairs of the corporation are managed, regardless of the name of the person or group.

35-2-416. General standards for directors.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section would be an addition to the MCA. The ABA Official Comments explain the purpose of the statute:

Section 8.30(a) [subsection (1) of this section] sets forth the general standards of conduct for directors of nonprofit corporations. It settles the dispute as to whether directors of nonprofit corporations should meet the general business standards or the trustee standards. See "Duties of Charitable Trust, Trustee and Charitable Corporation Directors," Real Property, Probate and Trust Journal 545 (1967); Stern v. Lucy Webb Hayes National Training School for Deaconesses and Missionaries, 381 F. Supp. 1003 (D.D.C. 1974). Also see Official Comment to Section 8.30 of the Model Business Corporation Act.

In Montana, MCA §27-1-732 provides many nonprofit corporation directors even broader protection than provided in §8.30 [this section]. Section 8.30 [this section] would control in those cases not governed by MCA §27-1-732. Those cases would primarily be:

(a) Cases involving Chapter 2, Title 35 that are not governed by MCA §27-1-732. MCA §27-1-732 does not govern corporations that are not tax exempt under IRC §501(c) or MCA §15-31-102.

(b) Cases involving claims for equitable relief.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

35-2-418. Director conflict of interest.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.31 [this section] would be an addition to the current MCA. This section, although not as detailed as the corresponding sections of the RMBCA, is consistent with the general philosophy that, within limits, duties of directors should be defined by statute. It is particularly important to do so for charitable corporations because of the strict trust concept, adopted at common law, that interested directors can never obtain a profit when dealing with the nonprofit corporation.

35-2-420. Resignation of directors.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.07 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Directors should be provided with a procedure for resignation. The ABA Official Comments state: "Under appropriate circumstances a court may find that an oral resignation combined with acts or omissions evidencing an intent to resign results in an effective resignation."

35-2-421. Removal of directors elected by members or directors.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.08 [this section] is an addition to the MCA and adds needed clarity to the law. Under §8.08 [this section] members are all authorized to remove directors elected by them without cause. The ABA Official Comments state: "If a board of directors is self-perpetuating or if it elects some of its members, the board may remove the directors it has elected without cause by a vote of two-thirds of the directors in office. . . . The articles or bylaws may require a greater vote requirement to remove directors. . . . Section 8.08 [this section] allows the articles or bylaws to authorize the board to remove any director for failing to attend a specified number of meetings. The exact number of meetings must be specified in the articles or bylaws at the time the director commences serving the term. . . ."

35-2-423. Removal of directors by judicial proceeding.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.10 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. This section authorizes members holding 10 percent or more of the voting power of any class to sue to remove a director, and sets forth the grounds for court removal of an elected, designated or appointed director.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.20 (a) & (c) [subsections (1) and (3) of this section] would be additions to the MCA. These sections clarify the law and provide a corporation with flexibility as meetings by directors may be conducted by telephone conference calls.

35-2-429. Call and notice of meetings.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.22 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 8.22 [this section] clarifies the notice requirements for different types of meetings.

35-2-436. Liability for unlawful distributions.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.33 [this section] provides the corporation with the means to recover an improper distribution. Section 8.33 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 8.33 [this section] is consistent with the RMNCA's policy to prevent the improper diversion of assets.

35-2-439. Required officers.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.40(b) [subsection (2) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The provision clarifies existing common law.

35-2-441. Standards of conduct for officers.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.42 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. This section is consistent with the committee's addition to the RMBCA. Under Section 8.42 [this section] nondirector officers with discretionary authority have the same general duty of care and loyalty as directors. This standard of conduct is particularly important in nonprofit corporations when the board of directors is composed of volunteers and the full-time paid officers have important and significant duties.

35-2-444. Officers' authority to execute documents.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.45 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The ABA comments state:

Section 8.45 [this section] is a safe harbor that does not diminish the apparent authority officers may have under common law.

Section 8.45 [this section] allows third persons to rely on the signatures of specified officers of a nonprofit corporation as indicating authority to act on behalf of the corporation unless the third persons have actual knowledge that the signing officers have no authority. This provision is particularly helpful in the nonprofit context where the authority of officers may be less than clear.

35-2-446. Definitions.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.50 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA.

The RMNCA indemnification provisions are similar to the RMBCA provisions adopted by the committee. Indemnification provisions are particularly important in the nonprofit setting as they establish essential guidelines for conflicts between protecting the directors and protecting the public interests from which nonprofit corporations evolve. The MCA's failure to provide more guidance concerning indemnification is a glaring deficiency in Montana's current nonprofit law.

35-2-514. Transfers.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.11 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The ABA Official Comments set forth the reasons for this section:

Subdivision (a) [subsection (1) of this section] provides that a membership in a mutual benefit corporation cannot be transferred unless the articles or bylaws provide for transfers. This comports with the reasonable expectations of members of most mutual benefit corporations. A corporation's articles or bylaws may provide for transfers if the members want transferable memberships. The articles or bylaws may impose limitations, conditions, and fees as a condition to transferring memberships.

Subdivision (b) [subsection (2) of this section] reinforces the concept that memberships in public benefit and religious corporations are not securities, do not represent a valuable asset, are personal to each member, and should not be sold for value. Moreover, subdivision (b) [subsection (2) of this section] prohibits a member of a public benefit or religious corporation from giving a membership to another person. This prevents members from passing membership rights to their friends or relatives without regard to their qualifications.

Subdivision (c) [subsection (3) of this section] is particularly important to members of mutual benefit corporations if their memberships represent a valuable asset. It provides that no restriction on transfer can be imposed after the fact without approval of the members and the affected member. A class vote may be required. See sections 10.04, 10.05, 10.21 and 10.22 [35-2-224, 35-2-225, 35-2-230, and 35-2-231].

35-2-517. Member's liability for dues, assessments, and fees.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.13 [this section] would be an addition to the current MCA. The purpose of §6.13 [this section] is to impose liability on members for dues, assessment fees that have been consented to.

35-2-518. Creditor's action against member.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.14 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 6.14 [this section] provides an unsatisfied creditor of a corporation with the ability to sue a member for the member's liability to the corporation arising from dues, assessments and fees to which the member has consented.

35-2-519. Resignation.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.20 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. It sets forth the fundamental right of a member to resign.

35-2-520. Termination, expulsion, and suspension.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.21 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 6.21 [this section] codifies judicially developed requirements and provides a procedural safe harbor.

The approach of requiring nonprofit organizations to provide their members with some degree of due process is consistent with the Montana Supreme Court case of Johnson v. Green Meadows [sic] Country Club, [222] Mont. [405], 721 P.2d 1287 (1986) which stated:

We agree with what the Florida Court said when faced with the same question:

. . . courts should leave to the members of a private social club or to the proper board to which the members have lawfully delegated that power, the right to determine whether the action of a member has been such that, in the opinion of such Board, it would interfere with the pleasant, friendly, congenial social relationship between members. In the absence of a clear allegation and convincing proof, if the case reaches that stage, of fraud or bad faith, the action of the members or duly delegated board shall not be reviewed by the courts.

2013 Amendment: Chapter 190 in (3)(a) at beginning inserted exception clause; inserted (3)(b) regarding notice to any authenticated electronic identification; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

Attorney General's Opinions

Authority for Creation of Public Benefit Nonprofit Corporation to Operate Electric and Natural Gas Utility Business: The Montana Nonprofit Corporation Act, Title 35, ch. 2, allows the creation of a public benefit nonprofit corporation and an interlocal agreement creating a corporation as the nonprofit corporation's sole member to operate an electric and natural gas utility. The authority created by interlocal agreement between self-governing municipalities may exercise only those powers that any of the municipalities might exercise. 51 A.G. Op. 5 (2005). See also 48 A.G. Op. 14 (2000).

35-2-522. Purchase of memberships.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is an addition to the existing law. The ABA Official Comments aptly describe the necessity for this section: "The assets of public benefit and religious corporations are held for a public charitable or religious purpose and may not be distributed to members during operations or upon dissolution. Allowing these corporations to purchase memberships would invite evasion of this rule."

35-2-524. Delegates.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.40 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 6.40 [this section] authorizes corporations to operate with delegates rather than or in addition to members or a self-perpetuating board.

According to the ABA Official Comments: "The law in regard to delegates and their rights is not as well developed as that relating to members or self-perpetuating boards. For this reason, section 6.40 [this section] does not set forth detailed provisions. Instead, §6.40 [this section] authorizes the articles or bylaws to set forth the rules regarding delegates.

35-2-526. Annual and regular meetings.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.01(d) & (e) [subsections (4) and (5) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Under these circumstances actions taken by members at the annual meeting or regular meetings must be consistent with notice requirements.

Compiler's Comments

2013 Amendment: Chapter 190 in (3) inserted last sentence allowing annual meeting held solely by remote communication; in (7) at beginning deleted "If the corporation has 50 or fewer members and", after "similar" substituted "remote communication" for "communication equipment through which all persons participating in the meeting can hear each other at the same time", and in last sentence inserted "Unless otherwise provided in the articles or bylaws"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

35-2-527. Special meeting.

Compiler's Comments

2013 Amendment: Chapter 190 in (4) inserted last sentence concerning member participation and presence. Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

35-2-528. Court-ordered meeting.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.03 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. It is similar to a provision the committee recommended for the RMBCA. Section 7.03 [this section] allows members, persons entitled to participate in meetings, and the attorney general in the case of a public benefit corporation to have a court enforce the provisions of §§7.01 and 7.02 [35-2-526 and 35-2-527] requiring annual, regular and special meetings. Section 7.03 [this section] continues the RMNCA policy of providing a legal structure for the enforcement of membership rights.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 240 in (1) near end substituted "in Lewis and Clark County" for "where its registered office is located". Amendment effective October 1, 2008.

35-2-529. Action by written consent.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.04 [this section] provides smaller corporations with a quick and effective means of approving proposed corporate actions. Action by written consent does not serve as a substitute for a properly demanded special meeting nor can it be used to circumvent the annual meeting requirement of the RMNCA §7.01.

35-2-530. Notice of meeting.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.05 [this section] continues the RMNCA policy of providing a legal structure for the enforcement of membership rights. The statute provides corporations with safe harbor provisions for providing notice. These safe harbor provisions may not be consistent with the practices of small nonprofit corporations. Therefore, §7.05(b) [subsection (2) of this section] provides that other means of giving notice may also be fair and reasonable when all the circumstances are considered. Section 7.05(b) [subsection (2) of this section] does not apply to approval of conflict of interest transactions, indemnifications, amendment of articles and bylaws, approval of mergers, sale of assets and dissolution.

35-2-532. Record date — determining members entitled to notice and vote.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.07 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. It adds certainty to the law relating to nonprofit corporations. The RMNCA separates the concept of record date for notice from record date for the right to vote. According to the ABA Official Comments: "These procedures comport with the way most nonprofit corporations operate. Corporations that operate in a different manner may adopt a bylaw or a corporate resolution setting forth a different record date."

35-2-533. Action by written ballot.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.08 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. It is necessary because many nonprofit corporations are not able to attain a quorum at meetings.

Compiler's Comments

2013 Amendment: Chapter 190 inserted (2) regarding a member's consent to written ballot or ballot by electronic communication; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

35-2-535. Members' list for meeting.

Compiler's Comments

2013 Amendment: Chapter 190 in (1) in second sentence inserted "or authenticated electronic identification". Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 240 in (4) near middle after "principal office" inserted "is located" and after "state" substituted "in Lewis and Clark County" for "where its registered office is located"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2008.

35-2-536. Voting entitlement generally.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.21(b) [subsection (2) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. According to the ABA Official Comment: "This rule comports with normal expectations when one membership is held by a family and each member of the family is listed as holding part of the membership."

35-2-537. Quorum requirements.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.22(a) [subsection (1) of this section] in substance is identical to MCA §35-2-504 [now repealed]. Section 7.22(b), (c) & (d) [subsections (2), (3), and (4) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 7.22(b) [subsection (2) of this section] allows the members or the board to decrease the quorum for any member action. Decreasing the quorum should not be detrimental to the members as member action still requires approval by a majority of the quorum. Section 7.22(c) [subsection (3) of this section] requires an amendment to increase the quorum for any member action because an increase in quorum may make it difficult for members to act.

35-2-539. Proxies.

Compiler's Comments

2013 Amendment: Chapter 190 in (5)(a) substituted "being present at any meeting and voting" for "attending any meeting and voting in person". Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

35-2-541. Other methods of electing directors.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.26 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The ABA Comments state: "There is no valid reason to limit voting for directors to cumulative or straight voting. The method of electing directors may not be on an ad hoc basis, but must be set forth in or authorized by the articles or bylaws. The board in overseeing an election must comply with the fiduciary standards set forth in §8.30 [35-2-416] regardless of the manner in which the election is conducted."

35-2-542. Corporation's acceptance of votes.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.27 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 7.27 [this section] sets forth the rules under which corporations may accept or reject the signature on a vote, consent, waiver or proxy appointment, as that of a member. Section 7.27 [this section] is designed to provide certainty and protect nonprofit corporations and their officers and agents who act in good faith.

Compiler's Comments

2013 Amendment: Chapter 190 in (1) after "member" inserted "or is the authenticated electronic identification of a member"; in (2) after "member" inserted "or is not the authenticated electronic identification of a member"; in (2)(a), (2)(b), (2)(c)(i), (2)(d)(i), and (2)(d)(ii) after "name signed" inserted "or electronic identification used"; in (2)(c)(ii) after "signing" inserted "or using the electronic identification"; and in (3) substituted "or electronic identification" for "on it". Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

35-2-543. Voting agreements.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.30 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 7.30 [this section] is consistent with current statutory and case law in other jurisdictions.

Part 6
Merger, Consolidation, and Sale of Assets

35-2-608. Approval of plan of merger.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 11.01(b)(3) and (4) [subsections (2)(c) and (2)(d) of this section] would be additions to the MCA. These provisions require disclosure of the effects of the mergers on memberships in a corporation. This disclosure provides members with a basis for making an informed decision regarding the proposed merger.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 249 near beginning of (1) substituted "one or more nonprofit" for "profit".

35-2-609. Limitations on mergers by public benefit or religious corporations.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 11.02 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. According to the ABA Official Comments: "The provisions of Section 11.02 [this section] are designed to prevent the assets of public benefit or religious corporations from being diverted from their charitable or public purposes as a result of merger."

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 240 in (1) near middle after "corporation's" substituted "principal office" for "registered office" and after "located" inserted "or, if the principal office is not located in this state, in Lewis and Clark County". Amendment effective October 1, 2008.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 214 in (1) at beginning inserted exception clause; and inserted (4) providing that a public benefit corporation or religious corporation that is considered a nonprofit health entity is subject to certain statutory provisions. Amendment effective April 8, 2005.

Applicability: Section 24, Ch. 214, L. 2005, provided: "[This act] applies prospectively to and may not be applied or interpreted to have an effect on a conversion transaction or any individual transaction or series of transactions completed before [the effective date of this act], except that a transaction or series of transactions made prior to [the effective date of this act] may be considered in any application for a conversion transaction made after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 8, 2005.

35-2-611. Articles of merger.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 11.04(1), (2), (3) [subsections (1), (2), and (3) of this section] are in substance identical to provisions contained in MCA §35-2-604 [now repealed]. Section 11.04(4) [subsection (4) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. This requirement prevents the corporation from eliminating a person's right to approve an amendment by merging with another corporation.

MCA §35-2-604 [now repealed] provides for the issuance of a certificate of merger or consolidation. Under the RMNCA this is no longer necessary as certificates are not issued under the standardized filing requirements of Section 1.20 [35-2-119].

Administrative Rules

ARM 44.5.114 Corporations — profit and nonprofit fees.

35-2-612. Effect of merger.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 11.05 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-605 [now repealed]. The RMNCA under §11.20 [this was evidently intended to refer to 11.05, now this section] provides that merger takes effect upon a proper filing instead of upon the issuance of a certificate of merger or consolidation as §35-2-605 [now repealed] provides. Section 11.05 [this section] is more concise than §35-2-605 [now repealed] concerning what property and rights the surviving corporation possesses.

35-2-613. Merger with foreign corporation.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 11.06 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-606 [now repealed]. Section 11.06 [this section] is more concise than MCA §35-2-606 [now repealed].

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 280 in (1)(a) after "state" inserted "tribe". Amendment effective April 23, 2015.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 240 in (2) near end after "corporation" substituted "may be served with" for "is considered to have irrevocably appointed the secretary of state as its agent for service of" and at end inserted "as provided in 35-7-113". Amendment effective October 1, 2008.

35-2-614. Bequests, devises, and gifts.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 11.07 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The provision provides corporations with the authority to properly handle gifts, bequests and grants that take effect or remain payable after a merger. The specific provisions of a will or other instrument will have control over the statute, but a provision requiring that a bequest or gift be used for a specific purpose is not negated by a merger. After merger the gift or bequest can only be used for the specified purposes.

35-2-616. Sale of assets in regular course of activities — mortgage of assets.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 12.01 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-607 [now repealed]. Section 12.01 [this section] requires membership approval only if it is provided for in the articles of incorporation. MCA §35-2-607 [now repealed] is ambiguous concerning membership approval; approval is required "[I]f there are members entitled to vote . . . ."

35-2-617. Sale of assets other than in regular course of activities.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 12.02 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. If the sale of substantially all of the corporations [sic] assets is not in the regular course of business the RMNCA provides greater protection against the misuse of assets. Membership approval is required if the corporation has members and before the sale a public benefit or a religious corporation must give written notice of the sale to the attorney general.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 214 in (7) at beginning inserted exception clause; inserted (7)(b) providing that a public benefit corporation or religious corporation that is considered a nonprofit health entity is subject to certain statutory provisions; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 8, 2005.

Applicability: Section 24, Ch. 214, L. 2005, provided: "[This act] applies prospectively to and may not be applied or interpreted to have an effect on a conversion transaction or any individual transaction or series of transactions completed before [the effective date of this act], except that a transaction or series of transactions made prior to [the effective date of this act] may be considered in any application for a conversion transaction made after [the effective date of this act]." Effective Date: Section 182, Ch. 411, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] is effective January 1, 1992."

35-2-722. Notices to attorney general.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.03 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The provisions of §11.02 [35-2-609] are designed to prevent the assets of public benefit or religious corporations from being diverted from their charitable or public purposes through a dissolution. The submission of a list of assets and to whom they were transferred provides a record should there be a question as to the propriety of any transfer. This provision (14.03(c) [subsection (3) of this section]) only applies to public benefit corporations.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 214 in (1) at beginning of first sentence inserted exception clause; inserted (4) providing that a public benefit corporation or religious corporation that is considered a nonprofit health entity is subject to certain statutory provisions; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 8, 2005.

Applicability: Section 24, Ch. 214, L. 2005, provided: "[This act] applies prospectively to and may not be applied or interpreted to have an effect on a conversion transaction or any individual transaction or series of transactions completed before [the effective date of this act], except that a transaction or series of transactions made prior to [the effective date of this act] may be considered in any application for a conversion transaction made after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 8, 2005.

35-2-723. Articles of dissolution.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Under the RMNCA unless the articles of dissolution specify a later effective date a corporation is dissolved upon the filing of articles of dissolution. Dissolution is effective under the MCA when the certificate of dissolution is issued. The RMNCA is designed to simplify the dissolution process.

Section 14.04(6) and (7) [subsection (1)(f) and (1)(g) of this section] would be additions to the MCA to provide needed clarity to the law.

35-2-724. Revocation of dissolution.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.05 [this section] provides that a corporation may revoke its dissolution within 120 days of its effective date. Because of this the RMNCA provides a corporation with more flexibility in revoking its dissolution than the MCA.

The procedures for revocation under §14.05 [this section] require approval of revocation in the same manner as the authorization for dissolution. This provides consistency in the RMNCA since the manner of authorization for dissolution may vary. Section 14.05 [this section] should be cross referenced to §4.01(b)(4) [35-2-305(2)(d)], concerning the reservation of the corporate name for the duration of the 120-day revocation period.

35-2-725. Effect of dissolution.

Case Notes

Homeowners' Association Considered Corporation Despite Involuntary Corporate Dissolution — Defect Cured — Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Standing Denied: At the time of trial, a plaintiff homeowners' association had been involuntarily dissolved as a corporation by the Secretary of State for failure to file its annual report. The association cured the defect and was reinstated. The defendant filed a motion to dismiss the association as a party for lack of standing. The Supreme Court held that the District Court correctly denied the motion because under 35-6-202, a reinstated corporation is considered to be a legal entity from the date of its original incorporation. Gibson v. Paramount Homes, LLC, 2011 MT 112, 360 Mont. 421, 253 P.3d 903.

Church Considered Corporation Despite Involuntary Corporate Dissolution at Time of Gift of Property: A church incorporated in 1998. The attorney who filed the incorporation subsequently moved out of state, and because annual reports were not filed, the Secretary of State involuntarily dissolved the church's corporate status in 2000. The church's corporate status was reinstated in 2004. The church was not aware that it was not a valid corporation when it received a gift of property in 2002. Various parties contributed fill to raise the level of the property, but the fill contained asphalt and garbage. The church sued defendants to recover damages incurred in removing the undesirable materials, and defendants filed a third-party complaint against the couple who donated the property. Despite the church's argument that it was a de facto corporation while it was involuntarily dissolved, the District Court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment on grounds that because the church was not a corporation at the time that the property was donated, it could not acquire ownership of the land and thus lacked standing to bring the suit. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. In light of the church's reinstated corporate status, under 35-6-202, the church should have been treated as though it were a legal corporation able to accept gifts at the time that the property was donated. Defendants' argument that this section should prohibit the church from accepting the property when it was a dissolved corporation also failed because this section governs the acts of corporations that are in liquidation, while 35-6-202 gives involuntarily dissolved corporations the option for reinstatement and treats a reinstated corporation as an existing legal entity from the date of original incorporation. Valley Victory Church v. Sandon, 2005 MT 72, 326 M 340, 109 P3d 273 (2005).

35-2-727. Unknown claims against dissolved corporations.

Official Comments

Official Comments: The provisions change the existing law as follows:

(1) Section 14.07 [35-2-726] makes it clear that claims may be brought against a corporation, even if they arise after dissolution. Existing law arguably does not provide a remedy for claims against dissolved corporations arising after dissolution. See, e.g., Blankenship v. Demmler, 89 Ill. App. 3d 569, 411 N.E.2d 1153 (1980).

(2) Claims against dissolved corporations must be made within five years under the MCA. Under the above proposal the five-year limitation period is abolished. Instead claims must be made within the normal limitation period.

(3) Subsection (b) [subsection (2) of this section] codifies the common law trust fund doctrine that provides that the property of a corporation is considered a trust fund for the payment of corporate debts. As such, members take assets upon dissolution subject to the claims of creditors. Codifying this doctrine adds certainty to the law.

(4) Subsection (c) [subsection (3) of this section] codifies the holding in North American Asbestos Corp. v. Superior Court, 180 Cal. App. 3d 902, 225 Cal. 877 (1986). The case holds that when the corporate code of a state of incorporation regarding limitation periods for claims against dissolved corporations different from the corporate code in the jurisdiction where the claim arises, the law of the jurisdiction where the claim arises applies.

35-2-728. Grounds for judicial dissolution.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.31(a)(1) [this was evidently intended to refer to §14.30(a)(1), now subsection (1)(a) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. This subsection continues the RMNCA's policy of protecting the public interest in public benefit corporations. The attorney general is empowered to proceed for judicial dissolution when a public benefit corporation is unfairly or fraudulently failing to carry out its legitimate purposes, or when assets are being diverted for the personal benefit of officers, directors or other individuals.

Section 14.31(a)(2) [this was evidently intended to refer to 14.30(a)(2), now subsection (1)(b) of this section] provides protection for religious corporations as their articles or bylaws may prevent a member or director from petitioning for dissolution. Also under this subsection corporations are protected from harassment by a single member as a proceeding must be commenced by 50 or more members or members holding 5% or more of the voting power. Currently the MCA allows a single member to commence a proceeding.

Section 14.31(b) [this was evidently intended to refer to §14.30(b), now subsection (2) of this section] provides an important clarification of the law to courts not contained in the MCA. Since dissolution is a remedy of last resort this subsection gives the court authority to consider reasonable alternatives and adopt an appropriate remedy.

35-2-820. Authority to transact business required.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 15.01(b) [subsection (2) of this section] expands the list of activities which do not constitute the transaction of business from the current MCA by adding subsections (4), (5), and (9) [subsections (2)(d), (2)(e), and (2)(i) of this section]. The new exemptions are added primarily because of U.S. Constitutional considerations. The ABA Official Comments state:

"A corporation is not 'transacting business' . . . if it is transacting business in interstate commerce . . . or soliciting or obtaining orders that must be accepted outside the state before they become contracts. . . . These limitations reflect the provisions of the United States Constitution that grant to the United States Congress exclusive power over interstate commerce, and preclude states from imposing restrictions or conditions upon this commerce. These sections should be construed in a manner consistent with judicial decisions under the United States Constitution." Official Comment to Model Business Corporation Act Section 15.01.

Section 15.01(c) [subsection (3) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 15.01(c) [subsection (3) of this section] states that the list in §15.01(b) [subsection (2) of this section] is not exhaustive, this clarifies a court's discretion in determining whether other conduct constitutes the transaction of business. The committee opted to adopt the RMNCA, but revise §15.01(b)(9) [subsection (2)(i) of this section] as the RMBCA has been revised by the committee. Section 15.01 [this section] is consistent with provisions in the RMBCA.

35-2-821. Consequences of transacting business without authority.

Case Notes

Argument Based on Different Subsection of Statute on Appeal Than Subsection Relied Upon at Trial Rejected: Unified Industries based certain arguments to the District Court on subsection (1) of this section. On appeal, it argued that the District Court's decision that it was transacting business illegally was incorrect under subsection (5) of this section. The Supreme Court held that the argument that subsection (5) validated Unified Industries' transaction of business in the state was totally distinct from the argument that it made under subsection (1) to the District Court and therefore could not be raised for the first time on appeal. Unified Indus., Inc. v. Easley, 1998 MT 145, 289 M 255, 961 P2d 100, 55 St. Rep. 574 (1998).

Party's Pleading as Admission of Transacting Business in Montana: Unified Industries sued Easley and others for an easement across their property. The defendants claimed that Unified Industries had not established a right to an easement because it was not licensed to transact business in the state during the time it claimed that its right to an easement arose. On appeal, Unified Industries argued that it was exempt from the requirement to obtain a certificate of authority. The Supreme Court held that Unified Industries' obtainment of a certificate of authority in order to bring an action against the defendant's and its statement in District Court that it had the right to sue after obtaining the certificate were implicit concessions that it was transacting business in the state and therefore it could not on appeal argue that it was exempt from state registration requirements. Unified Indus., Inc. v. Easley, 1998 MT 145, 289 M 255, 961 P2d 100, 55 St. Rep. 574 (1998).

The Code Commissioner has therefore changed the text of 35-2-826 in compliance with the coordination instruction.

35-2-831. Withdrawal of foreign corporation.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 280 in (2)(a) inserted "tribe". Amendment effective April 23, 2015.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

35-2-832. Grounds for revocation.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 15.30(b) [subsection (2) of this section] gives the attorney general power to proceed for revocation if the foreign corporation would be considered a public benefit corporation if incorporated in this state. This provision continues the RMNCA's policy of safeguarding the public interest when the activities of public benefit corporations are in question.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 280 in (1)(f) near middle after "in the state" inserted "tribe". Amendment effective April 23, 2015.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 240 in (1)(c) after "agent" deleted "or registered office"; in (1)(d) near beginning after "state" substituted "by an appropriate filing" for "under 35-2-828 or 35-2-829", after "agent" deleted "or registered office", after "changed" deleted "that its registered agent has", after "resigned" deleted "or that its registered office has been discontinued", and at end deleted "or discontinuance"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2008.

35-2-833. Procedure for and effect of revocation.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 249 in (1) and in two places in (3) substituted requirement that Secretary of State mail written notice of the determination for former requirement that the determination be served on the foreign corporation pursuant to 35-2-830.

35-2-904. Annual report for secretary of state.

Official Comments

Official Comments: The Committee deleted a requirement from the RMNCA that corporations designate in their annual report whether they are public benefit, mutual benefit or religious corporations. Such designation is accomplished only by a statement in the corporation's articles. To allow designation by a simple statement in an annual report does not provide the safeguards that an amendment to articles of incorporation does.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 26 in (1)(c) before "address" inserted "business mailing"; and in (1)(d) substituted "business mailing addresses" for "business or residence addresses". Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 240 in (1)(a) substituted "jurisdiction" for "state or country"; substituted (1)(b) concerning information required by 35-7-105(1) for former text that read: "the address of its registered office and the name of its registered agent at the office in this state"; and in (1)(c) at end inserted "wherever located". Amendment effective October 1, 2008.

Administrative Rules

ARM 44.5.302 Form of annual report.

35-2-906. Corporate records.

Official Comments

Official Comments: The ABA Official Comments state: "The underlying rationale of §16.01(a) [subsection (1) of this section] is that there should be a permanent record of actions taken by the members, the board and committees of the board acting in place of the board. The section does not require that the minutes or record of an action include a discussion of or reasons for an action.

Section 16.01(b) [subsection (2) of this section] requires a corporation to maintain appropriate accounting records. The required records are the current accounting records. The statute does not require that the records be kept permanently nor does it address how long accounting records should be kept. The ABA Official Comments state: "The question of what accounting records are 'appropriate' depends on the nature, size and other characteristics of the corporation. Numerous nonprofit corporations have a relatively small amount of money and operate with volunteer staffs. In such cases, 'appropriate accounting records' may be composed of checkbooks, canceled checks and receipts. In the case of entities with significant funds, more detailed accounting records are appropriate."

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 10 in (5)(e) substituted reference to members for reference to shareholders.

35-2-907. Inspection of records by members.

Official Comments

Official Comments: The provisions of §16.02 [this section] provide a member with automatic access to certain records after the member gives the corporation five days notice. A demand to copy and inspect records must be made in good faith and for a proper purpose if the access is not automatic under the statute.

The articles or bylaws of a religious corporation may limit or abolish the rights of a member to inspect and copy any corporate record.

35-2-909. Court-ordered inspection.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 16.04 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 16.04 [this section] allows a successful member to be awarded reasonable counsel fees.

County" for "the county where its registered office is located"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2008.

35-2-910. Limitations on use of membership list.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 16.05 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. A membership list may not be obtained or used for any purpose unrelated to a member's interest as member without the board's consent.

35-2-1108. Forms.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 1.21 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-1102 and §35-2-1104 [both repealed]. This language, while derived from the RMNCA, contains two deviations:

(a) The section makes it clear that the forms should be promulgated by administrative rule.

(b) This section allows the secretary of state to prescribe computer formats for forms, when desirable.

35-2-1109. Filing duty of secretary of state.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 1.25 [this section] provides the filing duty of the secretary of state, instead of enumerating the duty in different parts as the MCA does.

Section 1.25(b) [subsection (2) of this section] eliminates the necessity of the issuance of documents such as a certificate of incorporation. The ABA Official Comments state:

Section 1.25(b) [subsection (2) of this section] provides that acceptance of articles of incorporation or other documents is evidenced merely by the issuance of a fee receipt or acknowledgment of receipt if no fee is required. Earlier versions of the Model Act and the statutes of many states provided that acceptance by the secretary of state is evidenced by a 'certificate' (e.g., of incorporation, of merger, or of amendment). This older practice was not retained in the revised Model Act because it was felt desirable to reduce the number of pieces of paper issued by the secretary of state. Under the older practice most state offices routinely issued both fee receipts and certificates. A single document — the fee receipt or acknowledgment — should sufficiently indicate that the document has been accepted for filing, and in fact many states in recent years have dispensed with the formal certificate.

Section 1.25(d) [subsection (4) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The ABA Official Comments state:

Under section 1.25 [this section] the secretary of state is required to file a document if it 'satisfies the requirements of section 1.20 [35-2-119].' This language should be contrasted with earlier versions of the Model Act (and many state statutes) that required the secretary of state to ascertain whether the document 'conformed with law' before filing it. The purpose of this change is to limit the discretion of the secretary of state to a ministerial role in reviewing the contents of documents. If the document submitted is in the form prescribed and contains the information required by section 1.20 [35-2-119] and the applicable provision of the Model Act, the secretary of state under section 1.25 [this section] must file it even though it contains additional provisions the secretary of state may feel are irrelevant or not authorized by the Model Act or by general legal principles. Consistently with this approach, section 1.25(d) [subsection (4) of this section] states that the filing duty of the secretary of state is ministerial and provides that filing a document with the secretary of state does not affect the validity or invalidity of any provision contained in the document and does not create any presumption with respect to any provision. Persons adversely affected by provisions in a document may test their validity in a proceeding appropriate for that purpose.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 33 in (3) near middle after "10" inserted "business"; inserted (5) allowing the secretary of state to correct errors caused by a filing officer; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Chapter 240 in (2) in second sentence near beginning in exception clause deleted reference to 35-2-314; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2008.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 71 in (2) in first sentence near middle after "secretary of state's" deleted "name" and at end substituted "the secretary of state received the document" for "of receipt, on the original, the copy of the document, and the receipt for the filing fee" and in second sentence near middle substituted "a certification letter" for "the document copy" and at end after "representative" substituted "as acknowledgment that the document has been filed and the fee has been paid" for "together with the filing fee receipt or acknowledgment of receipt if no fee is required"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

35-2-1112. Certificate of existence.

Official Comments

Official Comment: Section 1.28 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The current MCA does not contain a statutory provision defining a certificate of existence. A certificate of existence is essentially a certificate of good standing.

35-2-1301. Standing.

Official Comments

Official Comments to §§35-2-1301 Through 35-2-1307: There has long been confusion as to whether members of a nonprofit corporation may sue derivately [sic] to enforce the rights of the corporation. See H. OLECK, NONPROFIT CORPORATIONS, ORGANIZATIONS, AND ASSOCIATIONS (4th ed. 1980). One court, for example, has gone so far as to find that the mere fact that one contributes to a nonprofit corporation gives the person the right to initiate a derivative action. Atwell v. Bide-a-Wee Home Association, 59 Misc. 2d, 321, 299 N.Y.S.2d 40 (Sup. Ct. 1969).

The drafters of the RMNCA suggests that this dispute be clarified with legislation. While the committee agrees, the committee did not opt for the RMNCA suggestions. The RMNCA suggestions seem to leave open difficult questions as to when prior demand must be made on the board of directors by the complainant and when an independent board could dismiss the action. In order to more adequately balance the rights of corporations to be free of harassing litigation, with the needs of members to require the corporation to act to achieve the charitable purpose, the committee's suggestions track ABA's suggestion for "for profit" corporations. The ABA's Comments concerning derivative suits can be found at 45 BUS. LAW. 1241 (May 1990).

Finally, as noted by the ABA, federal or state constitutional provisions may prohibit courts from considering derivative suits brought on behalf of religious corporations.

Chapter Case Notes

Determination of Nature of Association for Federal Income Tax Purposes: Although under state law at the time of the decision, a corporation could not be organized to practice medicine, yet an association that had the criteria of a corporation could be considered a corporation for federal tax purposes. The determination of the nature of associations for federal tax purposes is not by the state criteria but rather by the special criteria sanctioned by the tax law, the regulations, and the courts. U.S. v. Kintner, 216 F2d 418 (9th Cir. 1954).

Corporation Not Authorized to Practice Law: Nothing contained in section 15-104, R.C.M 1947 (now repealed), authorized a corporation to practice law. State ex rel. Freebourn v. Merchants' Credit Serv., Inc., 104 M 76, 66 P2d 337 (1937), overruled on another point in Rae v. Cameron, 112 M 159, 114 P2d 1060 (1943).

General

35-4-108. Short title.

Official Comments

This model professional corporation act is designed as a supplement to the Model Business Corporation Act. Section 27 [35-4-111] provides that the state's business corporation act shall apply to professional corporations except to the extent its provisions are inconsistent with the supplemental act. Accordingly, the supplement must be read in conjunction with the Model Business Corporation Act which it closely parallels in structure and semantics. With appropriate modifications, however, this model act may readily be adapted for use as a supplement to other business corporation acts.

35-4-109. Definitions.

Official Comments

Paragraph (1) [(5) in Montana]. The definition of "professional service" limits and describes the purposes for which corporations may be organized under Section 3 [35-4-205].

As a general proposition, corporations may not be formed under business corporation acts for the purpose of practicing a profession. In the absence of any statutory definition of the word "profession," the courts have held that, although a licensing requirement is characteristic of the professions, all licensed services are not necessarily professional services which may not be rendered by corporations. Accordingly, the determination as to whether particular licensed services may be rendered by corporations has been made on a case by case basis based upon construction of the state business corporation law or the applicable licensing law.

Some of the existing state statutes under which professional persons are permitted to incorporate cover all licensed services. Statutes of this type are not restricted to persons who are prohibited from incorporating under the business corporation law. Other existing state statutes limit those who may incorporate to specific professions described in a single statute or in a series of similar statutes each applicable to one profession. The definition of "professional service" in paragraph (1) [(5) in Montana] has the effect of restricting the use of the act to the practice of the professions. Rather than listing designated professions, however, the model act follows the precedent set by many existing state statutes of defining professional services as those licensed services which may not be rendered by a corporation organized under the business corporation law.

Paragraph (2) [(3) in Montana]. See Section 26 [35-4-208] with respect to jurisdiction of the licensing authority over professional corporations.

Paragraphs (5) [(6) in Montana] and (6) [not adopted in Montana]. See comment following Section 9 [35-4-301].

35-4-110. Application to existing corporations.

Official Comments

While most states have adopted a single general professional corporation law applicable to all covered professions, several states have adopted a series of professional corporation laws applicable to individual professions. Section 28 [35-4-110] of the model act sets forth procedures with respect to existing corporations which include mandatory provisions applicable to corporations incorporated under a repealed act and also provisions for voluntary compliance with this act by corporations organized under acts which may not be repealed.

Part 2
Organization and Regulation

35-4-205. Purposes of corporation.

Official Comments

Apparently most state legislatures have felt that it was necessary to limit the purposes of a professional corporation to the practice of a single profession, and subsection (a) [combined with (b) in Montana] follows the large majority of existing state statutes in this respect. However, the ethical proscriptions of the various professions are not uniform in restricting the activities of a professional group to a single professional field. Some professional groups such as engineers and architects are permitted to carry on joint practice, and in other fields, such as the field of medicine and allied health professions, the extent to which professional practices may be combined is an evolving subject. Accordingly, subsection (b) [combined with (a) in Montana] shifts the responsibility for determining the extent to which two or more professions may combine and the extent to which a professional corporation may engage in business activities to the licensing statutes and regulations governing each profession where variations in public policy and ethical requirements of the various professions may be properly treated.

Compiler's Comments

35-4-206. Corporate name.

Official Comments

Existing state statutes vary in the selection of terms required in the corporate name as corporate designators. To encourage uniformity and avoid confusion the model act approves and requires only the term "professional corporation" or its abbreviation. The Model Business Corporation Act corporate name provision is further modified in paragraph (3)(i) [(3)(a)] to permit similarity of names if the similarity results from the use of personal names of persons associated with the organization. Paragraph (4) authorizes the licensing authority to impose by rule additional requirements appropriate to a particular profession.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 166 in (1) at beginning deleted "except as provided in subsection (1)(b)"; in (3) at beginning substituted "must be distinguishable on the record from" for "may not be the same as or deceptively similar to"; in (3)(b)(i) substituted "a name that is not distinguishable on the record" for "the same or a deceptively similar name and one or more words are added to make the name distinguishable"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 1, 2015.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 27 inserted (1)(a)(ii) disallowing the use of words in a corporate name other than professional corporation to indicate type of business; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1993 Amendments: Chapter 120 in (3) inserted reference to limited liability company name.

35-4-207. Directors and officers.

Official Comments

Section 14 [35-4-207] requires that no less than one-half the directors and the officers other than the secretary and treasurer of a professional corporation be licensed professionals. The professional corporation statute[s] of many states require that all directors be licensed while others require less than all. Most existing statutes also prohibit unlicensed persons from serving as officers with variations as to whether all or only certain designated offices are subject to the requirement.

35-4-208. Filing of articles with licensing authority.

Official Comments

Section 26 [35-4-208] requires that a professional corporation register with the appropriate licensing authority by filing a copy of its articles of incorporation with the licensing authority and authorizes the licensing authority to promulgate rules pursuant to the act. Similar provisions appear in a number of existing statutes, and the further statement reaffirming the authority of the licensing authority with respect to licensed professionals is common to many statutes.

Part 3
Shares and Shareholders

35-4-301. Issuance and transfer of shares.

Official Comments

The model act departs from existing state statutes in permitting shares of a professional corporation to be issued to persons licensed outside the state of incorporation and to partnerships and other professional corporations authorized to render a professional service permitted by the articles of incorporation of the corporation.

Pennsylvania also permits a professional corporation to issue shares to persons licensed in another state, but existing statutes generally restrict shareholders to natural persons. If shareholders are not liable for debts of the corporation, however, there is no policy reason to prohibit the issuance of shares to another corporation which is subject to the same professional corporation requirements, and under Section 9 [35-4-301] of the model act professional corporations may be given the same flexibility in planning the corporate structure as business corporations. If shareholders are personally liable for the performance of professional services rendered on behalf of the corporation, however, as they may be under either alternate 2 or 3 of Section 11(d) [35-4-404(3) (Montana has alternate 1)], then the holding company device may be used to avoid personal liability, and accordingly, paragraph (3) of subsection (a) [35-4-301(1)(c)] should be deleted if alternate 2 or 3 of Section 11(d) [35-4-404(3) (Montana has alternate 1)] is adopted.

Section 9 [35-4-301] of the model act is applicable to all classes of shares issued by a professional corporation. No qualifications are imposed by the model act (or by existing state statutes) on holders of debt securities. It is unlikely that convertible debt will be issued by a professional corporation, since the corporation will not have the power to issue its shares upon conversion if the holder is not a qualified person at the time the shares are to be issued.

35-4-302. Corporation's right to acquire its own shares.

Official Comments

Nearly all professional corporation statutes require that shareholders be licensed professional persons, and to implement this requirement most statutes require that the corporation repurchase shares which have become the property of unlicensed persons through operation of law. The usual business corporation law restriction against impairment of capital by purchase of the corporation's own shares may conflict with this statutory requirement for the purchase of shares of a professional corporation. Section 7 [35-4-302] of the model act resolves the conflict by removing the Model Business Corporation Act limitation on purchase of shares to the extent of available earned surplus or capital surplus while retaining the insolvency test of Section 6 [35-4-403] of the Model Business Corporation Act. Section 10(a) [35-4-311(1)] of the professional corporation supplement requires the corporation to repurchase shares "to the extent of funds which may be legally made available for such purchase." Thus the requirement of Section 10 [35-4-311] that the professional corporation repurchase the shares of a disqualified person will be subject to the insolvency restriction against repurchase but will not be subject to the capital and surplus restriction.

Compiler's Comments

Source: Section 35-4-302 is based on Section 7 of the Professional Corporation Supplement to the Model Business Corporation Act.

35-4-303. Proxies and voting trusts.

Official Comments

Section 13 [35-4-303] of the model act requires that the holder of a proxy and the parties to a voting trust agreement be qualified to own shares in the corporation. If shareholders may be personally liable for the performance of professional services rendered on behalf of the corporation, voting trusts should be prohibited to prevent their use to avoid personal liability. See comment following Section 9 [35-4-301]. With regard to other types of agreements regarding voting of shares, Section 34 [35-1-402 (now repealed)] of the Model Business Corporation Act providing that agreements among shareholders regarding voting shall be valid and enforceable is unchanged by the professional corporation supplement.

Pursuant to Section 33 [35-1-401 (now repealed)] of the Model Business Corporation Act the shares of a professional corporation held by an administrator, executor, guardian or conservator may be voted without a transfer of such shares, and shares held by a receiver may be voted by the receiver without transfer if such authority is contained in the order of a court by which the receiver was appointed. Upon the death or insolvency of a major shareholder, it may be necessary to dissolve the corporation or amend its articles by changing its purposes to those of a business corporation. The interest of the shareholder's estate will be protected by permitting the holder of his shares to vote on such proposals. In view of the requirement of Section 14 [35-4-207] that one-half the directors and the principal officers of a corporation be qualified shareholders, there is no significant risk that an unqualified person may exercise control over the professional practice of the corporation during the period that shares of the corporation may be owned by the estate or receiver of a shareholder under Section 10 [35-4-311]. Accordingly, the model act does not modify the provisions of the Model Business Corporation Act regarding voting by administrators and receivers.

35-4-311. Death or disqualification of a shareholder.

Official Comments

Existing state statutes generally require that the shares of a deceased or disqualified shareholder be transferred to a qualified shareholder or purchased by the corporation within a specified period of time following the shareholder's death or disqualification. The model act requires payment of fair value for such shares if the corporation does not establish an alternative method, and the procedure for determining fair value set forth in subsections (b) through (f) [(2) through (6)] parallels the procedure set forth in Section 81 [35-1-907 (now repealed)] of the Model Business Corporation Act with respect to the determination of rights of dissenting shareholders. Shares of a deceased or disqualified shareholder that have not been transferred or purchased within the time limits specified in subsection (g) [(7)] are cancelled, and the shareholder's interest becomes a creditor's claim under this section.

One of the troublesome aspects of the requirement that a shareholder of a professional corporation be licensed to practice the profession is the disposition of the corporation entity of a deceased sole practitioner. Under Section 33 [35-1-401 (now repealed)] of the Model Business Corporation Act the executor of the estate of a sole practitioner may vote the decedent's shares in his professional corporation. See comment following Section 13 [35-4-303]. Accordingly, if the shares of a deceased shareholder are not transferred, the executor may vote the shares to dissolve the corporation or to amend the articles of incorporation to change its purposes to those of a business corporation. If the executor elects to dissolve, a licensed member of the profession must act as director and president during the winding up of the corporation's affairs. If the executor elects to amend the articles, he may do so himself by signing and filing articles of amendment pursuant to Section 15 [35-4-312].

See comment following Section 7 [35-4-302] concerning the effect of statutory restrictions against purchases by a corporation of its own shares resulting in impairment of capital or insolvency. To further reduce the possibility of conflict between the insolvency restriction of Section 7 [35-4-302] and the requirement for purchase of shares under Section 10 [35-4-311] in the event of a judicial determination of fair value, the court is expressly authorized in subsection (d) [(4)] to order that the judgment be paid in installments.

Official Comments

Section 15 [35-4-312] enables the professional corporation of the sole practitioner to continue in existence following the death of its shareholder and simplifies the procedure for amendment of articles set forth in the Model Business Corporation Act. Without some modification of the Model Business Corporation Act procedure, the executor of the deceased shareholder's estate would be required to find another member of the profession to serve as director and president for the purpose of adopting and filing articles of amendment.

Operation

35-4-401. General powers.

Official Comments

Under existing statutes professional corporations generally have all the powers of business corporations. The model act restricts only the power to participate in partnerships and similar enterprises engaged in activities not permitted to the professional corporation. Investment in limited partnerships as a limited partner would not be prohibited by the model act.

35-4-402. Prohibited activities.

Official Comments

Although not normally found in a business corporation law, an express statutory prohibition against ultra vires acts is fairly common in the existing state professional corporation laws. This prohibition provides a basis on which the licensing authority may initiate enforcement action pursuant to Section 18 [35-4-503] to prevent a professional corporation from engaging in prohibited activities.

35-4-403. Rendering services.

Official Comments

A statement similar to the first clause of Section 6 [35-4-403] to make it clear that unlicensed employees of professional corporations are not authorized to render professional services is included in the statutes of all states. The second clause which is also common in existing statutes is intended to insure that the use of para-professionals and other assistants customarily employed by professionals will not be inhibited by the first clause and also to recognize that a licensed employee of a professional corporation may render services in his individual capacity rather than as an employee of the corporation depending upon the circumstances of his employment. For example, an employee of a professional corporation may render professional services in his individual capacity in states in which the professional corporation may not be admitted as a foreign corporation.

35-4-404. Responsibility for services.

Official Comments

Although all existing state statutes include some provision concerning professional liability or professional responsibility, most statutes are silent as to the vicarious liability of shareholders leaving this question to be determined by the business corporation law. Several statutes clearly provide that shareholder liability is limited as in a business corporation. A few expressly state that shareholders shall be jointly and severally liable for debts of the corporation. And a few, either by statute or rule of practice, condition limited liability for some professions on maintenance of professional liability insurance. A majority of the statutes contain simply a provision to the effect that the statute does not modify any law applicable to the relationship between a person furnishing professional services and a person receiving such services including liability arising out of such professional services. Although one commentator has suggested that this statutory provision preserves the mutual agency and unlimited liability of partnerships, Federal district courts in Ohio and Florida have held, in the context of cases involving the status of a professional corporation for Federal income tax purposes, that shareholders have limited liability under statutes of this type. Accordingly, it seems that shareholders of professional corporations have limited liability under existing statutes in most states.

Section 11 [35-4-404] of the model act states affirmatively the rules for liability of the professional corporation, its employees, and its shareholders resulting from negligence in the performance of professional services. Consistent with the common law doctrine of respondeat superior, subsection (b) [(1)] limits liability of a professional employee to his personal negligence, and subsection (c) [(2)] imposes liability on the corporation for conduct of professional employees within the scope of their employment or of their apparent authority.

Three alternative provisions as to liability of shareholders are proposed in subsection (d) [(3)]: limited liability as in a business corporation, vicarious personal liability as in a partnership, and personal liability limited in amount conditioned upon financial responsibility in the form of insurance or a surety bond. Alternate 3 [Montana has alternate 1] would permit the licensing authority for each profession to establish the minimum amount of security required as a condition for limiting liability of shareholders and to impose requirements as to the coverage provided by the policy or bond representing the security. The minimum amount of security designated in alternate 3 [Montana has alternate 1] would apply to any profession only if no minimum has been fixed by the licensing authority for the profession, but no attempt is made in the model act to specify minimum coverage requirements. Each alternate recognizes by the introductory phrase, "Except as otherwise provided by statute," that more specific rules as to shareholder liability may be enacted with respect to a particular profession or professions, but the formulation of statutory requirements as to either the minimum amount of security or coverage for particular professions is beyond the scope of this model act.

Limited liability of shareholders has historically been considered by the courts and by the Internal Revenue Service as one of several characteristics that distinguish the corporation from the partnership. It should be noted, therefore, that the choice of alternates in subsection (d) [(3)] may affect the tax status of professional corporations formed pursuant to the act.

Official Comments

Many existing state statutes contain provisions similar to Section 12 [35-4-405] which makes it clear that any relationship of confidence that exists between a professional person and his client or patient is preserved and extends to the professional corporation and also that any privilege applicable to communications with a professional person is preserved and extends to the professional corporation.

35-4-411. Admission of foreign professional corporations — application — revocation.

Official Comments

Many small as well as large professional practices are conducted in more than one state by individuals licensed to practice in more than one state or by partnerships whose members are licensed to practice in various states. A serious defect in many existing state statutes is the absence of any provision concerning foreign professional corporations, although several statutes do specifically provide for admission of foreign professional corporations.

Under the foreign corporation provisions of state business corporation laws, foreign corporations are generally admitted with few if any restrictions other than restrictions as to the use of corporate names. In order to prevent a professional corporation from avoiding the professional corporation laws of the state in which it carries on its practice by incorporating in a state with more lenient professional corporation requirements, Section 19 [35-4-411] requires that foreign corporations comply with the domestic state law requirements concerning corporate purposes and qualification of shareholders, directors and officers. Under Section 6 [35-4-403] a foreign corporation may render professional services only through persons permitted to render such services in the state. Section 11 [35-4-404] concerning responsibility for professional services and security for professional responsibility is applicable to foreign corporations as well as domestic corporations; and foreign corporations are subject to regulation by the licensing authority to the same extent as domestic corporations under Section 26 [35-4-208].

Section 19(b) [35-4-411(2)] requires that a professional corporation obtain a certificate of authority only if the corporation maintains an office in the state. This provision would permit foreign professional corporations greater freedom in rendering professional services in the state without complying with foreign corporation law requirements than is permitted in the case of business corporations.

Official Comments

Section 16 [35-4-501] permits mergers and consolidations among professional corporations and business corporations to the extent that professional and business purposes may be combined under Section 3 [35-4-205]. Many existing professional corporation statutes limit mergers and consolidations to domestic professional corporations incorporated for the purpose of rendering the same professional service. Such a limitation would be inconsistent with Section 3 [35-4-205] of this Act permitting a broader statement of purposes and Section 19 [35-4-411] providing for admission of foreign professional corporations.

CHAPTER 5
BUSINESS TRUSTS

Part 1
General

35-5-101. Definition of business trust.

Case Notes

Characteristics of Illegitimate Business Trust: A business trust that provides for certificates to be issued to beneficiaries does not constitute a legitimate trust under Montana law. Although a business trust may not have directors or officers like a corporation, the trustees may function in nearly the same manner as a corporation for business purposes. Earmarks of a business trust that are not usually found in an ordinary trust include: (1) centralized management; (2) continuity of life more typical of a business entity; (3) transferability of interests; and (4) limited personal liability. In a business trust, the relationship of the grantor to the property transferred does not differ in any material way before and after the creation of the trust. Although a taxpayer has a legal right to minimize or avoid taxes by any legal means, when the form of a transaction has not altered any cognizable economic relationships, that form will be disregarded and the tax law applied according to the substance of the transaction. In this case, plaintiffs' establishment of a business trust in an effort to avoid paying taxes by transferring personal property to the trust and issuance of units or certificates of beneficial interest, resulting in little material change in economic ownership or reality before and after creation of the trust, were properly disregarded for tax purposes, and plaintiffs were correctly held individually responsible for trust income and expenses. Case Notes

In-Kind Distribution of Company Assets to Estate Not Error: Following a noncite opinion, Estate of James v. Hunt, 312 M 525N, 55 P3d 419N (2002), the personal representative petitioned for an in-kind distribution of the estate's real property held by trustees of a mining company. Prior to a hearing on the petition, the company board of directors purported to liquidate the estate's property interests by sale to one of its members and then moved to dismiss the petition for in-kind distribution as moot. The District Court voided the liquidation sale on equitable grounds and ordered the board of directors to immediately distribute the estate's fractional share of the now-defunct corporation's assets to the estate in kind. The board of directors appealed on grounds that the District Court erred in ordering the in-kind distribution. The Supreme Court disagreed. Under 35-1-935, in-kind distribution of some corporate assets after dissolution is allowed. Rights to the property that James deeded to the company devolved upon the estate when the sale offer was made, so the board of directors had no authority to sell it. Although the distribution was informal, all company shareholders received a distribution in kind, so the District Court did not err in voiding the sale and ordering the board of directors to deed real property to the state. However, the Supreme Court remanded the case for a determination of James's testamentary intent. In re Estate of James, 2004 MT 314, 324 M 24, 102 P3d 12 (2004).

Stockholders Not Entitled to Sue Upon Corporation's Cause of Action: The Supreme Court ruled that the award of general and special damages to the plaintiffs in their individual capacity was reversible error because there was no evidence that the corporation under which they had done business was dissolved. The court held that shareholders of a corporation were not entitled to individually sue when the cause of action in reality was an asset of the corporation. First Sec. Bank of Glendive v. 35-6-202. Relation back of corporate rights restored.

Case Notes

Homeowners' Association Considered Corporation Despite Involuntary Corporate Dissolution — Defect Cured — Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Standing Denied: At the time of trial, a plaintiff homeowners' association had been involuntarily dissolved as a corporation by the Secretary of State for failure to file its annual report. The association cured the defect and was reinstated.

The defendant filed a motion to dismiss the association as a party for lack of standing. The Supreme Court held that the District Court correctly denied the motion because under 35-6-202, a reinstated corporation is considered to be a legal entity from the date of its original incorporation. Gibson v. Paramount Homes, LLC, 2011 MT 112, 360 Mont. 421, 253 P.3d 903.

Church Considered Corporation Despite Involuntary Corporate Dissolution at Time of Gift of Property: A church incorporated in 1998. The attorney who filed the incorporation subsequently moved out of state, and because annual reports were not filed, the Secretary of State involuntarily dissolved the church's corporate status in 2000. The church's corporate status was reinstated in 2004. The church was not aware that it was not a valid corporation when it received a gift of property in 2002. Various parties contributed fill to raise the level of the property, but the fill contained asphalt and garbage. The church sued defendants to recover damages incurred in removing the undesirable materials, and defendants filed a third-party complaint against the couple who donated the property. Despite the church's argument that it was a de facto corporation while it was involuntarily dissolved, the District Court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment on grounds that because the church was not a corporation at the time that the property was donated, it could not acquire ownership of the land and thus lacked standing to bring the suit. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. In light of the church's reinstated corporate status, under this section, the church should have been treated as though it were a legal corporation able to accept gifts at the time that the property was donated. Defendants' argument that 35-2-725 should prohibit the church from accepting the property when it was a dissolved corporation also failed because that section governs the acts of corporations that are in liquidation, while this section gives involuntarily dissolved corporations the option for reinstatement and treats a reinstated corporation as an existing legal entity from the date of original incorporation. Valley Victory Church v. Sandon, 2005 MT 72, 326 M 340, 109 P3d 273 (2005).

MODEL REGISTERED AGENTS ACT

Chapter Compiler's Comments

Effective Date: Section 70, Ch. 240, L. 2007, provided that this chapter is effective October 1, 2008.

Part 1
Registered Agents

Part Commission Comment

PREFATORY NOTE

The Model Registered Agents Act (the "Act") [part] is one of several projects undertaken by the Conference and the American Bar Association ("ABA") to integrate state entity laws into a more coherent and rational scheme. Other projects include the development of the Model Entity Transactions Act jointly by the Conference and the ABA and the addition of Chapter 9 to the Model Business Corporation Act by the Committee on Corporate Laws of the ABA Section on Business Law.

The Act [part] grew out of discussions within the International Association of Commercial Administrators ("IACA"), which is the association of state corporation bureaus and similar filing offices in the United States and Canada. IACA was approached by representatives of corporation service companies who were seeking to solve problems they have encountered in their provision of registered agent services. IACA had also been considering on its own how filing requirements in state corporation bureaus could be simplified and standardized. IACA decided that the time was right for it to develop proposed statutory provisions on two subjects:

1. A standard set of provisions that would apply to all forms of entities that are required to designate in a public filing an agent for service of process.

2. A standard form of annual report to be filed with secretaries of state by all forms of entities.

The Ad Hoc Committee on Entity Rationalization of the ABA Section on Business Law (the "ABA Committee") had been working cooperatively with IACA for several years on other projects of mutual interest. After IACA had prepared a first draft of provisions on registered agents and annual reports, the ABA Committee joined the drafting effort. The ABA Committee also approached the leadership of the Conference with the suggestion that the Conference also join the drafting effort. The result was the development of the Act [part].

The original draft of the Act [part] contained separate articles dealing with the two subjects originally identified by IACA: (i) registered agents and (ii) annual report filings. After detailed consideration, the drafting committee and its advisors were all agreed that a separate article on annual reports was not necessary and should be omitted from the Act [part]. Instead, the changes needed to standardize annual report filings are included in the Appendix of conforming amendments to the Act [part]. Thus, the Act [part] has two parts:

1. The provisions of the Act [part] itself, which deal with registered agent issues and apply to all forms of entities.

2. An Appendix of conforming changes to all of the existing uniform, model, and prototype entity laws that have two separate purposes:

some of the conforming amendments integrate the uniform, model, and prototype entity laws with the Act [part] and its new registered agent provisions, and the remaining conforming amendments standardize the provisions of the uniform, model, and prototype entity laws on annual report filings.

Under existing uniform, model, and prototype entity laws, an entity's registered agent and the location of the registered agent's office serve three purposes:

1. the registered agent is an agent of the entity authorized to receive service of process on behalf of the entity;

2. the location of the office of the registered agent determines where venue is to be laid in certain actions under the entity's organic law; and

3. the location of the office of the registered agent also determines where certain notices required by the entity's organic law are to be published. The first function, that of being an agent for service of process, is the principal reason why the appointment of a registered agent is required under entity organic laws. The remaining two functions made sense at a time when the registered office address of an entity was often a business address for the entity. In recent years, however, it has become common for entities to use as their registered agents businesses whose principal activity is the provision of registered agent services, and thus the address of the registered agent has become divorced from any real connection with the business activities of the represented entity.

The conforming amendments in the Appendix to this Act [appendix not included] accordingly eliminate the functions of the registered office address as the means of determining where venue or publication is appropriate. Venue and publication will be determined by the location of an entity's principal office; or, if the principal office is outside the state, venue and publication will be in a county specified by the legislature (for example, the county where the state capitol is located).

The conforming amendments also eliminate the provisions found in some entity organic laws that make the Secretary of State the default agent for service of process under certain circumstances.

35-7-102. Definitions.

Commission Comment

In general. Many of the definitions in this section were developed for use in the Model Entity Transactions Act (META) [not enacted in Montana]. States that have adopted META should consider arranging their entity laws in such a manner that the definitions in META will apply more broadly and do not need to be repeated in other laws. The definitions that are common to this Act and META are:

"domestic entity"
"entity"
"filing entity"
"foreign entity"
"governance interest"
"governor"
"interest"
"interest holder"

"jurisdiction of organization"
"organic law"
"organic rules"
"person"
"private organic rules"
"public organic document"
"qualified foreign entity"
"record"
"sign"
"transferable interest"
"type"

The comments below with respect to defined terms taken from META are substantively the same as the corresponding comments in META.

"Appointment of agent." [(1)] - An appointment of agent is an optional filing that may be made by an entity that does not otherwise make a public filing in the state naming an agent for service of process. If a state has not enacted the Uniform Unincorporated Nonprofit Association Act [not enacted in Montana], paragraph (A) of this definition should be omitted.

"Commercial registered agent." [(2)] - A commercial registered agent is an individual or entity that is in the business of serving as a registered agent in the state and that files a listing statement under Section 6 [35-7-106]. Being listed as a commercial registered agent is voluntary and persons serving as registered agents are not required to be listed under Section 6 [35-7-106]. The benefits to the registered agent of being listed under Section 6 [35-7-106], however, are substantial and most registered agents will elect to be so listed. Although this definition and Section 6 [35-7-106] do not expressly require that a foreign entity that is listed as a commercial registered agent be qualified to do business in the state, the activity of serving as a registered agent is one that requires such registration.

"Domestic entity." [(3)] - The term "domestic entity" in this Act [part] means an entity whose internal affairs are governed by the organic laws of the adopting state. Except in the case of general partnerships and unincorporated nonprofit associations, this will mean an entity that is formed, organized, or incorporated under domestic law. In the case of a general partnership organized under the Uniform Partnership Act (1997) (RUPA) [see Title 35, ch. 10], it will mean a general partnership whose governing law under RUPA §106 is the law of the adopting state. Under RUPA §106 the governing law is determined by the location of the partnership's chief executive office, except for limited liability partnerships where the governing law is the state where the statement of qualification is filed. It is a factual question whether the activities and organization of an unincorporated nonprofit association make it a domestic or foreign entity.

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(9) ("domestic entity").

"Entity." [(4)] - The term "entity" includes:

Business corporation.
Business or statutory trust.
General partnership, whether or not a limited liability partnership.
Limited liability company.
Limited partnership, whether or not a limited liability limited partnership.
Nonprofit corporation.
Unincorporated nonprofit association.

The term does not include a sole proprietorship.

This definition is intended to include all forms of private organizations, regardless of whether organized for profit, and artificial legal persons other than those excluded by paragraphs (A) through (E). Thus, this definition is broader than the definition of "business entity" in, e.g., Code of Ala. §10-15-2(2) which does not include nonprofit entities. This definition does not exclude regulated entities such as public utilities, banks and insurance companies.

Inter vivos and testamentary trusts are treated in many states as having a separate legal existence, but they have been excluded from the definition of "entity." Trusts that carry on a business, however, such as a Massachusetts trust, real estate investment trust, Illinois land trust, or other common law or statutory business trusts are "entities."

Section 4 of the Uniform Unincorporated Nonprofit Association Act gives an unincorporated nonprofit association the power to acquire an estate in real property and thus an unincorporated nonprofit association organized in a state that has adopted that act will be an "entity." At common law, an unincorporated nonprofit association was not a legal entity and did not have the power to acquire real property. Most states that have not adopted the Uniform Act have nonetheless modified the common law rule, but states that have not adopted the Uniform Act should analyze whether they should modify the definition of "entity" to add an express reference to unincorporated nonprofit associations.

There is some question as to whether a partnership subject to the Uniform Partnership Act (1914) (UPA) is an entity or merely an aggregation of its partners. That question has been resolved by Section 201 of the Uniform Partnership Act (1997) (RUPA), which makes clear that a general partnership is an entity with its own separate legal existence. Section 8 of UPA gives partnerships subject to it the power to acquire estates in real property and thus such a partnership will be an "entity." As a result, all general partnerships will be "entities" regardless of whether the state in which they are organized has adopted RUPA.

Paragraph (C) [35-7-102(4)(c)] of this definition excludes from the concept of an "entity" any form of co-ownership of property or sharing of returns from property that is not a partnership under RUPA. In that connection, Section 202(c) of RUPA provides in part:

In determining whether a partnership is formed, the following rules apply:

(1) Joint tenancy, tenancy in common, tenancy by the entireties, joint property, common property, or part ownership does not by itself establish a partnership, even if the co-owners share profits made by the use of the property.

(2) The sharing of gross returns does not by itself establish a partnership, even if the persons sharing them have a joint or common right or interest in property from which the returns are derived.

Limited liability partnerships and limited liability limited partnerships are "entities" because they are general partnerships and limited partnerships, respectively, that have made the additional required election claiming LLP or LLLP status. A limited liability partnership is not, therefore, a separate type of entity from the underlying general or limited partnership that has elected limited liability partnership status.

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(13) ("entity").

"Filing entity." [(5)] - Whether an entity is a filing entity is determined by reference to whether its legal existence is attributable to the filing of a document with the state filing officer. While the statute refers to an entity that is "created," it is intended to encompass corporations which are "incorporated," limited liability companies which are "organized," and limited partnerships which are "formed" by a filing required by the organic law governing the entity. Business trusts (sometimes referred to as "statutory trusts") present a special problem. In some states, for example, a business trust is a filing entity, while in other states business trusts are recognized only by common law.

The term does not include a limited liability partnership because an election filed by a general partnership claiming that status (e.g., a statement of qualification under Uniform Partnership Act (1997), §1001) does not create the entity. A limited liability limited partnership, on the other hand, is a filing entity because the underlying limited partnership is created by filing a certificate of limited partnership.

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(14) ("filing entity"). See also Model Business Corporation Act §1.40(9B) ("filing entity") [see Title 35, ch. 1].

"Foreign entity." [(6)] - The term "foreign entity" includes any non-domestic entity of any type. Where a foreign entity is a filing entity, the entity is governed by the laws of the state of filing. A nonfiling foreign entity is governed by the laws of the state governing its internal affairs. It is a factual question whether a general partnership whose internal affairs are governed by the Uniform Partnership Act (1914) (UPA) is a domestic or foreign partnership. A UPA partnership will likely be deemed to be a domestic entity where the greatest nexus of contacts are found. Similar issues arise with respect to determining the domestic or foreign status of unincorporated nonprofit associations. The domestic or foreign characterization of partnerships under the Uniform Partnership Act (1997) (RUPA) that have not registered as limited liability partnerships will be governed by RUPA §106(a) ("state where the partnership's chief executive office is located").

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(15) ("foreign entity").

"Foreign qualification document." [(7)] - This definition should be construed broadly to include filings in the state that are required when a foreign entity is conducting activities in the state, regardless of whether the process is referred to as "obtaining a certificate of authority to do business," "qualifying to do business," "being authorized to transact business," or some other formulation.

"Governance interest." [(8)] - A governance interest is typically only part of the interest that a person will hold in an entity and is usually coupled with a transferable interest (or economic rights). However, memberships in some nonprofit corporations and unincorporated nonprofit associations consist solely of governance interests and memberships in other nonprofit entities may not include either governance interests or transferable interests. In some unincorporated business entities, there is a more limited right to transfer governance interests than there is to transfer transferable interests. An interest holder in such an unincorporated business entity who transfers only a transferable interest and retains the governance interest will also retain the status of an interest holder. Whether a transferee who acquires only a transferable interest will acquire the status of an interest holder is determined by the definition of "interest holder."

Shares in a business corporation that are nonvoting nonetheless have a governance interest because they entitle the holder to certain rights of access to information and to certain statutory voting rights on amendments of the articles of incorporation.

Governors of an entity have the kinds of rights listed in the definition of "governance interest" by reason of their position with the entity. For a governor to have a "governance interest," however, requires that the governor also have those rights for a reason other than the governor's status as such. A manager who is not a member in a limited liability company, for example, will not have a governance interest, but a manager who is a member will have a governance interest arising from the ownership of a membership interest.

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(16) ("governance interest").

"Governor." [(9)] - This term has been chosen to provide a way of referring to a person who has the authority under an entity's organic law to make management decisions regarding the entity that is different from any of the existing terms used in connection with particular types of entities. Compare Colo. §7-90-102(35.7) which uses the term "manager" to refer to this concept, even though "manager" is also a term of art in connection with limited liability companies. Depending on the type of entity or its organic rules, the governors of an entity may have the power to act on their own authority, or they may be organized as a board or similar group and only have the power to act collectively, and then only through a designated agent. In other words, a person having only the power to bind the organization pursuant to the instruction of the governors is not a governor. Under the organic rules, particularly those of unincorporated entities, most or all of the management decisions may be reserved to the members or partners. Thus, if a manager of a limited liability company were limited to having authority to execute management decisions made by the members and did not have any authority to make independent management decisions, the manager would not be a governor under this definition.

Except as described above, the term "governor" includes:

Director of a business corporation.

Director or trustee of a nonprofit corporation.

General partner of a general partnership.

General partner of a limited partnership.

Manager of a limited liability company.

Member of a member-managed limited liability company.

Trustee of a business or statutory trust.

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(17) ("governor").

"Interest." [(10)] - In the usual case, the interest held by an interest holder will include both a governance interest and a transferable interest (or economic rights). Members in many nonprofit corporations or unincorporated nonprofit associations do not have a transferable interest because they do not receive distributions, but they nonetheless may hold a governance interest in which case they would have the status of interest holders under the Act. An interest holder in an unincorporated business entity may transfer all or part of the interest holder's transferable interest without the transferee acquiring the governance interest of the transferor. In that case, whether the transferor will retain the status of an interest holder will be determined by the applicable organic law and the transferee will have the status of an interest holder under paragraph (B) [35-7-102(10)(b)] of this definition. That paragraph will also apply to subsequent transferees from the original transferee.

The term "interest" includes:

Beneficial interest in a business or statutory trust.

Membership in a nonprofit corporation.

Membership in an unincorporated nonprofit association.

Membership interest in a limited liability company.

Partnership interest in a general partnership.

Partnership interest in a limited partnership.

Shares in a business corporation.

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(18) ("interest").

"Interest holder." [(11)] - This Act does not refer to "equity" interests or "equity" owners or holders because the term "equity" could be confusing in the case of a nonprofit entity whose members do not have an interest in the assets or results of operations of the entity but only have a right to vote on its internal affairs. Compare Code of Ala. §10-15-2(4) ("equity owner").

The term "interest holder" includes:

Beneficiary of a business or statutory trust.

General partner of a general partnership.

General partner of a limited partnership.

Limited partner of a limited partnership.

Member of a limited liability company.

Member of a nonprofit corporation.

Member of an unincorporated nonprofit association.

Shareholder of a business corporation.

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(20) ("interest holder"). See also Model Business Corporation Act §1.40(13B) ("interest holder").

"Jurisdiction of organization." [(12)] - The term "jurisdiction of organization" refers to the jurisdiction whose laws include the organic law of the entity.

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(22) ("jurisdiction of organization").

"Noncommercial registered agent." [(13)] - A noncommercial registered agent is a person that serves as an agent for service of process but that is not listed under Section 6 [35-7-106]. All agents for service of process that are not commercial registered agents are noncommercial registered agents.

"Nonqualified foreign entity." [(14)] - A nonqualified foreign entity is a foreign entity for which there is no foreign qualification document in effect in the adopting state.

"Nonresident LLP statement." [(15)] - A nonresident LLP statement is the filing that is made by a limited liability partnership under Section 1001 of the Uniform Partnership Act (1997).

"Organic law." [(16)] - Organic law means statutes other than this Act [part] that govern the internal affairs of an entity. Entity laws in a few states purport to require that some of their internal governance rules applicable to a domestic entity also apply to a foreign entity with significant ties to the state. See, e.g., Cal. Gen. Corp. Law §2115, N.Y. N-PCL §§1318-1321, 15 Pa.C.S. §6145. Such a "sticky fingers" law is included within the definition of "organic law" for purposes of the Act [part].

If a state has adopted the Model Entity Transactions Act, it should amend this definition to also exclude that act from the term "organic law."

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(26) ("organic law"). See also Model Business Corporation Act §1.40(15B) ("organic law").

"Organic rules." [(17)] - The term "organic rules" means an entity's public organic document and its private organic rules.

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(27) ("organic rules").

"Person." [(18)] - The term "person" has the standard meaning of that term in uniform acts.

"Private organic rules." [(19)] - The term private "organic rules" is intended to include all governing rules of an entity that are binding on all of its interest holders, whether or not in written form, except for the provisions of the entity's public organic document, if any. The term is intended to include agreements in "record" form as well as oral partnership agreements and oral operating agreements among LLC members. Where private organic rules have been amended or restated, the term means the private organic rules as last amended or restated.

The term "private organic rules" includes:

Bylaws of a business corporation.

Bylaws of a business or statutory trust.

Bylaws of a nonprofit corporation.

Constitution and bylaws of an unincorporated nonprofit association.

Operating agreement of a limited liability company.

Partnership agreement of a general partnership.

Partnership agreement of a limited partnership.

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(30) ("private organic rules"). Compare Model Business Corporation Act §1.40(17A) ("private organic document").

"Public organic document." [(20)] - A "public organic document" is a document that is filed of public record to form, organize, incorporate, or otherwise create an entity. The term does not include a statement of partnership authority filed under Section 303 of the Uniform Partnership Act (1997) or any of the other statements that may be filed under that act since those statements do not create a new entity. A limited liability partnership is the same entity as the partnership that files the statement. For the same reason, the term also does not include a statement of qualification filed under Section 1001 of that act to become a limited liability partnership. Similarly, the term does not include a statement of authority filed under Section 5 of the Uniform Unincorporated Nonprofit Association Act or a statement appointing an agent filed under Section 10 of that act. Where a public organic document has been amended or restated, the term means the public organic document as last amended or restated.

The term "public organic document" includes:

Articles of incorporation of a business corporation.

Articles of incorporation of a nonprofit corporation.

Certificate of limited partnership.

A Certificate of organization of a limited liability company. In those states where a deed of trust or other instrument is publicly filed to create a business trust, that filing will constitute a public organic document. But in those states where a business trust is not created by a public filing, the deed of trust or similar document will be part of the private organic rules of the business trust.

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(32) ("public organic document").

"Qualified foreign entity." [(21)] - A qualified foreign entity is a foreign entity for which there is a foreign qualification document in effect in the adopting state.

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(33) ("qualified foreign entity").

"Record." [(22)] - The term "record" has the standard meaning of that term in uniform acts.

"Registered agent." [(23)] - This term is used in the Act [part] to refer to agents for service of process in contexts where it is not necessary to differentiate between commercial registered agents and noncommercial registered agents.

"Registered agent filing." [(24)] - Some states require that filings in addition to those listed in this definition, such as articles of amendment or articles of merger, state the registered agent information of the entity making the filing. In states where that is the case, this definition should be amended to add the following additional provision:

"(E) any other filing with the [Secretary of State] under an entity's organic law that must include the information required by Section 5(a) [35-7-105(1)]."

"Represented entity." [(25)] - This definition lists the various classes of entities for which registered agents act as agents for service of process.

"Sign." [(26)] - The term "sign" has the standard meaning of that term in uniform acts.

"Transferable interest." [(27)] - The term "transferable interest" is taken from Section 102(22) of the Uniform Limited Partnership Act (2001) [see Title 35, ch. 12].

This definition is patterned after Model Entity Transactions Act §102(38) ("transferable interest").

"Type." [(28)] - The term "type" has been developed in an attempt to distinguish different legal forms of entities. It is sometimes difficult to decide whether one is dealing with a different form of entity or a variation of the same form. For example, a limited partnership, although it has been defined as a partnership, is a different type of entity from a general partnership, while a limited liability partnership is not a different type of entity from a general partnership. In some states cooperative corporations are categories of business corporations or nonprofit corporations, while in other states cooperatives are a separate type of entity.

35-7-103. Fees.

Commission Comment

Subsection (a) establishes the filing fees for each type of document that may be filed under the Act. The dollar amounts for each filing should be inserted by the adopting state with reference to the filing fees charged for other filings with the Secretary of State.

Subsection (a)(4) provides that a fee is not required in connection with a filing of a statement of resignation. That permits a person who is named as a registered agent without the person's consent, or who agrees to serve as registered agent for a fee and the fee is not paid, to reflect properly the status of the person in the records of the Secretary of State without expense.

Subsection (b) establishes fees for copying and certifying documents filed under the Act. The dollar amounts for these fees should be inserted by the adopting state with reference to the fees charged for those services under the state's various entity organic laws.

This section is patterned after Section 1.22 of the Model Business Corporation Act. [None of these subsections were enacted in Montana. Rather, Montana enacted the language of this section in conformance with an NCCUSL legislative note that provided: "In a state where filing fees are set by rule making, this section may be replaced with the statement "The [Secretary of State] shall by rule set fees for filings, and the services provided, under this [act]."

35-7-104. Addresses in filings.

Commission Comment

When this Act [part] requires that a filing state an address, the address used must always be a geographic location. Where a person uses a post office box as its mailing address, paragraph (2) [35-7-104(2)] requires that the post office box address also be stated.

35-7-105. Appointment of registered agent.

Commission Comment

Subsection (a)(1) [35-7-105(1)(a)] gives an entity the option of listing just the name of its commercial registered agent in a registered agent filing and omitting the address of the registered agent. If the commercial registered agent subsequently changes its address, that change will be reflected in the filing made by the agent under Section 6 [35-7-106], as amended under Section 10 [35-7-110], but no change will be necessary in the registered agent filing of any of the entities represented by the commercial registered agent. The address of an entity's commercial registered agent may be ascertained from the records of the Secretary of State by consulting its listing under Section 6 [35-7-106].

The address of an entity's noncommercial registered agent is usually not a business address of the represented entity. On the other hand, subsection 5(a)(2)(B) [35-7-105(1)(b)] permits an entity to designate a person within the organization, such as its general counsel, to serve as its registered agent; and in that circumstance the address of the registered agent may very well be a business address of the represented entity [subsection 5(a)(2)(B) not enacted in Montana].

The addresses required by subsection (a) [35-7-105(1)] to be stated in a registered agent filing must satisfy the requirements in Section 4 [35-7-104].

Subsection (b) [35-7-105(2)] avoids the need to include with a registered agent filing a consent of the registered agent to serve as such.

Subsection (c) [35-7-105(3)] creates a procedure that will permit registered agents to determine if they have been named in filings of which they were not aware by periodically consulting the list prepared by the Secretary of State. Subsection (c) requires the registered agents to be listed in alphabetical order [requirement for alphabetical listing not enacted in Montana] to facilitate the use of the list by registered agents and also to indicate the type of filing (e.g., articles of incorporation, certificates of limited partnership, appointments of agents under Section 12 of this Act [35-7-112], etc.) in which each registered agent is named. Subsection (c) [35-7-105(3)] will not be necessary under the circumstances described in the Legislative Note because registered agents may consult the regular database maintained by the Secretary of State to verify when they have been named as a registered agent. [The legislative note provided: "Subsection (c) may be omitted if (i) the records of the Secretary of State are searchable electronically in a manner that permits filings to be identified by the date of the filing and by the name of the registered agent named in the filing, and (ii) the searchable database is updated frequently."]

Subsection (a) [35-7-105(1)] is a generalization of Section 5.01 of the Model Business Corporation Act, Section 114 of the Uniform Limited Partnership Act, and Section 108 of the Uniform Limited Liability Company Act [see Title 35, ch. 8].

35-7-106. Listing of commercial registered agent.

Commission Comment

This section is a substantial simplification of practice because it removes the need to amend the filed record of every entity represented by a commercial registered agent when the agent changes its address.

Subsection (a)(3) [35-7-106(1)(c)] only permits a commercial registered agent to list one address where service of process and other notices may be sent to entities represented by the agent. This may require a change in practice for registered agents who have previously maintained more than one address in a state and have permitted represented entities to choose which address they would use in their registered agent filings. A corporation, for example, located in one part of a state might include in its articles of incorporation an address for its registered agent which is the address of an office of the agent located close to the corporation and which is different than the address used by a corporation in another part of the state which has the same registered agent but uses a different office of the agent. In the example given, the registered agent will need to pick just one address in the state where all service of process will be sent to it. If a commercial registered agent wishes to maintain more than one office in a state where service of process will be received by it, it can accomplish that result by organizing separate entities to conduct its business in the state and filing separate statements for each entity under this section.

The address required by subsection (a)(3) [35-7-106(1)(c)] to be stated in a commercial registered agent listing statement must satisfy the requirements in Section 4 [35-7-104].

Subsection (e) [35-7-106(4)] is a transitional provision that deals with the effect on the entities represented by a registered agent at the time the agent is first listed under this section. The effect is to amend the registered agent filing of each such entity to delete the address of the registered agent consistent with Section 5(a)(1) [35-7-105(1)(a)].

This section is patterned generally after 15 Pa.C.S. §109.

35-7-107. Termination of listing of commercial registered agent.

Commission Comment

This section provides a procedure for a commercial registered agent to withdraw from the business of providing registered agent services. Use of the procedure in this section will terminate the status of the registered agent as the agent for service of process of all the entities represented by the agent. Thus, the procedure in this section differs from the procedure in Section 11 [35-7-111], which permits a registered agent to resign with respect to just a single represented entity instead of resigning generally with respect to all of its represented entities.

35-7-108. Change of registered agent by entity.

Commission Comment

Changes of the registered agent or the office address of a registered agent are usually routine matters that do not affect the rights of the interest holders of the represented entity. This section permits those changes to be made without a formal amendment of an entity's public organic document, without approval of its interest holders, and, indeed, even without formal approval by its governors (i.e., the persons managing the entity's affairs, such as the board of directors of a corporation).

Subsection (c) [35-7-108(3)] avoids the need to file with a statement of change a consent of the new registered agent being designated.

Subsection (e) [35-7-108(5)] makes clear that the procedures in this section are not exclusive. A common way in which an entity changes its registered agent or registered office is to include the change in an amendment of its public organic document.

Subsection (a) [35-7-108(1)] is a generalization of Section 5.02(a) of the Model Business Corporation Act, Section 115 of the Uniform Limited Partnership Act, and Section 109 of the Uniform Limited Liability Company Act. As to subsection (c) [35-7-108(3)], compare Section 5.02(a)(5) of the Model Business Corporation Act. Subsection (d) [35-7-108(4)] is patterned after Section 115(b) of the Uniform Limited Partnership Act.

35-7-109. Change of name or address by noncommercial registered agent.

Commission Comment

This section permits a noncommercial registered agent to change the name and address of the agent that appears in the registered agent filing of an entity represented by the agent. Because the noncommercial registered agent is not listed under Section 6 [35-7-106], the agent will not be able to use the procedures in Section 10 [35-7-110] which permit commercial registered agents to make only one filing to change their name and address for all entities represented by them. Thus the noncommercial registered agent will need to make a filing under this section for each entity represented by the agent.

An address included in a statement of change must satisfy the requirements in Section 4 [35-7-104].

This section is patterned after 15 Pa.C.S. §108.

35-7-110. Change of name, address, or type of organization by commercial registered agent.

Commission Comment

This section permits a commercial registered agent to make a single filing that has the effect of changing the name or address of the agent for all of the entities represented by it.

An address included in a statement of change must satisfy the requirements in Section 4 [35-7-104].

Subsection (e) [35-7-110(5)] provides a procedure by which the Secretary of State may cancel the listing of a commercial registered agent when the Secretary of State learns that the agent has changed its address without amending its listing as a commercial registered agent. When the Secretary of State acts to cancel the listing of a commercial registered agent, the Secretary of State is required to notify both (i) the entities represented by the agent that they no longer have a valid registered agent and (ii) the agent that it no longer is listed as a commercial registered agent. Unlike in the case of a resignation under Section 11 [35-7-111] which is initiated by the registered agent and thus does not require a notice from the Secretary of State to the agent, notice by the Secretary of State to the agent is needed under this section so that the agent has notice that its representation of the entities it previously represented has terminated under Section 7 [35-7-107].

35-7-111. Resignation of registered agent.

Commission Comment

Resignation under this section may be accomplished solely by action of the registered agent and does not require the cooperation or consent of the represented entity. Whether a resignation violates a contract between the registered agent and the represented entity is beyond the scope of this Act [part] and subsection (d) [35-7-111(4)] preserves whatever claims a represented entity may have against its registered agent for a wrongful termination. Even if a resignation were to violate such a contract, the resignation would still be effective if the provisions of this section are followed.

Resignation under this section relates only to the entity named in the statement of resignation. Thus, the procedure in this section differs from the procedure in Section 7 [35-7-107] which terminates the status of the agent as agent for all of the entities represented by it.

The requirements of Section 4 [35-7-104] with respect to addresses do not apply to subsection (a)(4) [35-7-111(1)(d)] because the registered agent may not have all the required information available.

Subsection (b) [35-7-111(2)] delays the effectiveness of a statement of resignation for 31 days to allow the notice of the resignation that must be sent under subsection (c) [35-7-111(3)] to reach the represented entity and to allow the represented entity to arrange for a substitute registered agent.

Subsection (e) [35-7-111(5)] makes clear that a registered agent may resign with respect to an entity that is not in good standing and supersedes the contrary administrative practice in some states of refusing to accept any filings with respect to an entity that is not in good standing until the problem with the entity's standing is cured.

Subsection (a) [35-7-111(1)] is a generalization of Section 5.03(a) of the Model Business Corporation Act, Section 116(a) of the Uniform Limited Partnership Act, and Section 110(a) of the Uniform Limited Liability Company Act. Subsection (b) [35-7-111(2)] is a generalization of Section 5.03(c) of the Model Business Corporation Act, Section 116(c) of the Uniform Limited Partnership Act, and Section 110(c) of the Uniform Limited Liability Company Act. Subsection (c) [35-7-111(3)] is derived from Section 5.03(b) of the Model Business Corporation Act, Section 116(b) of the Uniform Limited Partnership Act, and Section 110(b) of the Uniform Limited Liability Company Act, except that notice under this Act is to be given by the resigning registered agent rather than the Secretary of State.

35-7-113. Service of process on entities.

Commission Comment

Subsection (c) [not enacted in Montana] provides a means for serving process on an entity that cannot be served under subsection (a) [35-7-113(1)] or (b) [only part of (b) enacted in Montana as 35-7-113(2)]. Some entity organic laws require that service of process in that circumstance be made on the Secretary of State, but that leaves unanswered the question of what the Secretary of State should do with the process. Subsection (c) [not enacted in Montana] is patterned after Pa. R.Civ.Proc. 423(3) and 424(2). A similar approach is taken by Fed. R.Civ.Proc. 4(h)(1).

Subsections (a) [35-7-113(1)] and (d) [only part of (d) enacted in Montana as 35-7-113(4)] are a generalization of Section 5.04(a) and (c) of the Model Business Corporation Act, Section 117(a) and (f) of the Uniform Limited Partnership Act, and Section 111(a) and (e) of the Uniform Limited Liability Company Act. Subsection (b) [only part of (b) enacted in Montana as 35-7-113(2)] is a generalization of Section 5.04(b) of the Model Business Corporation Act.

35-7-114. Duties of registered agent.

Commission Comment

This section is limited to prescribing the duties of a registered agent under this Act [part]. An agent may undertake other responsibilities to a represented entity, such as by contract or course of dealing, but those duties will be determined under other law.

The Delaware General Corporation Law has been amended to add a new Section 132(b)(1), 8 Del. Code §132(b)(1), requiring a registered agent to be generally available in the state to accept service of process. It was not considered necessary to include that provision in the Act [part] because Section 13 [35-7-113] provides alternative means of serving process if a registered agent cannot with reasonable diligence be served.

The Delaware General Corporation has also been amended to require a represented corporation to notify its registered agent when the corporation changes its business address and to permit a registered agent to resign if it is not supplied with current contact information. 8 Del. Code §132(d). Section 11 of the Act [35-7-111] provides registered agents with a broader right to resign than is available under the Delaware amendment.

35-7-115. Jurisdiction.

Commission Comment

As discussed in the Introduction to the Act [part], one of the purposes of the Act [part] is to eliminate the registered office address as a means of determining where venue is to be laid in an action involving a represented entity. Consistent with that purpose, this section makes clear that the address of a registered agent does not determine venue. This section may be inconsistent with other law or procedural rules in a state, and thus existing law on venue should be reviewed when this Act [part] is considered for adoption in a state. Compare Cooper v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc., 132 N.M. 382, 49 P.3d 61 (N.M. 2002) (applying New Mexico statute permitting venue "in the county where the statutory agent designated by the foreign corporation resides") [language concerning venue not enacted in Montana].

35-7-116. Consistency of application.

Commission Comment

A provision similar to this section is included in each uniform act promulgated by the Conference. Because this Act [part] is not a uniform act, however, the usual formulation of this section has been changed from "uniformity" of application to "consistency" of application to promote the same policy while recognizing the different nature of this Act [part].

CHAPTER 8
MONTANA LIMITED LIABILITY COMPANY ACT

Chapter Official Comments

PREFATORY NOTE

Borrowing from abroad, Wyoming initiated a national movement in 1977 by enacting this country's first limited liability company act. The movement started slowly as the Internal Revenue Service took more than ten years to announce finally that a Wyoming limited liability company would be taxed like a partnership. Since that time, every State has adopted or is considering its own distinct limited liability company act, many of which have already been amended one or more times.

The allure of the limited liability company is its unique ability to bring together in a single business organization the best features of all other business forms — properly structured, its owners obtain both a corporate-styled liability shield and the pass-through tax benefits of a partnership. General and limited partnerships do not offer their partners a corporate-styled liability shield. Corporations, including those having made a Subchapter Selection, do not offer their shareholders all the pass-through tax benefits of a partnership. All state limited liability company acts contain provisions for a liability shield and partnership tax status.

Despite these two common themes, state limited liability company acts display a dazzling array of diversity. Multistate activities of businesses are widespread. Recognition of out-of-state limited liability companies varies. Unfortunately, this lack of uniformity manifests itself in basic but fundamentally important questions, such as: may a company be formed and operated by only one owner; may it be formed for purposes other than to make a profit; whether owners have the power and right to withdraw from a company and receive a distribution of the fair value of their interests; whether a member's dissociation threatens a dissolution of the company; who has the apparent authority to bind the company and the limits of that authority; what are the fiduciary duties of owners and managers to a company and each other; how are the rights to manage a company allocated among its owners and managers; do the owners have the right to sue a company and its other owners in their own right as well as derivatively on behalf of the company; may general and limited partnerships be converted to limited liability companies and may limited liability companies merge with other limited liability companies and other business organizations; what is the law governing foreign limited liability companies; and are any or all of these and other rules simply default rules that may be modified by agreement or are they nonwaivable.

Practitioners and entrepreneurs struggle to understand the law governing limited liability companies organized in their own State and to understand the burgeoning law of other States. Simple questions concerning where to organize are increasingly complex. Since most state limited liability company acts are in their infancy, little if any interpretative case law exists. Even when case law develops, it will have limited precedential value because of the diversity of the state acts.

Accordingly, uniform legislation in this area of the law appeared to have become urgent.

After a Study Committee appointed by the National Conference of Commissioners in late 1991 recommended that a comprehensive project be undertaken, the Conference appointed a Drafting Committee which worked on a Uniform Limited Liability Company Act (ULLCA) from early 1992 until its adoption by the Conference at its Annual Meeting in August 1994. The Drafting Committee was assisted by a blue ribbon panel of national experts and other interested and affected parties and organizations. Many, if not all, of those assisting the Committee brought substantial experience from drafting limited liability company legislation in their own States. Many are also authors of leading treatises and articles in the field. Those represented in the drafting process included an American Bar Association (ABA) liaison, four advisors representing the three separate ABA Sections of Business Law, Taxation, and Real Property, Trust and Probate, the United States Treasury Department, the Internal Revenue Service, and many observers representing several other organizations, including the California Bar Association, the New York City Bar Association, the American College of Real Estate Lawyers, the National Association of Certified Public Accountants, the National Association of Secretaries of State, the Chicago and Lawyers Title Companies, the American Land Title Association, and several university law and business school faculty members.

The Committee met nine times and engaged in numerous national telephonic conferences to discuss policies, review over fifteen drafts, evaluate legal developments and consider comments by our many knowledgeable advisers and observers, as well as an ABA subcommittee's earlier work on a prototype. In examining virtually every aspect of each state limited liability company act, the Committee maintained a single policy vision — to draft a flexible act with a comprehensive set of default rules designed to substitute as the essence of the bargain for small entrepreneurs and others.

This Act is flexible in the sense that the vast majority of its provisions may be modified by the owners in a private agreement. Only limited and specific fundamental matters may not be altered by private agreement. To simplify, those nonwaivable provisions are set forth in a single subsection. Helped thereby, sophisticated parties will negotiate their own deal with the benefit of counsel.

The Committee also recognized that small entrepreneurs without the benefit of counsel should also have access to the Act. To that end, the great bulk of the Act sets forth default rules designed to operate a limited liability company without sophisticated agreements and to recognize that members may also modify the default rules by oral agreements defined in part by their own conduct. Uniquely, the Act combines two simple default structures which depend upon the presence of designations in the articles of organization. All default rules under the Act flow from these two designations.

First, unless the articles reflect that a limited liability company is a term company and the duration of that term, the company will be an at-will company. Generally, the owners of an at-will company may demand a payment of the fair value of their interests at any time. Owners of a term company must generally wait until the expiration of the term to obtain the value of their interests. Secondly, unless the articles reflect that a company will be managed by managers, the company will be managed by its members. This designation controls whether the members or managers have apparent agency authority, management authority, and the nature of fiduciary duties in the company.

In January of 1995 the Executive Committee of the Conference adopted an amendment to harmonize the Act with new and important Internal Revenue Service announcements, and the amendment was ratified by the National Conference at its Annual Meeting in August of 1995. Those Internal Revenue Service announcements generally provide that a limited liability company will not be taxed like a corporation regardless of its organizational structure. Freed from the old tax classification restraints, the amendment modifies the Act's dissolution provision by eliminating member dissociation as a dissolution event. This important amendment significantly increases the stability of a limited liability company and places greater emphasis on a limited liability company's required purchase of a dissociated member's interest.

The adoption of ULLCA will provide much needed consistency among the States, with flexible default rules, and multistate recognition of limited liability on the part of company owners. It will also promote the development of precedential case law.

35-8-102. Definitions.

Official Comments

Uniform Limited Liability Company Act ("ULLCA") definitions, like the rest of the Act, are a blend of terms and concepts derived from the Uniform Partnership Act ("UPA"), the Uniform Partnership Act (1994) ("UPA 1994", also previously known as the Revised Uniform Partnership Act or "RUPA"), the Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act ("RULPA"), the Uniform Commercial Code ("UCC"), and the Model Business Corporation Act ("MBCA"), or their revisions from time to time; some are tailored specially for this Act [Title 35, ch. 8].

"Business." A limited liability company may be organized to engage in an activity either for or not for profit. The extent to which contributions to a nonprofit company may be deductible for Federal income tax purposes is determined by federal law. Other state law determines the extent of exemptions from state and local income and property taxes.

"Debtor in bankruptcy." The filing of a voluntary petition operates immediately as an "order for relief." See Sections 601(7)(i) [35-8-803(7)(a)] and 602(b)(2)(iii) [35-8-804(2)(b)(iii)].

"Distribution." This term includes all sources of a member's distributions including the member's capital contributions, undistributed profits, and residual interest in the assets of the company after all claims, including those of third parties and debts to members, have been paid.

"Distributional interest." The term does not include a member's broader rights to participate in the management of the company. See Comments to Article 5 [Title 35, ch. 8, part 7].

"Foreign limited liability company." The term is not restricted to companies formed in the United States.

"Manager." The rules of agency apply to limited liability companies. Therefore, managers may designate agents with whatever titles, qualifications, and responsibilities they desire. For example, managers may designate an agent as "President."

"Manager-managed company." The term includes only a company designated as such in the articles of organization. In a manager-managed company agency authority is vested exclusively in one or more managers and not in the members. See Sections 101(10) (manager) [subsection 18], 203(a)(6) (articles designation) [35-8-202(1)(d)], and 301(b) [35-8-301(2)] (agency authority of members and managers).

"Member-managed limited liability company." The term includes every company not designated as "manager-managed" under Section 203(a)(6) [35-8-202(1)(d)] in its articles of organization.

"Operating agreement." This agreement may be oral. Members may agree upon the extent to which their relationships are to be governed by writings.

"Principal office." The address of the principal office must be set forth in the annual report required under Section 211(a)(3) [35-8-208(1)(c)].

"Record." This Act [Title 35, ch. 8] is the first Uniform Act promulgated with a definition of this term. The definition brings this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] in conformity with the present state of technology and accommodates prospective future technology in the communication and storage of information other than by human memory. Modern methods of communicating and storing information employed in commercial practices are no longer confined to physical documents.

The term includes any writing. A record need not be permanent or indestructible, but an oral or other unwritten communication must be stored or preserved on some medium to qualify as a record. Information that has not been retained other than through human memory does not qualify as a record. A record may be signed or may be created without the knowledge or intent of a particular person. Other law must be consulted to determine admissibility in evidence, the applicability of statute of frauds, and other questions regarding the use of records. Under Section 206(a) [35-8-205(1)], electronic filings may be permitted and even encouraged.

Case Notes

No Breach of Duty to Company by Repayment of Loans to Members Before Payment of Company Debts: On the morning of a concert sponsored by plaintiff company, several members loaned money to the company to pay the bands so the concert could proceed. After the concert, the members' loans were repaid from concert proceeds rather than paying a company debt to a bank, ultimately leaving the company insolvent. Some members of the company contended that this act constituted an unlawful distribution of company assets and that the members who authorized the loan repayments were personally liable to the company for the amounts that they caused to be paid to themselves. The District Court granted summary judgment to defendants, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Under 35-8-604, a company may not make distributions to members if the distributions render the company unable to pay its debts, which includes a repayment of capital contributions that a member made to the company. However, in this case, the amounts advanced to the company to salvage the concert were personal loans made in the ordinary course of company business, and 35-8-504 allows a company to reimburse members for money loaned to the company, so the company had both the obligation and the right to repay the members' loans. The company had more legitimate debt than it could pay, and the decision to repay the members' loans was simply a business decision. Even though the members who authorized the payment were acting in a managerial position, they were not liable for making a legitimate business decision to pay one creditor in preference to another. Official Comments

A foreign limited liability company that is not presently authorized to transact business in the State may reserve a fictitious name for a nonrenewable 120-day period. 35-8-107. Powers — scope.

Official Comments

A limited liability company may be organized for any lawful purpose unless the State has specifically prohibited a company from engaging in a specific activity. For example, many States require that certain regulated industries, such as banking and insurance, be conducted only by organizations that meet the special requirements. Also, many States impose restrictions on activities in which a limited liability company may engage. For example, the practice of certain professionals is often subject to special conditions.

A limited liability company has the power to engage in and perform important and necessary acts related to its operation and function. A company's power to enter into a transaction is distinguishable from the authority of an agent to enter into the transaction. See Section 301 (agency rules) [35-8-301].

35-8-109. Effect of operating agreement — nonwaivable provisions.

Official Comments

The operating agreement is the essential contract that governs the affairs of a limited liability company. Since it is binding on all members, amendments must be approved by all members unless otherwise provided in the agreement. Although many agreements will be in writing, the agreement and any amendments may be oral or may be in the form of a record. Course of dealing, course of performance and usage of trade are relevant to determine the meaning of the agreement unless the agreement provides that all amendments must be in writing.

This section makes clear that the only matters an operating agreement may not control are specified in subsection (b) [subsection (3)]. Accordingly, an operating agreement may modify or eliminate any rule specified in any section of this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] except matters specified in subsection (b) [subsection (3)]. To the extent not otherwise mentioned in subsection (b) [subsection (3)], every section of this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] is simply a default rule, regardless of whether the language of the section appears to be otherwise mandatory. This approach eliminates the necessity of repeating the phrase "unless otherwise agreed" in each section and its commentary.

Under subsection (b)(1) [subsection (3)(a)], an operating agreement may not unreasonably restrict the right to information or access to any records under Section 408 [35-8-405]. This does not create an independent obligation beyond Section 408 [35-8-405] to maintain any specific records. Under subsections (b)(2) to (4) [subsection (3)(b) through (3)(d)], an irreducible core of fiduciary responsibilities survive any contrary provision in the operating agreement. Subsection (b)(2)(i) [subsection (3)(b)(i)] authorizes an operating agreement to modify, but not eliminate, the three specific duties of loyalty set forth in Section 409(b)(1) to (3) [35-8-310(2)(a) through (2)(c)] provided the modification itself is not manifestly unreasonable, a question of fact. Subsection (b)(2)(ii) [subsection (3)(b)(ii)] preserves the common law right of the members to authorize future or ratify past violations of the duty of loyalty provided there has been a full disclosure of all material facts. The authorization or ratification must be unanimous unless otherwise provided in an operating agreement, because the authorization or ratification itself constitutes an amendment to the agreement. The authorization or ratification of specific past or future conduct may sanction conduct that would have been manifestly unreasonable under subsection (b)(2)(i) [subsection (3)(b)(i)].

Case Notes

Motion to Amend Answer Properly Denied — Counterclaims Subject to Arbitration Agreement: The District Court denied the respondents' motion for leave to file an amended answer under Rule 15(a), M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20), that would have added tort counterclaims to a limited liability company (LLC) dissolution proceeding. In denying the motion, the District Court reasoned that the LLC operating agreement required binding arbitration to settle disputes of this nature and that allowing the counterclaims would result in additional claims, protracted discovery, and additional delay while causing prejudice and detriment to the petitioners. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the District Court and determined that the counterclaims would have been legally insufficient and futile based on the arbitration clause in the operating agreement. 35-8-110. Purpose — supplemental principles of law — interest rate.

Official Comments

Supplementary principles include, but are not limited to, the law of agency, estoppel, law merchant, and all other principles listed in UCC Section 1-103 [30-1-103], including the law relative to the capacity to contract, fraud, misrepresentation, duress, coercion, mistake, bankruptcy, and other validating and invalidating clauses. Other principles such as those mentioned in UCC Section 1-205 (Course of Dealing and Usage of Trade) [30-1-205] apply as well as course of performance. As with UPA 1994 Section 104 [35-10-104], upon which this provision is based, no substantive change from either the UPA or the UCC is intended. Section 104(b) [subsection (2)] establishes the applicable rate of interest in the absence of an agreement among the members.

Part 2
Formation

35-8-201. Formation.

Official Comments

A limited liability company is legally distinct from its members who are not normally liable for the debts, obligations, and liabilities of the company. See Section 303 [35-8-304]. Accordingly, members are not proper parties to suits against the company unless an object of the proceeding is to enforce members' rights against the company or to enforce their liability to the company.

Any person may organize a limited liability company by performing the ministerial act of signing and filing the articles of organization. The person need not be a member. As a matter of flexibility, a company may be organized and operated with only one member to enable sole proprietors to obtain the benefit of a liability shield. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements clarify that a one-member limited liability company will not be taxed like a corporation. Nor will it be taxed like a partnership since it lacks at least two members. Rather, a one-member limited liability company is disregarded for Federal tax purposes and its operations are reported on the return of its single owner.

The existence of a company begins when the articles are filed. Therefore, the filing of the articles of organization is conclusive as to the existence of the limited liability shield for persons who enter into transactions on behalf of the company. Until the articles are filed, a firm is not organized under this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] and is not a "limited liability company" as defined in Section 101(9) [35-8-102(16)]. In that case, the parties' relationships are not governed by this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] unless they have expressed a contractual intent to be bound by the provisions of the Act [Title 35, ch. 8]. Third parties would also not be governed by the provisions of this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] unless they have expressed a contractual intent to extend a limited liability shield to the members of the would-be limited liability company.

35-8-202. Articles of organization.

Official Comments

The articles serve primarily a notice function and generally do not reflect the substantive agreement of the members regarding the business affairs of the company. Those matters are generally reserved for an operating agreement which may be unwritten. Under Section 203(b) [subsection (1)], the articles may contain provisions permitted to be set forth in an operating agreement. Where the articles and operating agreement conflict, the operating agreement controls as to members but the articles control as to third parties. The articles may also contain any other matter not inconsistent with law. The most important is a Section 301(c) [35-8-702] limitation on the authority of a member or manager to transfer interests in the company's real property.

A company will be at-will unless it is designated as a term company and the duration of its term is specified in its articles under Section 203(a)(5) [subsection (1)(b)]. The duration of a term company may be specified in any manner which sets forth a specific and final date for the dissolution of the company. For example, the period specified may be in the form of "50 years from the date of filing of the articles" or "the period ending on January 1, 2020." Mere specification of a particular undertaking of an uncertain business duration is not sufficient unless the particular undertaking is within a longer fixed period. An example of this type of designation would include "2020 or until the building is completed, whichever occurs first." When the specified period is incorrectly specified, the company will be an at-will company. Notwithstanding the correct specification of a term in the articles, a company will be an at-will company among the members under Section 203(c)(1) [subsection (3)(a)] if an operating agreement so provides. A term company that continues after the expiration of its term specified in its articles will also be an at-will company.

A term company possesses several important default rule characteristics that differentiate it from an at-will company. An operating agreement may alter any of these rules. Generally, a member of an at-will company may rightfully dissociate at any time whereas a dissociation from a term company prior to the expiration of the specified term is wrongful. See Comments to Section 602(b) [35-8-804]. Accordingly, a dissociated member of an at-will company is entitled to have the company purchase that member's interest for its fair value determined as of the date of the member's dissociation. A dissociated member of a term company must generally await the expiration of the agreed term to withdraw the fair value of the interest determined at as of the date of the expiration of the agreed term. Thus, a dissociated member in an at-will company receives the fair value of their interest sooner than in a term compnay [sic] and also does not bear the risk of valuation changes for the remainder of the specified term. See Comments to Section 701(a) [35-8-808(1)].

A company will be member-managed unless it is designated as manager-managed under Section 203(a)(6) [subsection (1)(d)(i)]. Absent further designation in the articles, a company will be a member-managed at-will company. The designation of a limited liability company as either member- or manager-managed is important because it defines who are agents and have the apparent authority to bind the company under Section 301 [35-8-302]. In a member-managed company, the members have the agency authority to bind the company. In a manager-managed company only the managers have that authority. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements clarify that the agency structure of a limited liability company will not cause it to be taxed like a corporation. The agency designation relates only to agency and does not preclude members of a manager-managed company from participating in the actual management of company business. See Comments to Section 404(b) [35-8-307(2)].

35-8-204. Execution of documents.

Official Comments

Both a writing and a record may be signed. An electronic record is signed when a person adds a name to the record with the intention to authenticate the record. See Sections 101(16) ("record" definition) [35-8-102(27)] and 101(17) ("signed" definition) [35-8-102(28)].

Other provisions of this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] also provide for the filing of records with the filing office but do not require signing by the persons specified in clauses (1) to (3) [subsections (1)(a) through (1)(c)]. Those specific sections prevail.

35-8-205. Filing with secretary of state.

Official Comments

The definition and use of the term "record" permits filings with the filing office under this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] to conform to technological advances that have been adopted by the filing office. However, since Section 206(a) provides that the filing "must be in a medium permitted by the [Secretary of State]" [subsection (1) provides that the filing "conform to the filing requirements of this chapter"], the Act [Title 35, ch. 8] simply conforms to filing changes as they are adopted.

(a) is produced by a method of transmission of images in which the image is scanned at the transmitter, reconstructed at the receiving station, and duplicated on paper at the receiving station; and

(b) is legible and the same size as the original.

(2) During the 5-day period referred to in subsection (1), the recorded facsimile copy constitutes constructive notice for all purposes of the original document.

(3) If the original document is not received within 5 working days of receipt of the facsimile copy as provided in subsection (1), the filing of the facsimile copy is void"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 18, 1997.

35-8-208. Annual report for secretary of state.

Official Comments

Failure to deliver the annual report within 60 [140] days after its due date is a primary ground for administrative dissolution of the company under Section 809 [35-8-209]. See Comments to Sections 809 to 812 [35-8-209 and 35-8-911, now repealed, through 35-8-913].

Official Comments

Administrative dissolution is an effective enforcement mechanism for a variety of statutory obligations under this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] and it avoids the more expensive judicial dissolution process. When applicable, administrative dissolution avoids wasteful attempts to compel compliance by a company abandoned by its members.

Part 3
Relations of Members and Managers to Persons Dealing With Limited Liability Company

35-8-301. Agency power of members and managers.

Official Comments

Members of a member-managed and managers of manager-managed company, as agents of the firm, have the apparent authority to bind a company to third parties. Members of a manager-managed company are not as such agents of the firm and do not have the apparent authority, as members, to bind a company. Members and managers with apparent authority possess actual authority by implication unless the actual authority is restricted in an operating agreement. Apparent authority extends to acts for carrying on in the ordinary course the company's business and business of the kind carried on by the company. Acts beyond this scope bind the company only where supported by actual authority created before the act or ratified after the act.

Ordinarily, restrictions on authority in an operating agreement do not affect the apparent authority of members and managers to bind the company to third parties without notice of the restriction. However, the restriction may make a member or manager's conduct wrongful and create liability to the company for the breach. This rule is subject to three important exceptions. First, under Section 301(c) [35-8-702(1)], a limitation reflected in the articles of organization on the authority of any member or manager to sign and deliver an instrument affecting an interest in company real property is effective when filed, even to persons without knowledge of the agent's lack of authority. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements clarify that the agency structure of a limited liability company will not cause it to be taxed like a corporation. Secondly, under Section 703 [35-8-811], a dissociated member's apparent authority terminates two years after dissociation, even to persons without knowledge of the dissociation. Thirdly, under Section 704 [35-8-812], a dissociated member's apparent authority may be terminated earlier than the two years by filing a statement of dissociation. The statement is effective 90 days after filing, even to persons without knowledge of the filing. Together, these three provisions provide constructive knowledge to the world of the lack of apparent authority of an agent to bind the company.

35-8-304. Liability of members, managers, and series of members to third parties.

Official Comments

A member or manager, as an agent of the company, is not liable for the debts, obligations, and liabilities of the company simply because of the agency. A member or manager is responsible for acts or omissions to the extent those acts or omissions would be actionable in contract or tort against the member or manager if that person were acting in an individual capacity. Where a member or manager delegates or assigns the authority or duty to exercise appropriate company functions, the member or manager is ordinarily not personally liable for the acts or omissions of the officer, employee, or agent if the member or manager has complied with the duty of care set forth in Section 409(c) [35-8-310(3)].

Under Section 303(c) [subsection (3)], the usual liability shield may be waived, in whole or in part, provided the waiver is reflected in the articles of organization and the member has consented in writing to be bound by the waiver. The importance and unusual nature of the waiver consent requires that the consent be evidenced by a writing and not merely an unwritten record. See Comments to Section 205 [35-8-204]. New and important Internal Revenue Service annuouncements [sic] clarify that the owner liability structure of a limited liability company (other than a foreign limited liability company formed outside the United States) will not cause it to be taxed like a corporation.

Case Notes

Members of Limited Liability Companies Liable for Personal Acts Otherwise Actionable Under Contract or Tort Actions: The Whites entered into a construction contract with Longley for the construction of their home. Subsequently, Longley failed to build a house that could be occupied or salvaged. Longley argued that he could not be held liable under contract or tort as he had done business as a limited liability company. The Supreme Court held that the Montana Limited Liability Company Act and the Act's official comments made it clear that a member of a limited liability company was not liable solely on the basis of being a member but could be liable for personal actions that were in violation of contract or tort law. White v. Longley, 2010 MT 254, 358 Mont. 268, 244 P.3d 753, distinguished in Weaver v. Tri-County Implement, Inc., 2013 MT 309, 372 Mont. 267, 311 P.3d 808.

Service Upon Limited Liability Company Not Constituting Service Upon Individual Company Members — No Joinder of Member Solely for Executing on Judgment Against Company: Plaintiff obtained a judgment against a limited liability company, but when plaintiff discovered that the company had no assets to levy against, plaintiff moved to levy judgment against defendant personally. The motion was dismissed without prejudice, and plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Although defendant knew of the lawsuit involving the company, defendant was not separately served, and service upon the company did not constitute service upon the individual members of the company. Further, the District Court did not err in refusing to join defendant after judgment was rendered solely for the purpose of executing judgment because doing so would have deprived defendant of the due process right to notice and the opportunity to be heard. Ioerger v. Reiner, 2005 MT 155, 327 M 424, 114 P3d 1028 (2005), following S-W Co. v. Schwenk, 173 M 481, 568 P2d 145 (1977), Hadford v. 35-8-306. Limited liability company liability for member's or manager's conduct.

35-8-307. Management and voting.

Official Comments

In a member-managed company, each member has equal rights in the management and conduct of the company's business unless otherwise provided in an operating agreement. For example, an operating agreement may allocate voting rights based upon capital contributions rather than the subsection (a) [subsection (1)] per capita rule. Also, member disputes as to any matter relating to the company's business may be resolved by a majority of the members unless the matter relates to a matter specified in subsection (c) (unanimous consent required) [subsection (3)]. Regardless of how the members allocate management rights, each member is an agent of the company with the apparent authority to bind the company in the ordinary course of its business. See Comments to Section 301(a) [35-8-301(1)]. A member's right to participate in management terminates upon dissociation. See Section 603(b)(1) [35-8-805(2)(a)].

In a manager-managed company, the members, unless also managers, have no rights in the management and conduct of the company's business unless otherwise provided in an operating agreement. If there is more than one manager, manager disputes as to any matter relating to the company's business may be resolved by a majority of the managers unless the matter relates to a matter specified in subsection (c) (unanimous member consent required) [subsection (3)]. Managers must be designated, appointed, or elected by a majority of the members. A manager need not be a member and is an agent of the company with the apparent authority to bind the company in the ordinary course of its business. See Sections 101(10) [35-8-102(18)] and 301(b) [35-8-301(2)].

To promote clarity and certainty, subsection (c) [subsection (3)] specifies those exclusive matters requiring the unanimous consent of the members, whether the company is member- or manager-managed. For example, interim distributions, including redemptions, may not be made without the unanimous consent of all the members. Unless otherwise agreed, all other company matters are to be determined under the majority of members or managers rules of subsections (a) and (b) [subsections (1) and (2)].

Case Notes

Sufficient Evidence to Warrant Award of Damages and Costs for Interference in Winding Up of Partnership: The District Court awarded defendant Weiss damages and legal costs after finding that Cullinan, one of the partners in a limited liability company, acted arbitrarily and wrongfully interfered with the orderly winding up and dissolution of the company. The partner appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Under 35-8-809, expenses and attorney fees are payable if a party to the proceeding did not act in good faith. The District Court found that Cullinan denied and attempted to renegotiate an exclusive marketing agreement, attempted to prevent payment of partnership debts, obstructed another partner's attempts to obtain financing, and attempted to terminate a partnership escrow arrangement. These actions constituted sufficient evidence of arbitrary and vexatious conduct by Cullinan to warrant the award of damages and fees. The District Court also correctly determined that Cullinan failed to prove that Weiss had breached any fiduciary obligations owed to the company or to Cullinan as a member of the company. Bio-Septic Systems, LLC v. Weiss, 2002 MT 318, 313 M 136, 60 P3d 943 (2002).

35-8-310. General standards of member's and manager's conduct.

Official Comments

Under subsections (a), (c), and (h) [subsections (1), (3), and (8)], members and managers, and their delegatees [sic], owe to the company and to the other members and managers only the fiduciary duties of loyalty and care set forth in subsections (b) and (c) [subsections (2) and (3)] and the obligation of good faith and fair dealing set forth in subsection (d) [subsection (4)]. An operating agreement may not waive or eliminate the duties or obligation, but may, if not manifestly unreasonable, identify activities and determine standards for measuring the performance of them. See Section 103(b)(2) to (4) [35-8-109(2)(b) through (2)(d)].

Upon a member's dissociation, the duty to account for personal profits under subsection (b)(1) [subsection (2)(a)], the duty to refrain from acting as or representing adverse interests under subsection (b)(2) [subsection (2)(b)], and the duty of care under subsection (c) [subsection (3)] are limited to those derived from matters arising or events occurring before the dissociation unless the member participates in winding up the company's business. Also, the duty not to compete terminates upon dissociation. See Section 603(b)(3) and (b)(2) [35-8-805(2)(c) and (2)(b)]. However, a dissociated member is not free to use confidential company information after dissociation. For example, a dissociated member of a company may immediately compete with the company for new clients but must exercise care in completing on-going client transactions and must account to the company for any fees from the old clients on account of those transactions. Subsection (c) [subsection (3)] adopts a gross negligence standard for the duty of care, the standard actually used in most partnerships and corporations.

Subsection (b)(2) [subsection (2)(b)] prohibits a member from acting adversely or representing an adverse party to the company. The rule is based on agency principles and seeks to avoid the conflict of opposing interests in the mind of the member agent whose duty is to act for the benefit of the principal company. As reflected in subsection (f) [subsection (6)], the rule does not prohibit the member from dealing with the company other than as an adversary. A member may generally deal with the company under subsection (f) [subsection (6)] when the transaction is approved by the company.

Subsection (e) [subsection (5)] makes clear that a member does not violate the obligation of good faith under subsection (d) [subsection (4)] merely because the member's conduct furthers that member's own interest. For example, a member's refusal to vote for an interim distribution because of negative tax implications to that member does not violate that member's obligation of good faith to the other members. Likewise, a member may vote against a proposal by the company to open a shopping center that would directly compete with another shopping center in which the member owns an interest.

Case Notes

No Breach of Duty to Company by Repayment of Loans to Members Before Payment of Company Debts: On the morning of a concert sponsored by plaintiff company, several members loaned money to the company to pay the bands so the concert could proceed. After the concert, the members' loans were repaid from concert proceeds rather than paying a company debt to a bank, ultimately leaving the company insolvent. Some members of the company contended that this act constituted an unlawful distribution of company assets and that the members who authorized the loan repayments were personally liable to the company for the amounts that they caused to be paid to themselves. The District Court granted summary judgment to defendants, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Under 35-8-604, a company may not make distributions to members if the distributions render the company unable to pay its debts, which includes a repayment of capital contributions that a member made to the company. However, in this case, the amounts advanced to the company to salvage the concert were personal loans made in the ordinary course of company business, and 35-8-504 allows a company to reimburse members for money loaned to the company, so the company had both the obligation and the right to repay the members' loans. The company had more legitimate debt than it could pay, and the decision to repay the members' loans was simply a business decision. Even though the members who authorized the payment were acting in a managerial position, they were not liable for making a legitimate business decision to pay one creditor in preference to another. Lynes v. Helm, 2007 MT 226, 339 M 120, 168 P3d 651 (2007).

Part 4
Rights and Duties of Members and Managers

35-8-405. Records and information.

Official Comments

Recognizing the informality of many limited liability companies, subsection (a) [subsection (1)] does not require a company to maintain any records. In general, a company should maintain records necessary to enable members to determine their share of profits and losses and their rights on dissociation. If inadequate records are maintained to determine those and other critical rights, a member may maintain an action for an accounting under Section 410(a) [35-8-410(1)]. Normally, a company will maintain at least records required by state or federal authorities regarding tax and other filings.

The obligation to furnish access includes the obligation to insure that all records, if any, are accessible in intelligible form. For example, a company that switches computer systems has an obligation either to convert the records from the old system or retain at least one computer capable of accessing the records from the old system.

The right to inspect and copy records maintained is not conditioned on a member or former member's purpose or motive. However, an abuse of the access and copy right may create a remedy in favor of the other members as a violation of the requesting member or former member's obligation of good faith and fair dealing. See Section 409(d) [35-8-310(4)].

Although a company is not required to maintain any records under subsection (a) [subsection (1)], it is nevertheless subject to a disclosure duty to furnish specified information under subsection (b)(1) [subsection (3)]. A company must therefore furnish to members, without demand, information reasonably needed for members to exercise their rights and duties as members. A member's exercise of these duties justifies an unqualified right of access to the company's records. The member's right to company records may not be unreasonably restricted by the operating agreement. See Section 103(b)(1) [35-8-109(3)(a)].

35-8-410. Actions by members.

Official Comments

During the existence of the company, members have under this section access to the courts to resolve claims against the company and other members, leaving broad judicial discretion to fashion appropriate legal remedies. A member pursues only that member's claim against the company or another member under this section. Article 11 [35-8-1104] governs a member's derivative pursuit of a claim on behalf of the company.

A member may recover against the company and the other members under subsection (a)(3) [subsection (1)(c)] for personal injuries or damage to the member's property caused by another member. One member's negligence is therefore not imputed to bar another member's action.

35-8-411. Continuation of term company after expiration of specified term.

Official Comments

A term company will generally dissolve upon the expiration of its term unless either its articles are amended before the expiration of the original specified term to provide for an additional specified term or the members or managers simply continue the company as an at-will company under this section. Amendment of the articles specifying an additional term requires the unanimous consent of the members. See Section 404(c)(3) [35-8-307(3)(c)]. Therefore, any member has the right to block the amendment. Absent an amendment to the articles, a company may only be continued under subsection (b) [subsection (2)] as an at-will company. The decision to continue a term company as an at-will company does not require the unanimous consent of the members and is treated as an ordinary business matter with disputes resolved by a simple majority vote of either the members or managers. See Section 404 [35-8-307]. In that case, subsection (b) [subsection (2)] provides that the members' conduct amends or becomes part of an operating agreement to "continue" the company as an at-will company. The amendment to the operating agreement does not alter the rights of creditors who suffer detrimental reliance because the company does not liquidate after the expiration of its specified term. See Section 203(c)(2) [35-8-202(3)(b)].

Preexisting operating-agreement provisions continue to control the relationship of the members under subsection (a) [subsection (1)] except to the extent inconsistent with the rights and duties of members of an at-will company with an operating agreement containing the same provisions. However, the members could agree in advance that, if the company's business continues after the expiration of its specified term, the company continues as a company with a new specified term or that the provisions of its operating agreement survive the expiration of the specified term.

35-8-501. Contributions to capital.

Official Comments

Unless otherwise provided in an operating agreement, admission of a member and the nature and valuation of a would-be member's contribution are matters requiring the consent of all of the other members. See Section 404(c)(7) [35-8-307(3)(g)]. An agreement to contribute to a company is controlled by the operating agreement and therefore may not be created or modified without amending that agreement through the unanimous consent of all the members, including the member to be bound by the new contribution terms. Official Comments

An obligation need not be in writing to be enforceable. Given the informality of some companies, a writing requirement may frustrate reasonable expectations of members based on a clear oral agreement. Obligations may be compromised with the consent of all of the members under Section 404(c)(5) [35-8-307(3)(e)], but the compromise is generally effective only among the consenting members. Company creditors are bound by the compromise only as provided in Section 402(b) [subsection (3)(b)].

35-8-504. Member's and manager's rights to payments and reimbursement.

Official Comments

The presence of a liability shield will ordinarily prevent a member or manager from incurring personal liability on behalf of the company in the ordinary course of the company's business. Where a member of a member-managed or a manager of a manager-managed company incurs such liabilities, Section 403(a) [subsection (1)] provides that the company must indemnify the member or manager where that person acted in the ordinary course of the company's business or the preservation of its property. A member or manager is therefore entitled to indemnification only if the act was within the member or manager's actual authority. A member or manager is therefore not entitled to indemnification for conduct that violates the duty of care set forth in Section 409(c) [35-8-310(3)] or for tortious conduct against a third party. Since members of a manager-managed company do not possess the apparent authority to bind the company, it would be more unusual for such a member to incur a liability for indemnification in the ordinary course of the company's business.

Case Notes

No Breach of Duty to Company by Repayment of Loans to Members Before Payment of Company Debts: On the morning of a concert sponsored by plaintiff company, several members loaned money to the company to pay the bands so the concert could proceed. After the concert, the members' loans were repaid from concert proceeds rather than paying a company debt to a bank, ultimately leaving the company insolvent. Some members of the company contended that this act constituted an unlawful distribution of company assets and that the members who authorized the loan repayments were personally liable to the company for the amounts that they caused to be paid to themselves. The District Court granted summary judgment to defendants, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Under 35-8-604, a company may not make distributions to members if the distributions render the company unable to pay its debts, which includes a repayment of capital contributions that a member made to the company. However, in this case, the amounts advanced to the company to salvage the concert were personal loans made in the ordinary course of company business, and this section allows a company to reimburse members for money loaned to the company, so the company had both the obligation and the right to repay the members' loans. The company had more legitimate debt than it could pay, and the decision to repay the members' loans was simply a business decision. Even though the members who authorized the payment were acting in a managerial position, they were not liable for making a legitimate business decision to pay one creditor in preference to another. Lynes v. Helm, 2007 MT 226, 339 M 120, 168 P3d 651 (2007).

Part 6
Distributions

35-8-601. Sharing of distributions.

Official Comments

Recognizing the informality of many limited liability companies, this section creates a simple default rule regarding interim distributions. Any interim distributions made must be in equal shares and approved by all members. See Section 404(c)(6) [35-8-307(3)(f)]. The rule assumes that: profits will be shared equally; some distributions will constitute a return of contributions that should be shared equally rather than a distribution of profits; and property contributors should have the right to veto any distribution that threatens their return of contributions on liquidation. In the simple case where the members make equal contributions of property or equal contributions of services, those assumptions avoid the necessity of maintaining a complex capital account or determining profits. Where some members contribute services and others property, the unanimous vote necessary to approve interim distributions protects against unwanted distributions of contributions to service contributors. Consistently, Section 408(a) [35-8-405(1)] does not require the company to maintain a separate account for each member, the Act [Title 35, ch. 8] does not contain a default rule for allocating profits and losses, and Section 806(b) [35-8-905(3)] requires that liquidating distributions to members be made in equal shares after the return of contributions not previously returned. See Comments to Section 806(b) [35-8-905(3)].

Section 405(c) [35-8-606] governs distributions declared or made when the company was solvent. Section 406 [35-8-604] governs distributions declared or made when the company is insolvent.

Dissolution of Limited Liability Company — Member Not Entitled to Share in Distribution of Judgment Against Member: Wallace owned about 72% of a limited liability company. A dispute arose between the company and Wallace, and the company was granted a $2.5 million judgment against Wallace. The judgment was to be used to pay current company debts and liabilities, including any owed to Wallace, and the remainder was to be distributed to remaining members in proportion to their ownership. Wallace contended that as a remaining member, he was entitled to his proportional share of the distribution. The District Court held that Wallace would not be allowed to share in the distribution, and Wallace appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. Wallace was considered a remaining member for purposes of receiving payment of company debts owed to him, but considering Wallace to be a remaining member for purposes of sharing in the distribution of the punitive award against him would have allowed Wallace to profit from his own wrong, and the District Court did not err in so concluding. Wallace v. Hayes, 2008 MT 248, 344 M 523, 191 P3d 365 (2008).

Agreement Regarding Distribution of Partnership Income Based on Partners' Respective Work — Equal Shares Not Required: Members of a partnership, including Cullinan, agreed to distribute the partnership income based on the hours that each partner worked. Under the agreement, partner Weiss was to receive compensation for working full time, and the other partners were to receive compensation for 2 hours of work a day. Weiss received monthly payments, which were deducted from the amount owed to Weiss from the partnership, and the other partners kept track of any hours above 2 hours a day that they worked in order to receive compensation. The District Court adopted this valuation method, pursuant to the agreement, and Cullinan appealed on grounds that the agreement violated this section, which requires equal shares in any partnership distribution unless the partners agree otherwise. However, Cullinan's own documentation showed that he agreed to the compensation system and did not object to the distribution offered by Weiss, so the District Court properly relied on Weiss's valuation method. 35-8-604. Distributions.

Official Comments

This section establishes the validity of company distributions, which in turn determines the potential liability of members and managers for improper distributions under Section 407 [35-8-605]. Distributions are improper if the company is insolvent under subsection (a) [subsection (1)] at the time the distribution is measured under subsection (c) [subsection (3)]. In recognition of the informality of many limited liability companies, the solvency determination under subsection (b) [subsection (2)] may be made on the basis of a fair valuation or other method reasonable under the circumstances.

The application of the equity insolvency and balance sheet tests present special problems in the context of the purchase, redemption, or other acquisition of a company's distributional interests. Special rules establish the time of measurement of such transfers. Under Section 406(c)(1) [subsection (3)(a)], the time for measuring the effect of a distribution to purchase a distributional interest is the date of payment. The company may make payment either by transferring property or incurring a debt to transfer property in the future. In the latter case, subsection (c)(1) [subsection (3)(a)] establishes a clear rule that the legality of the distribution is tested when the debt is actually incurred, not later when the debt is actually paid. Under Section 406(e) [subsection (5)], indebtedness is not considered a liability for purposes of subsection (a) [subsection (1)] if the terms of the indebtedness itself provide that payments can be made only if and to the extent that a payment of a distribution could then be made under this section. The effect makes the holder of the indebtedness junior to all other creditors but senior to members in their capacity as members.

35-8-605. Liability upon wrongful distribution.

Official Comments

Whenever members or managers fail to meet the standards of conduct of Section 409 [35-8-310] and vote for or assent to an unlawful distribution, they are personally liable to the company for the portion of the distribution that exceeds the maximum amount that could have been lawfully distributed. The recovery remedy under this section extends only to the company, not the company's creditors. Under subsection (a) [subsection (1)], members and managers are not liable for an unlawful distribution provided their vote in favor of the distribution satisfies the duty of care of Section 409(c) [35-8-310(3)].

Subsection (a) [subsection (1)] creates personal liability in favor of the company against members or managers who approve an unlawful distribution for the entire amount of a distribution that could not be lawfully distributed. Subsection (b) [subsection (2)] creates personal liability against only members who knowingly received the unlawful distribution, but only in the amount measured by the portion of the actual distribution received that was not lawfully made. Members who both vote for or assent to an unlawful distribution and receive a portion or all of the distribution will be liable, at the election of the company, under either but not both subsections.

A member or manager who is liable under subsection (a) [subsection (1)] may seek contribution under subsection (c)(1) [subsection (3)(a)] from other members and managers who also voted for or assented to the same distribution and may also seek recoupment under subsection (c)(2) [subsection (3)(b)] from members who received the distribution, but only if they accepted the payments knowing they were unlawful.

The two-year statute of limitations of subsection (d) [subsection (4)] is measured from the date of the distribution. The date of the distribution is determined under Section 406(c) [35-8-604(3)].

Official Comments

Members have no property interest in property owned by a limited liability company. A distributional interest is personal property and is defined under Section 101(6) [35-8-102(9)] as a member's interest in distributions only and does not include the member's broader rights to participate in management under Section 404 [35-8-307] and to inspect company records under Section 408 [35-8-405].

Under Section 405(a) [35-8-601], distributions are allocated in equal shares unless otherwise provided in an operating agreement. Whenever it is desirable to allocate distributions in proportion to contributions rather than per capita, certification may be useful to reduce valuation issues. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements clarify that certification of a limited liability company will not cause it to be taxed like a corporation.

35-8-707. Transfer of distributional interest — rights of transferee.

Official Comments

Under Sections 501(b) [35-8-703(2)] and 502 [subsection (1)], the only interest a member may freely transfer is that member's distributional interest. A member's transfer of all of a distributional interest constitutes an event of dissociation. See Section 601(3) [35-8-803(3)]. A transfer of less than all of a member's distributional interest is not an event of dissociation. A member ceases to be a member upon the transfer of all that member's distributional interest and that transfer is also an event of dissociation under Section 601(3) [35-8-803(3)]. Relating the event of dissociation to the member's transfer of all of the member's distributional interest avoids the need for the company to track potential future dissociation events associated with a member no longer financially interested in the company. Also, all the remaining members may expel a member upon the transfer of "substantially all" the member's distributional interest. The expulsion is an event of dissociation under Section 601(5)(ii) [38-8-803(5)(b)].

The only interest a member may freely transfer is the member's distributional interest. A transferee may acquire the remaining rights of a member only by being admitted as a member of the company by all of the remaining members. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements clarify that the transferability of membership interests of a limited liability company in excess of these default rules will not cause it to be taxed like a corporation. In many cases a limited liability company will be organized and operated with only a few members. These default rules were chosen in the interest of preserving the right of existing members in such companies to determine whether a transferee will become a member.

A transferee not admitted as a member is not entitled to participate in management, require access to information, or inspect or copy company records. The only rights of a transferee are to receive the distributions the transferor would otherwise be entitled, receive a limited statement of account, and seek a judicial dissolution under Section 801(a)(5) [35-8-902(2)(a)].

Subsection (e) [subsection (6)] sets forth the rights of a transferee of an existing member. Although the rights of a dissociated member to participate in the future management of the company parallel the rights of a transferee, a dissociated member retains additional rights that accrued from that person's membership such as the right to enforce Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812] purchase rights. Part 8
Admission and Withdrawal of Members

35-8-803. Events causing member's dissociation.

Official Comments

The term "dissociation" refers to the change in the relationships among the dissociated member, the company and the other members caused by a member's ceasing to be associated in the carrying on of the company's business. Member dissociation from either an at-will or term company, whether member- or manager-managed is not an event of dissolution of the company unless otherwise specified in an operating agreement. See Section 801(a)(1) [35-8-901(1)(a)]. However, member dissociation will generally trigger the obligation of the company to purchase the dissociated member's interest under Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812].

A member may be expelled from the company under paragraph (5)(ii) [subsection (5)(b)] by the unanimous vote of the other members upon a transfer of "substantially all" of the member's distributional interest other than for a transfer as security for a loan. A transfer of "all" of the member's distributional interest is an event of dissociation under paragraph (3) [subsection (3)].

Although a member is dissociated upon death, the effect of the dissociation where the company does not dissolve depends upon whether the company is at-will or term. Only the decedent's distributional interest transfers to the decedent's estate which does not acquire the decedent member's management rights. See Section 603(b)(1) [35-8-805(2)(a)]. Unless otherwise agreed, if the company was at-will, the estate's distributional interest must be purchased by the company at fair value determined at the date of death. However, if a term company, the estate and its transferees continue only as the owner of the distributional interest with no management rights until the expiration of the specified term that existed on the date of death. At the expiration of that term, the company must purchase the interest of a dissociated member if the company continues for an additional term by amending its articles or simply continues as an at-will company. See Sections 411 [35-8-411] and 701(a)(2) [35-8-808(1)(b)] and Comments. Before that time, the estate and its transferees have the right to make application for a judicial dissolution of the company under Section 801(b)(5) [35-8-902(2)(a)] as successors in interest to a dissociated member. See Comments to Sections 801, 411, and 701 [35-8-901, 35-8-902, 35-8-411, and 35-8-808]. Where the members have allocated management rights on the basis of contributions rather than simply the number of members, a member's death will result in a transfer of management rights to the remaining members on a proportionate basis. This transfer of rights may be avoided by a provision in an operating agreement extending the Section 701(a)(1) [35-8-808(1)(a)] at-will purchase right to a decedent member of a term company.

Case Notes

Valuation of Estate's Interest in Limited Liability Company Upheld — Award of Interest, Attorney Fees, and Costs Reversed: The District Court properly valued the estate's interest in a limited liability company at the date of trial, rather than at the date of a member's death, because the deceased member's personal representative and the surviving member agreed to continue operating the business instead of dissolving it pursuant to the business's operating agreement. The District Court improperly determined the interest rate pursuant to 25-9-205 because the operating agreement contained a specific provision regarding interest and improperly relied on an indemnification clause contained in the operating agreement in awarding unsupported attorney fees. In addition, the District Court erred in awarding costs to the estate because the estate filed its request for costs 4 months after the deadline passed. Pastimes, LLC v. Clavin, 2012 MT 29, 364 Mont. 109, 274 P.3d 714.

35-8-804. Member's power to dissociate — wrongful dissociation.

Official Comments

A member has the power to withdraw from both an at-will company and a term company although the effects of the withdrawal are remarkably different. See Comments to Section 601

[35-8-803]. At a minimum, the exercise of a power to withdraw enables members to terminate their continuing duties of loyalty and care. See Section 603(b)(2) to (3) [35-8-805(2)(b) and (2)(c)].

A member's power to withdraw by express will may be eliminated by an operating agreement. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements clarify that alteration of a member's power to withdraw will not cause the limited liability company to be taxed like a corporation. An operating agreement may eliminate a member's power to withdraw by express will to promote the business continuity of an at-will company by removing member's right to force the company to purchase the member's distributional interest. See Section 701(a)(1) [35-8-808(1)(a)]. However, such a member retains the ability to seek a judicial dissolution of the company. See Section 801(a)(4) [35-8-902(1)].

If a member's power to withdraw by express will is not eliminated in an operating agreement, the withdrawal may nevertheless be made wrongful under subsection (b) [subsection (2)]. All dissociations, including withdrawal by express will, may be made wrongful under subsection (b)(1) [subsection (2)(a)] in both an at-will and term company by the inclusion of a provision in an operating agreement. Even where an operating agreement does not eliminate the power to withdraw by express will or make any dissociation wrongful, the dissociation of a member of a term company for the reasons specified under subsection (b)(2) [subsection (2)(b)] is wrongful. The member is liable to the company and other members for damages caused by a wrongful dissociation under subsection (c) [subsection (3)] and, under subsection (d) [subsection (4)], the damages may be offset against all distributions otherwise due the member after the dissociation. Section 701(f) [35-8-808(6)] provides a similar rule permitting damages for wrongful dissociation to be offset against any company purchase of the member's distributional interest.

35-8-805. Effect of member's dissociation.

Official Comments

Member dissociation is not an event of dissolution of a company unless otherwise specified in an operating agreement. See Section 801(a)(1) [35-8-901(1)(a)]. Dissociation from an at-will company that does not dissolve the company causes the dissociated member's distributional interest to be immediately purchased under Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812]. See Comments to Sections 602 [35-8-804] and 603 [this section]. Dissociation from a term company that does not dissolve the company does not cause the dissociated member's distributional interest to be purchased under Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812] until the expiration of the specified term that existed on the date of dissociation.

Subsection (b)(1) [subsection (2)(a)] provides that a dissociated member forfeits the right to participate in the future conduct of the company's business. Dissociation does not however forfeit that member's right to enforce the Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812] rights that accrue by reason of the dissociation. Similarly, where dissociation occurs by death, the decedent member's successors in interest may enforce that member's Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812] rights. See and compare Comments to Section 503(e) [35-8-707(5)].

Dissociation terminates the member's right to participate in management, including the member's actual authority to act for the company under Section 301 [35-8-301], and begins the two-year period after which a member's apparent authority conclusively ends. See Comments to Section 703 [35-8-811]. Dissociation also terminates a member's continuing duties of loyalty and care, except with regard to continuing transactions, to the company and other members unless the member participates in winding up the company's business. See Comments to Section 409 [35-8-310].

35-8-808. Company purchase of distributional interest.

Official Comments

This section sets forth default rules regarding an otherwise mandatory company purchase of a distributional interest. Even though a dissociated member's rights to participate in the future management of the company are equivalent to those of a transferee of a member, the dissociation does not forfeit that member's right to enforce the Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812] purchase right. Similarly, if the dissociation occurs by reason of death, the decedent member's successors in interest may enforce the Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812] rights. See Comments to Sections 503(e) [35-8-707(5)] and 603(b)(1) [35-8-805(2)(a)].

An at-will company must purchase a dissociated member's distributional interest under subsection (a)(1) [subsection (1)(a)] when that member's dissociation does not result in a dissolution of the company under Section 801(a)(1) [35-8-901(1)(a)]. The purchase price is equal to the fair value of the interest determined as of the date of dissociation. Any damages for wrongful dissociation must be offset against the purchase price.

Dissociation from a term company does not require an immediate purchase of the member's interest but the operating agreement may specify that dissociation is an event of dissolution. See Section 801(a)(1) [35-8-901(1)(a)]. A term company must only purchase the dissociated member's distributional interest under subsection (a)(2) [subsection (1)(b)] on the expiration of the specified term that existed on the date of the member's dissociation. The purchase price is equal to the fair value of the interest determined as of the date of the expiration of that specified term. Any damages for wrongful dissociation must be offset against the purchase price.

The valuation dates differ between subsections (a)(1) and (a)(2) [subsections (1)(a) and (1)(b)] purchases. The former is valued on the date of member dissociation whereas the latter is valued on the date of the expiration of the specified term that existed on the date of dissociation. A subsection (a)(2) [subsection (1)(b)] dissociated member therefore assumes the risk of loss between the date of dissociation and the expiration of the then stated specified term. See Comments to Section 801 (dissociated member may file application to dissolve company under Section 801(a)(4) [35-8-902(1)]) [35-8-901 and 35-8-902].

The default valuation standard is fair value. See Comments to Section 702 [35-8-809]. An operating agreement may fix a method or formula for determining the purchase price and the terms of payment. The purchase right may be modified. For example, an operating agreement may eliminate a member's power to withdraw from an at-will company which narrows the dissociation events contemplated under subsection (a)(1) [subsection (1)(b)]. See Comments to Section 602(a) [35-8-804(1)]. However, a provision in an operating agreement providing for complete forfeiture of the purchase right may be unenforceable where the power to dissociate has not also been eliminated. See Section 104(a) [35-8-110(1)].

The company must deliver a purchase offer to the dissociated member within 30 days after the date determined under subsection (a) [subsection (1)]. The offer must be accompanied by information designed to enable the dissociated member to evaluate the fairness of the offer. The subsection (b)(3) [subsection (2)(c)] explanation of how the offer price was calculated need not be elaborate. For example, a mere statement of the basis of the calculation, such as "book value," may be sufficient.

The company and the dissociated member must reach an agreement on the purchase price and terms within 120 days after the date determined under subsection (a) [subsection (1)]. Otherwise, the dissociated member may file suit within another 120 days to enforce the purchase under subsection (d) [subsection (4)]. The court will then determine the fair value and terms of purchase under subsection (e) [subsection 5]. See Section 702 [35-8-809]. The member's lawsuit is not available under subsection (c) [subsection (3)] if the parties have previously agreed to price and terms in an operating agreement.

35-8-809. Court action to determine fair value of distributional interest.

Official Comments

The default valuation standard is fair value. Under this broad standard, a court is free to determine the fair value of a distributional interest on a fair market, liquidation, or any other method deemed appropriate under the circumstances. A fair market value standard is not used because it is too narrow, often inappropriate, and assumes a fact not contemplated by this section — a willing buyer and a willing seller.

The court has discretion under subsection (a)(2) [subsection (1)(b)] to include in its order any conditions the court deems necessary to safeguard the interests of the company and the dissociated member or transferee. The discretion may be based on the financial and other needs of the parties.

If the purchase is not consummated or the purchaser defaults, the dissociated member or transferee may make application for dissolution of the company under subsection (c) [subsection (3)]. The court may deny the petition for good cause but the proceeding affords the company an opportunity to be heard on the matter and avoid dissolution. See Comments to Section 801(a)(4) [35-8-902(1)].

The power of the court to award all costs and attorney's fees incurred in the suit under subsection (d) [subsection (4)] is an incentive for both parties to act in good faith. See Section 701(c) [35-8-808(3)].

Case Notes

Valuation of Estate's Interest in Limited Liability Company Upheld — Award of Interest, Attorney Fees, and Costs Reversed: The District Court properly valued the estate's interest in a limited liability company at the date of trial, rather than at the date of a member's death, because the deceased member's personal representative and the surviving member agreed to continue operating the business instead of dissolving it pursuant to the business's operating agreement. The District Court improperly determined the interest rate pursuant to 25-9-205 because the operating agreement contained a specific provision regarding interest and improperly relied on an indemnification clause contained in the operating agreement in awarding unsupported attorney fees. In addition, the District Court erred in awarding costs to the estate because the estate filed its request for costs 4 months after the deadline passed. Pastimes, LLC v. Clavin, 2012 MT 29, 364 Mont. 109, 274 P.3d 714.

Responsibility for Prototype Correctly Assigned to Partner Who Assumed Ownership: In winding up a partnership, the District Court determined that an experimental prototype belonged to partner Cullinan and assigned to Cullinan the responsibility of maintaining the unit. Cullinan appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Cullinan assumed ownership of the device after requesting the unit and paid for its storage. Weiss, the other interested partner, did not object to Cullinan's ownership. Absent an objection from Weiss, the District Court simply granted Cullinan's request for ownership of the prototype, and Cullinan could not then complain of the responsibility attached to the property interest in the unit. Bio-Septic Systems, LLC v. Weiss, 2002 MT 318, 313 M 136, 60 P3d 943 (2002).

Sufficient Evidence to Warrant Award of Damages and Costs for Interference in Winding Up of Partnership: The District Court awarded defendant Weiss damages and legal costs after finding that Cullinan, one of the partners in a limited liability company, acted arbitrarily and wrongfully interfered with the orderly winding up and dissolution of the company. The partner appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Under this section, expenses and attorney fees are payable if a party to the proceeding did not act in good faith. The District Court found that Cullinan denied and attempted to renegotiate an exclusive marketing agreement, attempted to prevent payment of partnership debts, obstructed another partner's attempts to obtain financing, and attempted to terminate a partnership escrow arrangement. These actions constituted sufficient evidence of arbitrary and vexatious conduct by Cullinan to warrant the award of damages and fees. The District Court also correctly determined that Cullinan failed to prove that Weiss had breached any fiduciary obligations owed to the company or to Cullinan as a member of the company. Bio-Septic Systems, LLC v. Weiss, 2002 MT 318, 313 M 136, 60 P3d 943 (2002).

35-8-811. Dissociated member's power to bind limited liability company.

Official Comments

Member dissociation will not dissolve the company unless otherwise specified in an operating agreement. See Section 801(a)(1) [35-8-901(1)(a)]. A dissociated member of a member-managed company does not have actual authority to act for the company. See Section 603(b)(1) [35-8-805(2)(a)]. Under Section 301(a) [35-8-301(1)], a dissociated member of a member-managed company has apparent authority to bind the company in ordinary course transactions except as to persons who knew or had notice of the dissociation. This section modifies that rule by requiring the person to show reasonable reliance on the member's status as a member provided a Section 704 [35-8-812] statement has not been filed within the previous 90 days. See also Section 804 (power to bind after dissolution) [35-8-904].

Part 9
Dissolution

35-8-901. Dissolution.

Official Comments

The dissolution rules of this section are mostly default rules and may be modified by an operating agreement. However, an operating agreement may not modify or eliminate the dissolution events specified in subsection (a)(3) (illegal business) [35-8-901(1)(c)] or subsection (a)(4) (member application) [35-8-902(1)]. See Section 103(b)(6) [35-8-109(3)(f)].

The relationship between member dissociation and company dissolution is set forth under subsection (a)(1) [35-8-901(1)(a)]. Unless member dissociation is specified as an event of dissolution in the operating agreement, such dissociation does not dissolve the company. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements clarify that the failure of member dissociation to cause or threaten dissolution of a limited liability company will not cause the company to be taxed like a corporation.

A member or dissociated member whose interest is not required to be purchased by the company under Section 701 [35-8-808] may make application under subsection (a)(4) [35-8-902(1)] for the involuntary dissolution of both an at-will company and a term company. A transferee may make application under subsection (a)(5) [35-8-902(2)]. A transferee's application right, but not that of a member or dissociated member, may be modified by an operating agreement. See Section 103(b)(6) [35-8-109(3)(f)]. A dissociated member is not treated as a transferee for purposes of an application under subsections (a)(4) and (a)(5) [35-8-902 (1) and (2)]. See Section 603(b)(1) [35-8-805(2)(a)]. For example, this affords reasonable protection to a dissociated member of a term company to make application under subsection (a)(4) [35-8-902(1)] before the expiration of the term that existed at the time of dissociation. For purposes of a subsection (a)(4) [35-8-902(1)] application, a dissociated member includes a successor in interest, e.g., surviving spouse. See Comments to Section 601 [35-8-803].

The liability shield continues in effect for the winding up period because the legal existence of the company continues under subsection (a) [35-8-901(2)]. The company is terminated on the filing of articles of termination. See Section 805 [35-8-906].

Judicial Dissolution of LLC Proper During Summary Judgment — Uncontested Facts Sufficient: The District Court relied on four factors in 35-8-901 and ordered judicial dissolution of a limited liability company (LLC) through a summary judgment proceeding. On appeal the respondents challenged the petitioners' motives for seeking dissolution and argued that the petitioners failed to pay their initial contribution to the LLC. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court and determined that the issues that were raised by the respondents were immaterial issues to raise an issue of fact. In summary judgment, material facts are identified by looking at the substantive law governing the claim, and there were enough uncontested material facts for the District Court to find grounds for dissolution pursuant to 35-8-901. Gordon v. Kuzara, 2012 MT 206, 366 Mont. 243, 286 P.3d 895.

Valuation of Estate's Interest in Limited Liability Company Upheld — Award of Interest, Attorney Fees, and Costs Reversed: The District Court properly valued the estate's interest in a limited liability company at the date of trial, rather than at the date of a member's death, because the deceased member's personal representative and the surviving member agreed to continue operating the business instead of dissolving it pursuant to the business's operating agreement. The District Court improperly determined the interest rate pursuant to 25-9-205 because the operating agreement contained a specific provision regarding interest and improperly relied on an indemnification clause contained in the operating agreement in awarding unsupported attorney fees. 35-8-902. Judicial dissolution.

Official Comments

In the case of applications under subsections (a)(4) and (a)(5) [35-8-902(1) and (2)], the applicant has the burden of proving either the existence of one or more of the circumstances listed under subsection (a)(4) [35-8-902(1)] or that it is equitable to wind up the company's business under subsection (a)(5) [35-8-902(2)]. Proof of the existence of one or more of the circumstances in subsection (a)(4) [35-8-902(1)], may be the basis of a subsection (a)(5) [35-8-902(2)] application. Even where the burden of proof is met, the court has the discretion to order relief other than the dissolution of the company. Examples include an accounting, a declaratory judgment, a distribution, the purchase of the distributional interest of the applicant or another member, or the appointment of a receiver. See Section 410 [35-8-410].

A court has the discretion to dissolve a company under subsection (a)(4)(i) [35-8-902(1)(a)] when the company has a very poor financial record that is not likely to improve. In this instance, dissolution is an alternative to placing the company in bankruptcy. A court may dissolve a company under subsections (a)(4)(ii), (a)(4)(iii), and (a)(4)(iv) [35-8-902(1)(b) through (1)(d)] for serious and protracted misconduct by one or more members. Subsection (a)(4)(v) [35-8-902(1)(e)] provides a specific remedy for an improper squeeze-out of a member.

In determining whether and what type of relief to order under subsections (a)(4) and (a)(5) [35-8-902(1) and (2)] involuntary dissolution suits, a court should take into account other rights and remedies of the applicant. For example, a court should not grant involuntary dissolution of an at-will company if the applicant member has the right to dissociate and force the company to purchase that member's distributional interest under Sections 701 [35-8-808] and 702 [35-8-809]. In other cases, involuntary dissolution or some other remedy such as a buy-out might be appropriate where, for example, one or more members have (i) engaged in fraudulent or unconscionable conduct, (ii) improperly expelled a member seeking an unfair advantage of a provision in an operating agreement that provides for a significantly lower price on expulsion than would be payable in the event of voluntary dissociation, or (iii) engaged in serious misconduct and the applicant member is a member of a term company and would not have a right to have the company purchase that member's distributional interest upon dissociation until the expiration of the company's specified term.

Compiler's Comments

Motion to Amend Answer Properly Denied — Counterclaims Subject to Arbitration Agreement: The District Court denied the respondents' motion for leave to file an amended answer under Rule 15(a), M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20), that would have added tort counterclaims to a limited liability company (LLC) dissolution proceeding. In denying the motion, the District Court reasoned that the LLC operating agreement required binding arbitration to settle disputes of this nature and that allowing the counterclaims would result in additional claims, protracted discovery, and additional delay while causing prejudice and detriment to the petitioners. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the District Court and determined that the counterclaims would have been legally insufficient and futile based on the arbitration clause in the operating agreement. Gordon v. Kuzara, 2012 MT 206, 366 Mont. 243, 286 P.3d 895, distinguishing Gordon v. Kuzara, 2010 MT 275, 358 Mont. 432, 245 P.3d 37.

Dissolution of Limited Liability Company Not Subject to Arbitration Agreement: The Gordons filed an application with the District Court for judicial dissolution of a limited liability company (LLC) pursuant to this section. Kuzara, a managing member of the LLC, claimed that dissolution was subject to arbitration because the operating agreement of the LLC contained an arbitration clause. Citing Georgia Rehab. Ctr., Inc. v. Newnan Hosp., 658 S.E.2d 737 (Ga. 2008) and River Links at Deer Creek, LLC v. Melz, 108 S.W.3d 855 (Tenn. App. 2002), the Montana Supreme Court held that since the parties had not agreed in the operating agreement to subject the winding up of the affairs of the LLC to arbitration, the Supreme Court would not require it. The fact that the District Court looked to provisions of the operating agreement in order to determine whether the winding up of the affairs of the LLC was appropriate did not change the nature of the Gordons' petition as one seeking to end the affairs of the LLC pursuant to statute. Gordon v. Kuzara, 2010 MT 275, 358 Mont. 432, 245 P.3d 37, distinguished in Gordon v. Kuzara, 2012 MT 206, 366 Mont. 243, 286 P.3d 895.

Dissolution of Limited Liability Company — Member Not Entitled to Share in Distribution of Judgment Against Member: Wallace owned about 72% of a limited liability company. A dispute arose between the company and Wallace, and the company was granted a $2.5 million judgment against Wallace. The judgment was to be used to pay current company debts and liabilities, including any owed to Wallace, and the remainder was to be distributed to remaining members in proportion to their ownership. Wallace contended that as a remaining member, he was entitled to his proportional share of the distribution. The District Court held that Wallace would not be allowed to share in the distribution, and Wallace appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. Wallace was considered a remaining member for purposes of receiving payment of company debts owed to him, but considering Wallace to be a remaining member for purposes of sharing in the distribution of the punitive award against him would have allowed Wallace to profit from his own wrong, and the District Court did not err in so concluding. Wallace v. Hayes, 2008 MT 248, 344 M 523, 191 P3d 365 (2008).

Dissolution of Limited Liability Company — Member Not Entitled to Share in Distribution of Judgment Against Member: Wallace owned about 72% of a limited liability company. A dispute arose between the company and Wallace, and the company was granted a $2.5 million judgment against Wallace. The judgment was to be used to pay current company debts and liabilities, including any owed to Wallace, and the remainder was to be distributed to remaining members in proportion to their ownership. Wallace contended that as a remaining member, he was entitled to his proportional share of the distribution. 35-8-906. Articles of termination.

Official Comments

The termination of legal existence also terminates the company's liability shield. See Comments to Section 802 (liability shield continues in effect during winding up) [35-8-901(2) and (3)]. It also ends the company's responsibility to file an annual report. See Section 211 [35-8-208].

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 302 deleted former introductory clause that read: "Upon the dissolution and the commencement of winding up of the limited liability company, articles of dissolution must be filed in the office of the secretary of state and must set forth"; inserted (1) concerning termination of existence; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) the date of filing of its articles of organization and all amendments to the articles"; in (1)(b) and (1)(c) substituted "termination" for "dissolution"; deleted former (5) that read: "(5) any other information that the members or managers filing the articles determine necessary"; in (1)(d) after "dissolution" inserted "or termination"; inserted (1)(f) concerning date; inserted (1)(g) concerning termination of legal existence; inserted (2) concerning filing of articles of termination; and made minor changes in style. 35-8-908. Known claims against dissolved or terminated limited liability companies.

Official Comments

A known claim will be barred when the company provides written notice to a claimant that a claim must be filed with the company no later than at least 120 days after receipt of the written notice and the claimant fails to file the claim. If the claim is timely received but is rejected by the company, the claim is nevertheless barred unless the claimant files suit to enforce the claim within 90 days after the receipt of the notice of rejection. A claim described in subsection (d) [subsection (4)] is not a "known" claim and is governed by Section 808 [35-8-909]. This section does not extend any other applicable statutes of limitation. See Section 104 [35-8-110]. Depending on the management of the company, members or managers must discharge or make provision for discharging all of the company's known liabilities before distributing the remaining assets to the members. See Sections 806(a) [35-8-905(1)], 406 [35-8-604], and 407 [35-8-605].

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 302 throughout section inserted references to termination; near middle of (1) after "by" deleted "filing articles of dissolution pursuant to 35-8-906 and"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 12, 1999.

35-8-909. Unknown claims against dissolved or terminated limited liability companies.

Official Comments

An unknown claim will be barred when the company publishes notice requesting claimants to file claims with the company and stating that claims will be barred unless the claimant files suit to enforce the claim within five years after the date of publication. The procedure also bars known claims where the claimant either did not receive written notice described in Section 807 [35-8-908] or received notice, mailed a claim, but the company did not act on the claim.

Depending on the management of the company, members or managers must discharge or make provision for discharging all of the company's known liabilities before distributing the remaining assets to the members. See Comment to Section 807 [35-8-908]. This section does not contemplate that a company will postpone member distributions until all unknown claims are barred under this section. In appropriate cases, the company may purchase insurance or set aside funds permitting a distribution of the remaining assets. Where winding up distributions have been made to members, subsection (d)(2) [subsection (5)(b)] authorizes recovery against those members. However, a claimant's recovery against a member is limited to the lesser of the member's proportionate share of the claim or the amount received in the distribution. This section does not extend any other applicable statutes of limitation. See Section 104 [35-8-110].

1999 Amendment: Chapter 302 in (1) in two places after "dissolution" inserted "or termination" and near beginning after "35-8-908" inserted "and subsections (2) through (5) of this section"; substituted (2) concerning notice of dissolution for former text that read: "(2) A claim may be enforced under 35-8-908 or this section:

(a) against the dissolved limited liability company, to the extent of the undistributed assets; or

(b) if the assets have been distributed in liquidation, against a member of the dissolved limited liability company, to the extent of the member's pro rata share of the claim or the corporate assets distributed to the member in liquidation, whichever is less, but a member's total liability for all claims under this section may not exceed the total amount of assets distributed to the member"; substituted (3) concerning content of published notice for former text that read: "(3) Subsections (1) and (2) apply to foreign limited liability companies and their members transacting business in this state for any claims otherwise arising or accruing under Montana law"; inserted (4) concerning 5-year limit on actions; inserted (5) concerning enforcement of claims; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 12, 1999.

Case Notes

No Evidence of Pending Litigation Against Limited Liability Company to Preclude Dissolution: Plaintiff asserted that the District Court erred by ordering the dissolution of a limited liability company while unresolved patent infringement claims against the company were still outstanding. However, plaintiff failed to present any evidence in the record of pending litigation against the company, and the Supreme Court declined to depart from the record. Plaintiff failed to present a credible challenge to dissolution of the company, and the Supreme Court affirmed the dissolution order. Wallace v. Hayes, 2008 MT 248, 344 M 523, 191 P3d 365 (2008).

35-8-912. Reinstatement following administrative dissolution.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment — Amendment Not Codified: Chapter 355 substituted current text for former section that read: "(1) A limited liability company administratively dissolved may apply to the secretary of state for reinstatement within 5 years after the effective date of dissolution. The applicant shall file an official application. The application must:

(a) recite the name of the company and the effective date of its administrative dissolution;

(b) state that the ground for dissolution either did not exist or has been eliminated;

(c) state that the company's name satisfies the requirements of 35-8-103;

(d) contain a certificate from the department of revenue reciting that all taxes owed by the company have been paid; and

(e) include all annual reports not yet filed with the secretary of state.

(2) If the secretary of state determines that the application contains the information required by subsection (1) and that the information is correct, the secretary of state shall cancel the certificate of dissolution, prepare a certificate of reinstatement that recites this determination and the effective date of reinstatement, file the original of the certificate, and serve the company with a copy of the certificate.

(3) When reinstatement is effective, it relates back to and takes effect as of the effective date of the administrative dissolution, and the company may resume its business as if the administrative dissolution had not occurred." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Because of the temporary nature of the changes made by sec. 1, Ch. 355, L. 2011, the Code Commissioner did not codify the amendment to this section that was effective May 6, 2011, and terminated September 30, 2011. The temporary amendment was as follows: in (1)(d) after "paid" inserted "unless a limited liability company has only one member and has not elected to be taxed as a corporation".

The amendment to this section made by sec. 18, Ch. 26, L. 2011, was rendered void by sec. 3, Ch. 355, L. 2011, a coordination section.

Official Comments

The law where a foreign limited liability company is organized, rather than this Act [Title 35, ch. 8], governs that company's internal affairs and the liability of its owners. Accordingly, any difference between the laws of the foreign jurisdiction and this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] will not constitute grounds for denial of a certificate of authority to transact business in this State. However, a foreign limited liability company transacting business in this State by virtue of a certificate of authority is limited to the business and powers that a limited liability company may lawfully pursue and exercise under Section 112 [35-8-107].

There is no obligation of the company or its members or managers to respond to a member demand to bring an action to pursue a company recovery. This section sets forth a "safe harbor" for cross-entity mergers of limited liability companies with both domestic and foreign: corporations, general and limited partnerships, and other limited liability companies. Subsection (c) [subsection (3)] makes clear that the terms and conditions of the plan of merger must be approved by all of the partners unless applicable state law specifies otherwise for the merger.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 302 substituted current text concerning plan of merger for former text that read: "(1) Pursuant to any agreement, a domestic limited liability company may merge with or into one or more limited liability companies formed under the laws of this state or any other state. The surviving limited liability company is as provided in the merger agreement.

(2) A domestic limited liability company that is not the surviving limited liability company in the merger shall file articles of dissolution that must have an effective date not later than the effective date of the merger.

(3) If, following a merger of one or more domestic limited liability companies or one or more limited liability companies formed under the laws of any other state, the surviving limited liability company is not a domestic limited liability company, there must be attached to the articles of dissolution for each domestic limited liability company articles of merger executed by the surviving limited liability company:

(a) stating that the surviving limited liability company may be served with process in the state of Montana in any action, suit, or proceeding for the enforcement of any obligation of the domestic limited liability company;

(b) irrevocably appointing the secretary of state as the surviving limited liability company's agent to accept service of process in any action, suit, or proceeding; and

(c) specifying the address to which a copy of process must be mailed to the surviving limited liability company by the secretary of state.

(4) When the articles of dissolution required by subsection (2) have become effective, the following must be vested in and enforced against the surviving limited liability company as they were in each of the limited liability companies that merged:

(a) all of the rights, privileges, and powers of each of the limited liability companies that merged;

(b) all property, real, personal, and mixed;

MONTANA CLOSE CORPORATION ACT

Chapter Official Comments

Source: The official comments to this chapter were written by the Committee on Corporate Laws, Section of Corporation, Banking, and Business Law, American Bar Association.

Introductory Comment: The Model Statutory Close Corporation Supplement [Title 35, chapter 9, MCA] is an optional statute developed for states that determine that it is advisable to enact an integrated statute dealing with the problems of closely held corporations. This Supplement is not part of the Revised Model Business Corporation Act, and the decision whether to enact this Supplement should be considered independently of the enactment of the Model Act.

This Supplement was developed on the assumption that the state in question has enacted the Revised Model Business Corporation Act, or at least a statute with the same degree of flexibility as the Revised Model Act in the following areas: issuance of shares for nontraditional forms of consideration (MBCA §6.21) [35-1-605, 35-1-606, 35-1-610 (all repealed)], preemptive rights (MBCA §6.30) [35-1-511 (now repealed)], supermajority voting rights for shareholders (MBCA §§7.27, 10.21) [35-1-214, 35-1-505, 35-1-507 (all repealed)] and directors (MBCA §§8.24, 10.22) [35-1-401, 35-1-405 (both repealed)], action by shareholders or board of directors without a meeting (MBCA §§7.04, 8.21) [35-1-406, 35-1-509 (both repealed)], voting by voting groups (MBCA §7.27) [35-1-507 (now repealed) (Montana version differs)], cumulative voting for directors (MBCA §7.28) [35-1-506 (now repealed) varies significantly], shareholder voting agreements (MBCA §7.31) [35-1-508 (now repealed)], voting trusts (MBCA §7.30) [35-1-508 (now repealed)], irrevocable proxies (MBCA §7.22(d)) [35-1-506 (now repealed)], share transfer restrictions (MBCA §6.27) [35-1-617 (now repealed)], protection of class voting rights for the election and removal of directors (MBCA §§8.04 [no Montana provision], 8.08(b), 8.08(c)) [35-1-408 (now repealed)], filling of vacancies on the board of directors (MBCA §8.10(b)) [no Montana provision], flexibility in appointment of officers (MBCA §8.40) [no Montana provision], shareholders' voting rights with respect to amendments of articles of incorporation and mergers (MBCA §§10.04, 11.03(f)) [35-1-208, 35-1-803 (both repealed)], dissenters' rights (MBCA ch. 13) [35-1-810, 35-1-812 (both repealed)], and judicial dissolution (MBCA §14.30) [35-1-921 (now repealed), 35-6-102].

In addition, section 8.01 of the 1984 Model Act [35-1-401, 35-1-515 (both repealed)] authorizes a corporation with less than 50 shareholders [25 in Montana] to dispense with the board of directors or limit its authority in whole or in part. This authorization is replicated in the Model Statutory Close Corporation Supplement.

Under a statute with the flexibility of the Revised Model Act it is usually possible to achieve any desired legal result within a closely held corporation without recourse to the Close Corporation Supplement by the use of sophisticated contracts among the shareholders and special provisions in the articles of incorporation and the bylaws. This Supplement therefore does not significantly change the results that may be obtained under the Revised Model Act; rather, the advantages of the Supplement lie in the certainty and flexibility that it provides. Also, in many situations, the Supplement facilitates the achievement of desired results with significantly less drafting and significantly lower probabilities that some factor has been overlooked. The Supplement further provides an optional standard-form buy-out arrangement in the recurring situation where a shareholder in a closely held corporation has died or been incapacitated leaving a spouse who is unable or unwilling to work in the enterprise.

Many states have adopted a variety of different provisions relating to closely held corporations; the Model Statutory Close Corporation Supplement draws from this broad experience within various states, and develops principles for closely held corporations based on this experience. Not all states, however, have adopted integrated statutes analagous to the Supplement; some state legislatures have not adopted special provisions relating to close corporations; others have chosen to enact such provisions on a nonintegrated basis as part of their general corporation statutes. The 1969 Model Act essentially adopted a nonintegrated approach.

Examples of situations in which the Supplement may be advantageous include:

(1) A small enterprise that is likely to remain a closely held business, all or substantially all of whose shareholders are active in the business, may avoid the expense of drafting an elaborate set of specially tailored close corporation documents. If the shareholders elect to be governed by the Supplement, the share transfer restriction in sections 11 [35-9-202] and 12 [35-9-203] automatically apply and a right to have their shares purchased at death may be provided by including the statement in the articles of incorporation that sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] shall apply (with such modifications or alterations as are deemed appropriate).

(2) A professional corporation whose shareholders wish to be taxed as a corporation may operate internally as a partnership. Under sections 20 and 21 [35-9-301, 35-9-302] the corporation may be managed entirely by the shareholders, who may provide for voting on a one-vote-per-shareholder basis rather than on the basis of the usual rule of one-vote-per-share.

(3) A wholly owned subsidiary corporation may be created and operated with a very simple corporate structure. Such a subsidiary corporation may operate without a board of directors (§21) [35-9-302], need not adopt bylaws (§22) [35-9-303], need not hold annual meetings except upon a demand from a shareholder (§23(b)) [35-9-304], and may have a single officer with authority to sign all legal documents on behalf of the corporation (§24) [35-9-305].

This Supplement may also be useful in situations in which the shareholders of a closely held corporation obtain basic protection of their rights through sophisticated contractual arrangements, but cannot achieve desired management flexibility and remedies under the general business corporation statute. The shareholders, for example, may wish to authorize director proxies (§20) [35-9-301] or to allow less than a majority to elect to dissolve the corporation (§33) [35-9-404].

Chapter Case Notes

No Right of Individual Guarantor to Sue on Behalf of Corporation: Under former Rule 17(a), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), an action must be brought by the person who is entitled to enforce the right according to the governing substantive law and will not necessarily be brought in the name of the person who will ultimately benefit from the recovery. In the case of corporations, neither the Montana Business Corporation Act nor the Montana Close Corporation Act provides for an individual guarantor to sue on behalf of the corporation. Therefore, the District Court did not err in determining that claims for misuse and misappropriation of corporate funds could not be brought by individual plaintiffs. Kondelik v. First Fidelity Bank of Glendive, 259 M 446, 857 P2d 687, 50 St. Rep. 874 (1993).

General

Part Case Notes

Lawsuit by Shareholder Causing Damages Considered Breach of Fiduciary Duty of Care: Sletteland brought a suit against two other corporate shareholders for charging excessive attorney fees and seeking their removal as corporate directors. The District Court held that the fees were excessive, but found no grounds for removal. The other shareholders filed a counterclaim against Sletteland, alleging that he breached his fiduciary duty in bringing the lawsuit because the timing of the suit caused refinancing of a project to fail, resulting in damage to the corporation and to other shareholders. The District Court agreed, and both parties appealed their respective issues. The Supreme Court reversed on the issue of excessive fees, but affirmed on the issue of breach of fiduciary duty. The fiduciary duty between shareholders of a close corporation is one of utmost good faith and loyalty. Sletteland admittedly knew of the refinancing and, as an attorney and investment banker, also knew the effect that a lawsuit alleging misconduct by board members would have on a refinancing effort. In fact, it appeared that the suit was brought to specifically derail the refinancing. Sletteland was the person who determined the timing of the suit, which was filed immediately before the individuals involved in the refinancing were to meet for discussions, and when asked to withdraw the suit so refinancing could conclude, he refused to do so. Sletteland did not use the care that an ordinarily prudent person would use in a similar situation, resulting in the breach of fiduciary duty. The Supreme Court also affirmed the award of damages. Although future damages could not be calculated exactly in this case, the District Court did not abuse its discretion in basing its calculations on expert testimony of a well-known regional economist. Sletteland v. Roberts, 2000 MT 382, 304 M 21, 16 P3d 1062, 57 St. Rep. 1639 (2000).

Fiduciary Duty Between Shareholders in Close Corporation When No Other Type of Relationship Exists: The fiduciary duty between stockholders of a close corporation is one of utmost good faith and loyalty. However, the controlling group should not be stymied by a minority stockholder's grievances if the controlling group can demonstrate a legitimate business purpose and the minority stockholder cannot demonstrate a less harmful alternative. If called on to settle a dispute between the stockholders, the court must weigh the legitimate business purpose, if any, against the practicability of a less harmful alternative. Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990), citing Donahue v. Rodd Electrotype Co. of New England, Inc., 328 NE 2d 505 (Mass. 1975), and Wilkes v. Springside Nursing Home, Inc., 353 NE 2d 657 (Mass. 1976), and distinguishing Skierka v. Skierka Bros., Inc., 192 M 505, 629 P2d 214 (1981), Deist v. Wachholz, 208 M 207, 678 P2d 188 (1984), and Dunfee v. Baskin-Robbins, 221 M 447, 720 P2d 1148 (1986).

In Warren v. Campbell Farming Corp., 2011 MT 324, 363 Mont. 190, 271 P.3d 36, the Montana Supreme Court, in answering a certified question from the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals, revisited the Daniels test and concluded that the Daniels test does not apply to claims involving director conflict of interest transactions. However, the Daniels test does apply to minority shareholders' claims of breach of fiduciary duties against majority shareholders.

35-9-102. Application of Montana Business Corporation Act and Montana Professional Corporation Act.

Official Comments

Provisions in the Revised Model Business Corporation Act apply to all statutory close corporations except to the extent they are not consistent with the provisions in this Supplement. The relationship between this Supplement [chapter] and the Model Act [Title 35, chapter 1, MCA] is analagous to the relationship between the Uniform Partnership Act and the Uniform Limited Partnership Act. Whenever this Supplement [chapter] is silent on an issue, the corresponding provision of the Model Act [Title 35, chapter 1, MCA] applies. These corresponding provisions are referred to in the cross-references following each section of the supplement [chapter]. See also the Official Comments to sections 31 [35-9-402] and 32 [35-9-403] for discussion of the applicability of these statutes when a corporation terminates its status as a statutory close corporation.

Under section 2(b) [35-9-102(2)] the provisions of this Supplement [chapter] apply to all professional corporations that elect to be statutory close corporations, except to the extent the provisions are inconsistent with the provisions of the Model Professional Corporation Supplement [Title 35, chapter 4]. See the Official Comment to section 2 [35-4-109] of the Model Professional Corporation Supplement for a discussion of the relationship between the Model Professional Corporation Supplement and the Revised Model Business Corporation Act.

Section 2(c) [35-9-102(3)], which is derived from section 356 of the Delaware Corporation Law, makes clear that enactment of the Supplement [chapter] does not affect the law applicable to corporations, including closely held corporations, that are not statutory close corporations.

35-9-103. Definition and election of statutory close corporation status.

Official Comments

1. 50-SHAREHOLDER LIMIT [25 in Montana]

With the exception of a corporation having more than 50 [25 in Montana] shareholders at the time it wishes to become a statutory close corporation, all corporations are potentially eligible to make the election. (See MBCA section 1.42 [not adopted in Montana] for the method of determining the number of shareholders.) The election is made by including in the articles of incorporation a statement that the corporation is a statutory close corporation. An electing corporation continues to be governed by the Supplement [this chapter] unless the shareholders revoke this election. Other terminating events, such as an increase in the number of shareholders beyond some arbitrary maximum or the making of a public share offering, commonly found in existing close corporation statutes create the undesirable possibility of inadvertent terminations of close corporation status and do not seem to serve any purpose except to complicate the statutory framework.

The danger that a large corporation with numerous shareholders might attempt to elect close corporation status in order to operate without a board of directors, although highly unlikely as a practical matter, is the reason for the 50 shareholder limit [25 in Montana] in section 3(b) [35-9-103(2)]. A new corporation that wishes to elect statutory close corporation status at the time of its initial incorporation is eligible, however, regardless of the number of subscribers. Likewise, a new or existing corporation that becomes a statutory close corporation at a time when it has fewer than 50 shareholders [25 in Montana] may continue to operate as a statutory close corporation even though it subsequently has more than 50 shareholders [25 in Montana]. The potential for abuse by evasion of the normal rules governing corporations is not considered to be sufficiently great to justify an absolute numerical limitation, which inevitably creates the possibility of an unknowing change in status, and complexity of statutory provisions designed to deal with those changes of status.

2. SPECIAL DESIGNATION

Consideration was given to requiring a statutory close corporation to use a special designation, such as "A Statutory Close Corporation" or "S.C.C.," on all letterhead and documents to distinguish it from a regular corporation. Special designations are used in European corporation statutes to distinguish between public and private companies. This practice has not been used in the past in the United States except with respect to professional corporations. See section 15 [35-4-206] of the Model Professional Corporation Supplement, which under section 2(b) [35-9-102(2)] of the Supplement applies to a professional corporation that elects to become a statutory close corporation. The only purpose served by the designation is to provide special notice to creditors and shareholders; of course, the usual name of a corporation gives a creditor notice of the company's limited liability and shareholders have notice of the corporation's special status because of the notice on the share certificates required by section 10 [35-9-201].

3. ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION

The articles of incorporation contain the basic information about a corporation. They may also give notice to prospective shareholders and creditors of special or unusual contractual arrangements among the shareholders.

The only required difference between articles of incorporation for a statutory close corporation and for a regular corporation is the the [sic] statement designating the corporation to be a statutory close corporation. Although statutory close corporations may use a form of articles of incorporation identical to that for any corporation, a special format that takes into account the provisions respecting share transfer restrictions (sections 11 and 14) [35-9-202 and 35-9-205], the possibility that the corporation will not have a board of directors (section 21) [35-9-302], and other optional provisions that can be utilized by statutory close corporations may be more useful. See for example, the format published in 37 BUS. LAW. 309 (1981).

4. REQUIRED VOTE

Some states, e.g. Maryland and Texas, require unanimous consent of the shareholders for an existing corporation to become a statutory close corporation. Most states, however, follow the pattern of the Delaware statute that requires a two-thirds vote of all outstanding shares. The Close Corporation Supplement adopts a compromise between the two positions by requiring a two-thirds vote of each class or series of shares, voting as separate voting groups, but shareholders opposed to the election are granted dissenters' rights.

5. TRANSITION PROVISIONS

A state having an existing close corporation statute when it enacts the Model Close Corporation Supplement may allow existing close corporations to quality automatically for close corporation status by filing amended articles of incorporation complying with section 3 [this section]. See section 50 [sec. 29, Ch. 432, L. 1987].

Part 2
Share Transfer Restrictions

35-9-201. Notice of statutory close corporation status on issued shares.

Official Comments

The purpose of this section is to put shareholders in a statutory close corporation on notice that their shares are subject to transfer restrictions and that their rights and liabilities may be different from those of shareholders in other corporations. The notice is essential to bind third parties who are not signatories to the original agreements establishing the rights of shareholders among themselves.

The notice is also drafted to satisfy the notice requirements in cases where a statutory close corporation has uncertificated shares. Under section 6.26 [35-1-610 (now repealed)] of the Revised Model Act, the notice required by this section would appear in the transaction statement.

35-9-202. Share transfer prohibition.

Official Comments

This section sets out a standardized transfer prohibition that automatically applies unless the articles of incorporation provide otherwise. The prohibition is designed to accomplish two purposes: first, to provide a prohibition that fits the needs of the "typical" close corporation; and second, to facilitate alteration in order to fit the special needs of the shareholders in a particular corporation.

1. COVERED TRANSFERS

The definition of transfer in subsection (a) [subsection (1)] is intended to cover every possible type of transaction that might create an interest in corporate shares, including purchase, sale, discount, negotiation, gift, trust, legacy, inheritance, pledge, mortgage, lien, creation of a security interest, hypothecation, bankruptcy, or transfer pursuant to court order.

2. EXEMPT TRANSFERS

Subsection (b) [subsection (2)] describes a number of exemptions to the prohibition of subsection (a) [subsection (1)]. Intrashareholder and intrafamily transfers are exempt on the assumption that most "typical" close corporation shareholders would want these transfers to be exempt. Transfers to executors, administrators, trustees, or receivers that result from death, bankruptcy, liquidation, or dissolution of a shareholder are also exempt. In addition, transfers that are in effect merely internal recapitalizations and transfers having the approval of all the shareholders are exempt. Transactions in which the stock is pledged or hypothecated are also exempt when no voting rights are given to the pledgee. In all these situations, however, further attempted transfers by the transferees are subject to the prohibitions unless the subsequent transfer qualifies under one of the exemptions. For example, although a pledge of shares as collateral for a loan is an exempt transaction (unless the pledgee is given the power to vote the shares), a subsequent sale of the pledged stock by the pledgee in a foreclosure proceeding can only be made in accordance with section 12 [35-9-203] unless the transfer is exempt under subsection (b) [subsection (2)].

A final type of exempt transfer is one made after the corporation ceases to be a statutory close corporation. The automatic elimination of the restrictions on transfer at termination of the close corporation election is justified on the assumption that in most cases the shareholders would want the prohibition to be ineffective after termination. The right to receive the fair value of his shares by voting against the termination (see section 31) [35-9-402] is a reasonable remedy for the shareholders opposed to termination on any ground. Alternative methods for continuing the restriction after termination of statutory close corporation status exist. See the Official Comment to section 31 [35-9-402].

3. BUILT-IN FLEXIBILITY

The statutory prohibition can be limited or modified simply by stating in the articles of incorporation that it does not apply or by specifying in the articles of incorporation the changes from the statutory language. For example, if the shareholders wanted all pledges to be subject to the transfer prohibition but otherwise found the statutory prohibition acceptable, the attorney drafting the articles of incorporation may simply provide in the articles of incorporation: "Subsection 11(b)(6) [35-9-202(2)(f)] does not apply." All shareholders thus have some automatic basic protection against unwanted transfers plus maximum flexibility to alter or replace the statutory scheme. See generally the annotation to section 6.27 of the revised Model Business Corporation Act, for a discussion of cases involving share transfer restrictions.

35-9-203. Share transfer after first refusal by corporation.

Official Comments

If the proposed transfer is not exempt under section 11(b) [35-9-202(2)], the shareholder may sell his shares only if he obtains an offer from a nonshareholder who meets the requirements of subsection (b)(1) and (2) [subsection (2)(a) and (b)] of this section. These requirements are designed to protect the corporation and other shareholders against serious adverse tax consequences that might result from having the third person as a shareholder. The mere offer by a shareholder to sell his shares to the corporation at a price he designates does not trigger the first refusal option and other rights provided by this subsection. Any broader rights guaranteeing a market for the shares by the corporation or other shareholders must be provided in a buy-out agreement. See the Official Comment to section 14 [35-9-205].

Subsection (a) [subsection (1)] also requires that any third-party offer submitted to the corporation be a cash offer. An offer based on other consideration, such as shares in another corporation, is not a qualifying offer, and unless the shareholder can convince the third party to make a cash offer, the shareholder has no right to sell or transfer his shares to the third party should the corporation refuse to consent to the transfer or to purchase the offered shares. The decision to exclude noncash offers reflects that most third-party offers are made for cash and that the mechanics of dealing with noncash offers would unduly complicate the statutory framework. If the possibility of receiving noncash offers is considered significant, appropriate language dealing with such offers may be included in the articles of incorporation. Since the corporation cannot match in specie the noncash portion of the third-party offer, some mechanism, such as arbitration, must be set out to resolve any disputes over the adequacy of an offer made by the corporation to purchase the offered shares.

With respect to a proposed transfer to a third party, subsection (c) [subsection (3)] encourages the parties to reach an agreement in a reasonably short period of time. The 15-day interval between the last day for holding a shareholders' meeting to consider the third-party offer and the cutoff date for the notice of acceptance is designed to allow time for the corporation and the other shareholders to contact potential third-party purchasers or shareholders not present at the meeting at which the decision to purchase the shares was taken and to make any necessary arrangements to finance the purchase.

If the corporation does not arrange the purchase of the offered shares, subsection (f) [subsection (6)] permits their transfer to the third person only if made within 120 days of the date the shareholder notifies the corporation of the third-party offer. Additionally, the transaction must be consummated on the terms set forth in the notice of the offer. For example, a sale for less than the total price specified in the notice or an installment purchase when a cash sale is specified in the notice would not qualify under this section. If the transfer to the third person is not validly made, the offering shareholder remains subject to the provisions of this section. Thus the shareholder may make a transfer exempt under section 11(b) [35-9-202(2)] or obtain another qualifying offer from a third person at any time in the future.

If the transfer to the third party occurs, the shares remain subject to the transfer prohibition in section 11 [35-9-202] unless the transferee has no notice or knowledge of the restrictions. See sections 10 [35-9-201] and 13 [35-9-204].

For discussion of subsection (e) [subsection (5)], see the Official Comment to section 14 [35-9-205].

35-9-204. Attempted share transfer in breach of prohibition.

Official Comments

This section provides additional protection for the effectiveness of the transfer restrictions applicable to the shares of a statutory close corporation. If the required notice of the restrictions has not been given (see section 10) [35-9-201] and the transferee does not have actual notice of the restrictions, the corporation is given a 30-day option to purchase the shares. If the corporation exercises its option, the proposed transferee may pursue a breach of warranty claim or any other appropriate remedy against the proposed transferor. Section 13 [35-9-204] is derived from the Delaware law.

This section also gives the corporation an option to purchase shares attempted to be transferred in violation of a transfer restriction that has been held unenforceable by a court.

35-9-205. Compulsory purchase of shares after death of shareholder.

Official Comments

1. INTRODUCTION

Sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208], which are operative only if the articles of incorporation specifically so provide, guarantee a buy-out at the death of a shareholder. By including appropriate language in the articles of incorporation, the mandatory buy-out authorized by this section may be limited to the death of one or more specified shareholders, or to shareholders holding a particular class of shares. It may also be expanded to cover other contingencies—for example, shareholders who retire or who are disabled. Moreover, the statutory language may be modified to change the type of buy-out. Other commonly used buy-out arrangements include an optional sell-optional purchase, mandatory sell-optional purchase, and mandatory sell-mandatory purchase, with the seller being a shareholder wishing to dispose of his shares and the purchaser being the corporation, the remaining shareholders, or a combination of the two. The optional sell-mandatory purchase option was chosen on the ground that it was the one most likely to be chosen by a shareholder in a closely held corporation, all other factors being equal.

The decision to utilize any kind of buy-out arrangement should be made only after careful consideration of the factors involved in the particular situation. If sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] are used, the election must be made in the articles of incorporation by specifying that sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] apply. The articles of incorporation may also vary the statutory provisions in any desired manner.

These sections are intended to work in tandem with the share transfer prohibition of section 11 [35-9-202]. Under the share transfer prohibition there is no obligation to purchase, while under sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] there is an obligation to purchase by the corporation or the other shareholders if the estate wants to sell; if this obligation is not met, the corporation will be dissolved.

The statute grants the estate of a deceased shareholder the right to compel a purchase of the decedent's shares since this is the situation most often covered in privately drafted contractual buy-outs. The problem of illiquidity of close corporation shares is most acute in this situation because the estate frequently needs cash for estate taxes and other purposes. At the same time the remaining shareholders are often concerned about having the decedent's spouse and children involved in the management of the corporation. A significant amount of shareholder litigation involving close corporations involves disputes between the surviving shareholders and the successors in interest of a deceased shareholder. Having a guaranteed market for the decedent's shares reduces the likelihood that disputes will arise. Life insurance may be used to fund part or all of the purchase obligation. In the absence of available cash, an installment arrangement may help to alleviate any financial strain on the corporation. The remaining shareholders may agree to purchase some or all of the shares or find a third-party purchaser if it is undesirable for the corporation to purchase all of the offered shares. Furthermore, if the parties do not have an existing agreement containing a binding price formula or other terms often contained in buy-out agreements and are unable to agree voluntarily on the price or other terms, a court action may be brought in which a judge in his discretion may resolve the differences and structure a buy-out plan that is realistic in light of the corporation's finances.

In summary, assuming some sort of mandatory buy-out in a particular situation is desirable, the major advantage of electing sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] is that they provide basic protection in the event the shareholders have failed to enter into an appropriate private agreement, or have entered into a buy-out agreement but have failed to agree upon a buy-out price formula, or have agreed upon a formula but have neglected to provide other necessary terms such as interest rates or number of installments in the event deferred purchases are authorized or necessary. Sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] do not prevent the shareholders from having an all-inclusive, buy-out agreement. See section 14(f) [35-9-205(6)]. An attorney drafting such an agreement, however, may use the provisions of sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] as the basis of the agreement, making any necessary additions and modifications. The procedure may substantially reduce the amount of drafting required.

2. REDEMPTION PROBLEMS

The ability of a corporation to redeem its shares is subject to legal limitations. Section 6.40 of the revised Model Business Corporation Act [35-1-711 (now repealed)] sets forth a clear set of principles dealing with permissible redemptions of shares. In states that have not adopted section 6.40 [35-1-711 (now repealed)], however, the rules vary in many respects. Some states apply the same limitations to redemptions that apply to dividends. Some, however, apply different tests. The result is that a wide variety of insolvency and surplus tests, sometimes in combination, exist. If corporate indebtedness is incurred in connection with a redemption, further it is often unclear in states that have not adopted section 6.40 [35-1-711 (now repealed)] whether the applicable test must be met at the time the transaction is entered into, at the time payments are made, or at both times. The priority ranking of redemption related corporate debt is also unclear in many of these states.

3. TAX CONSIDERATIONS

Redemptions also involve complex tax considerations. Some redemptions, principally those that satisfy the requirements of sections 302 and 303 of the Internal Revenue Code, are taxed at capital gains rates rather than as dividends under section 301.

Sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] are designed to provide flexibility to permit the affected parties to negotiate a purchase scheme that takes tax considerations into account. For example, under section 15(d) [35-9-206(4)], a portion or all of the purchase of the decedent's shares may, with shareholder approval, be allocated to the remaining shareholders or to third parties. This provides the framework by which the interested parties may allocate the shares to minimize the corporate law and tax problems discussed above. If an acceptable allocation cannot be agreed upon, the selling shareholder may, under section 16 [35-9-207], reject the offer made by the corporation and file a petition requesting the court to compel a purchase. In framing its decree, the court may consider the problems discussed here. The court may also, under section 16(c) [35-9-207(3)], modify its decree on the basis of legal and financial constraints.

Flexibility to deal with other tax problems is also built into sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208]. If certain conditions are met, payment of the estate tax on the deceased shareholder's estate may be deferred for up to 15 years under section 6166 of the Internal Revenue Code, and interest on the deferred tax will be assessed at a rate considerably lower than the normal rate applicable to late payments. A redemption keyed into maximum use of these provisions may in appropriate cases be quite advantageous to both the estate of the deceased shareholder and to the corporation. Nothing in these sections prohibit [sic] the estate of the deceased shareholder and the corporation from working out a redemption plan with the aid of tax and corporate counsel.

An additional tax problem is to assure that the price set for shares in a buy-out agreement will be accepted for tax purposes as the value of the shares. Tax counsel should be consulted to determine what adjustments, if any, will be necessary to achieve this result under a section 14 [35-9-205] buy-out agreement.

4. MODIFICATION OF STATUTORY SCHEME

Sections 14(b) and (c) [35-9-205(2) and (3)] permit the modification of the provisions of sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] by a two-thirds vote of all the shares. Section 14(d) [35-9-205(4)] provides that a shareholder who votes against a modification that terminates or substantially alters buy-out rights previously granted him under these sections has dissenters' rights to obtain the fair value of his shares. Authorization of dissenters' rights when statutory buy-out rights are materially altered represents a compromise between requiring unanimous approval by all interested persons for the alteration and requiring less than unanimous approval but providing no statutory remedy for those opposed to the termination whose rights are adversely affected.

35-9-206. Exercise of compulsory purchase right.

Official Comments

Section 15 [35-9-206] sets out the mechanics of exercising the buy-out option. The procedures are similar to those in section 12 [35-9-203] relating to third-party offers. Like section 12 [35-9-203], this section requires that the selling shareholder offer all of his shares for sale on the premise that a shareholder desiring to cash out his interest in the corporation ought to divest himself of all his equity interest in the business. If fewer than all his shares are offered, the shareholder may pursue his rights, if any, under the corporation's share transfer restrictions.

35-9-207. Court action to compel purchase.

Official Comments

The rationale for a judicial proceeding to determine the fair value of shares and other terms of the buy-out is explained in the Official Comment to section 15 [35-9-206]. The power of the court under section 17 [35-9-208] to allocate all costs and counsel fees incurred in the suit should provide an adequate incentive for both sides to act in good faith. No court action will be necessary, however, if the buy-out price and other terms are established pursuant to a written agreement among the shareholders or provisions in the articles of incorporation or bylaws. See section 15(e) [35-9-606(5)].

If a suit to determine the fair value of shares is brought, the court has discretion to include in its order any conditions it feels are justified on the basis of the financial and other needs of the selling shareholder and of the purchaser. The court, for example, may authorize an installment sale. The order may include a provision for interest and may require collateral to secure the unpaid installments.

If the purchase is not consummated or the purchasers default, the shareholder may petition for dissolution of the corporation. The court may deny the petition for good cause shown. The proceeding, however, affords the corporation an opportunity to be heard on the matter and an opportunity to avoid dissolution. Mandatory dissolution in the event the offered shares are not purchased provides a strong incentive for the corporation and the remaining shareholders either to purchase the shares or to find another purchaser. Presumably, the corporation and other shareholders would refuse to purchase if the corporation's financial prospects were bleak. If this is the case, then dissolution may be the appropriate solution. Under section 15 [35-9-206] the other shareholders are given reasonable time to come up with a purchasing group and the court has power to authorize an installment purchase and any other terms that are necessary to enable the purchasing group to finance the purchase without undue financial strain on the corporation or other purchasers.

Part 3
Regulation and Operation

35-9-301. Shareholder agreements.

Official Comments

This section authorizes the shareholders to make any agreement they wish regulating the business of the corporation and their relationship to one another and to the corporation. Examples of provisions that may be included in an agreement are:

(1) The management of the business and the affairs of the corporation in whole or part may be by or under the direction of all the shareholders of the corporation or by or under the direction of one or more shareholders or third parties selected by the shareholders.

(2) One or more shareholders may be given power to dissolve the corporation at will or upon the occurrence of a specified event or contingency.

(3) The manner of exercising or dividing voting power by the shareholders and directors may be established, and the use of director as well as shareholder proxies may be authorized.

(4) The terms and conditions of employment of any officer or employee by the corporation may be established, regardless of the length of employment.

(5) The identity of the directors and officers of the corporation may be established.

(6) The payment of dividends or division of profits may be established.

(7) Issues as to which the shareholders or directors are deadlocked may be made subject to arbitration, or arbitration may be required for any issue of disagreement between a shareholder in his capacity as a shareholder, director, officer, or employee and the corporation, or the other shareholders.

All the shareholders must enter into the agreement and, if the agreement specifies that the corporation is not to have a board of directors or that one or more shareholders is to have a special right to dissolve the corporation, the articles of incorporation must include appropriate language authorizing these provisions. See sections 21 and 33 [35-9-302 and 35-9-404].

A shareholder agreement is valid and enforceable under this section even if it, in effect, permits the business to be operated essentially as a partnership without a board of directors. See subsection (b) [subsection (2)]. Close corporations in which most or all of the shareholders are employees of the corporation are often referred to as "incorporated partnerships." This section gives legal sanction to the customary arrangements made by the shareholders of these corporations. Section 25 [35-9-306] reinforces this concept by providing that shareholder limited liability is to be recognized in spite of an agreement that the corporation is to be operated essentially as a partnership.

This Supplement does not deal with the effect of a shareholder agreement on the tax status of the corporation. In some circumstances the agreement may result in the taxation of the business as a partnership. See Treas. Regs. §§301.7701-1 through -3 (1960).

The requirement of unanimity for adoption and amendment is based on the unusual nature of an agreement that so radically alters the normal corporate structure.

Subsection (h) [subsection (8)] preserves the right of shareholders to enter into any other type of shareholder voting agreement or voting trust or similar agreement that is authorized in the state's general business corporation or professional corporation statutes. These statutes do not ordinarily require unanimous approval by the shareholders but in general they do not authorize as much flexibility, particularly with respect to restrictions on the normal powers of directors, as is permitted under this section. They also often contain time limitations and other restrictions that may be undesirable. See, e.g. MBCA section 7.30 [35-1-508 (now repealed)] (voting trust is valid for 10 years).

The shareholders of a statutory close corporation may choose to operate with or without a board of directors. Section 21 [35-9-302] deals specifically with the requirements for making this election and the legal consequences of operating without a board of directors. If the corporation has a board of directors, any responsibilities required to be exercised by the board of directors may be delegated to one or more of the shareholders or to third parties selected by the shareholders.

If the shareholders exercise the traditional management rights and duties required by statute to be exercised by the board of directors or have delegated these rights and duties to others, they also assume the same liability as would otherwise be imposed on the directors for failure to exercise these rights or to carry out those duties in an appropriate fashion. The shareholders who assume the duties of directors would, however, be eligible for indemnification under chapter 8E of the Revised Model Act [35-1-414 (now repealed)]. See the Official Comment to section 21 [35-9-302]. If the corporation has a board of directors, the directors are responsible for the appropriate exercise of any management rights they have power to exercise and would be liable for their failure to carry out their duties.

This section is derived from similar provisions in the Maryland and Texas close corporation statutes with stylistic changes.

Case Notes

Error in Modification of Rate for Legal Work: The partnership agreement of a limited partnership included a limitation on the general partners' ability to incur legal expenses, but provided that two of the partners could be employed to perform legal services for the partnership, and limited compensation to reasonable hourly rates in an amount not to exceed a total of $60,000 a year without approval. A dispute between partners resulted in a claim that the attorneys had charged excessive rates of $225 an hour and thus should be removed as directors. The District Court found that the attorneys overcharged and required repayment based on a reduced hourly rate. The Supreme Court disagreed and reversed. The contract language clearly allowed for employment of the attorneys, and the partnership was aware in advance of the attorneys' hourly rate. The fees were reasonable given the complexity of the specialized work and the fact that other attorneys in that field charged even higher rates. The District Court erred in modifying the rate for legal work. Sletteland v. Roberts, 2000 MT 382, 304 M 21, 16 P3d 1062, 57 St. Rep. 1639 (2000).

Declaratory Judgment Action by Ranching Corporation Not Action for Full Value of Minority Shares: McCann Ranch, Inc. (MRI), brought a declaratory judgment action against Sharon in order to determine the value of her 600 minority shares for purposes of the dissolution of her marriage. Sharon argued that she should have been paid the full value of her shares because certain actions of MRI were illegal, oppressive, fraudulent, or unfairly prejudicial. The Supreme Court held that the actions of MRI in paying outstanding corporate debts, ceasing payment of dividends, and leasing corporate property did not constitute illegal, oppressive, fraudulent, or unfairly prejudicial acts. The Supreme Court also held that the action brought by Sharon was not pursuant to 35-9-501 because it was brought as a declaratory judgment action by the corporation. McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239, 53 St. Rep. 349 (1996).

35-9-302. Elimination of board of directors.

Official Comments

This section permits a statutory close corporation to dispense with a board of directors if a statement to that effect is included in its articles of incorporation. See the Official Comment to section 3 [35-9-103]. It also sets out the consequences of this election. It is derived from the Maryland close corporation statute.

The shareholders of a statutory close corporation operating without a board of directors have the legal liability imposed by law on directors for managing the business and affairs of the corporation. They may appoint one or more persons to perform their duties but they are collectively liable for any mismanagement. They also have the usual duties of directors and must either hold a meeting or join in a written consent to initiate or to approve action required by statute to be taken by directors. If this option is exercised, it also is not necessary to call for an organizational meeting of directors or to hold other directors' meetings; the statutory requirements may be fulfilled by shareholders' meetings.

One difference between this section and the Maryland provision and the provisions found in the statutes of other states that have followed the Maryland model is found in subsection (c)(5) [subsection (3)(e)], authorizing "designated directors" to satisfy a party dealing with the corporation who requests that certain documents be signed or approved by "directors." Some banks and creditors have in the past refused to accept documents that do not meet specified corporate formalities. This subsection creates an admittedly artificial but practical method of satisfying this objection. The designated directors do not expose themselves to additional liability by signing documents as designated directors.

Subsection (c)(2) [subsection (3)(b)] provides that the shareholder vote on action normally requiring director approval is tallied in the same manner as at any meeting of shareholders, i.e. the vote is tallied by shares rather than per capita by individual shareholders. This rule may be changed by an appropriate provision in the articles of incorporation. For example, if the articles of incorporation so state, shareholders may vote on a one-vote-per-person basis (as is the normal rule for directors' votes) rather than the one-vote-per-share rule applicable to shareholders. The shareholder voting rule is utilized as the standard rule because it is the option most likely to be chosen. A weighted voting plan that gives one or more shareholders either a general veto power or the power to veto in designated cases is also permissible. If a corporation has different classes or series of shares with voting rights or the corporate statutes grant voting rights to all classes or series of shares on a particular issue, either together or as separate voting groups, the requisite vote of the various classes or series of shares must be obtained to validate the transaction. The vote under subsection (c)(2) [subsection (3)(b)] only satisfies any requirement for director approval of proposed action.

Although unanimous approval is necessary to elect to dispense with a board of directors, the election can be terminated under subsection (d) [subsection (4)] by a two-thirds vote of all shares. Operating without a board of directors is such a radical departure from traditional corporate law that it should not be undertaken unless all the shareholders agree because additional liabilities may be incurred as a result of the election. Terminating the election, however, reinstates the statutory requirements for a board of directors; and a two-thirds vote, which is the voting standard used in this Supplement for most fundamental structural changes, seems sufficient. A corporation with 50 or fewer shareholders [25 in Montana] that elects not to have a board of directors under section 8.01 of the Revised Model Act [35-1-401, 35-1-515 (both repealed)], however, may make and terminate the election under that statute by majority vote.

If a corporation without a board of directors terminates its status as a statutory close corporation, it must immediately elect directors unless it has 50 or fewer shareholders [25 in Montana] and chooses to operate without a board under MBCA §8.01 [35-1-401, 35-1-515 (both repealed)].

35-9-303. Bylaws.

Official Comments

The purpose of bylaws is to provide regulations for the management of a corporation. Business corporation statutes universally require that a corporation adopt bylaws. Very few, however, specify more than a few mandatory provisions that must be included in the bylaws. For example, under the MBCA, the mandatory requirements are: (1) the time and place of shareholder meetings (section 7.01) [35-1-501 (now repealed)]; (2) the number of directors (section 8.03) [35-1-402 (now repealed)]; (3) the notice to be given of directors' meetings (section 8.22) [35-1-404 (now repealed)]; and (4) the time, method of election, and authority of the officers (sections 8.40 and 8.41) [35-1-410 (now repealed)]. Moreover, under section 2.06 [35-1-214 (now repealed)] any provision required or permitted to be in the bylaws may be placed in the articles of incorporation.

Since the type of shareholder agreement contemplated by section 20 [35-9-301] includes much of the information normally included in bylaws, requiring the adoption of bylaws in many cases involves unnecessary duplication. This is particularly true in closely held corporations in which most or all of the investors are active in the business. These corporations normally operate on an informal basis. The highly structured formalities in typical bylaws, although necessary in larger corporations with numerous shareholders, can be cumbersome when imposed on closely held corporations.

This section gives a statutory close corporation the option to dispense with bylaws, if the matters required by statute to be included in bylaws are contained in either a section 20 [35-9-301] shareholder agreement or in the articles of incorporation. Although this represents a break with tradition, it is generally consistent with the "incorporated partnership" concept (see the Comment to section 20 [35-9-301]) and makes certain that all the information legally required to be in bylaws will be readily accessible to the shareholders.

Official Comments

This section, which is derived from the Maryland close corporation statute, requires that a statutory close corporation establish a date for an annual shareholders' meeting but provides that the meeting need not be held unless demanded. 35-9-306. Limited liability.

Official Comments

The purpose of this section is to eliminate the possible argument that the shareholders in a statutory close corporation are individually liable for the debts and torts of the business because the corporation did not follow the classical model of a corporation. Pursuant to sections 20, 21, and 33 [35-9-301, 35-9-302, and 35-9-404], a statutory close corporation may in effect function like a partnership, although legally the business is still a corporation. This section does not prevent a court from "piercing the corporate veil" of a statutory close corporation if the circumstances should justify imposing personal liability on the shareholders were the corporation not a statutory close corporation. It merely prevents a court from "piercing the corporate veil" because it is a statutory close corporation.

The section is derived from the California close corporation provisions.

Part 4
Reorganization and Dissolution

35-9-401. Merger — share exchange — sale of assets.

Official Comments

Section 31 [35-9-402] requires a minimum two-thirds vote of every class or series of shares whether or not otherwise entitled to vote to terminate close corporation status. Each class or series is entitled to vote as a separate voting group. Section 30 [35-9-401] imposes the same voting requirement in transactions that have the effect of terminating a corporation's status as a statutory close corporation.

In addition, under subsection (a)(2) [subsection (1)(b)], the shareholders of a corporation that will become a statutory close corporation in a merger or share exchange must approve the transaction by the same minimum two-thirds vote. This is consistent with section 3(b) [35-9-103(2)] which requires that an amendment to the articles of incorporation that results in an existing corporation becoming a statutory close corporation also be approved by a two-thirds vote.

The exceptions to shareholder approval of mergers or share exchanges for subsidiary mergers and some other types of transactions (in MBCA chapter 11) [35-1-801 through 35-1-807 (all repealed)] do not apply to statutory close corporations since a shareholder vote is required in all circumstances where statutory close corporation status is elected or terminated.

Shareholders of a statutory close corporation who vote against the merger, share exchange, or sale not in the regular course of business of all or substantially all the assets have dissenters' rights under MBCA chapter 13 [35-1-810, 35-1-812 (both repealed)].

Section 31(b) [35-9-402(2)] requires that a sale of all or substantially all the assets of a corporation not in the regular course of business be approved by a two-thirds vote of all classes or series of shares, voting as separate voting groups, whether or not they are otherwise entitled to vote. Chapter 12 of the Revised Model Business Corporation Act [35-1-808, 35-1-809 (both repealed)] does not require a vote by voting groups on such a sale (unless otherwise required by the articles of incorporation or by action of the board of directors) and limit the right to vote to shareholders who are entitled to vote generally.

35-9-402. Termination of statutory close corporation status.

Official Comments

Sections 31 and 32 [35-9-402 and 35-9-403] deal with issues that arise when it is decided to terminate a corporation's status as a statutory close corporation.

Termination is accomplished by amendment of the articles of incorporation to eliminate the special designation required by section 3 [35-9-103]. This amendment must be approved by the same vote (two-thirds) that is necessary to elect close corporation status (unless the articles specify a higher vote); and shareholders who vote against the termination have dissenters' rights. This is consistent with the provisions in section 3(b) [35-9-103(2)] for election by an existing corporation to become a statutory close corporation.

If the status of a statutory close corporation that is operating without a board of directors is to be terminated, in addition to amending the articles of incorporation to delete the reference to the statutory close corporation election, the statement that it has no board of directors must also be deleted, and the corporation must immediately elect a board of directors. Or, if MBCA section 8.01(c) [no similar provision in Montana] is applicable, the corporation must amend its articles of incorporation to describe who will perform some or all of the duties of the board of directors under that section.

In the absence of agreement upon rights and duties of the shareholders, the corporation upon termination automatically becomes subject to the state's general business corporation statute, or professional corporation act if the corporation was organized as a professional corporation. Further, except for transfer restrictions under section 11 [35-9-202] and authority to operate without a board of directors under MBCA section 8.01(c) [no similar provision in Montana], any existing rights of the shareholders established by agreement (UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE §1-201(3) [30-1-201(3)]) between the shareholders or with the corporation and any rights granted to the shareholders in the articles of incorporation that are valid under the general business or professional corporation acts remain in effect.

If the shareholders desire to have transfer restrictions applicable under section 11 [35-9-202] to continue after termination of statutory close corporation status, the restrictions must meet all requirements specified in MBCA section 6.27 [35-1-617 (now repealed)], or analagous section of the state's general corporation statute. An alternative method of continuing the section 11 [35-9-202] transfer restrictions after termination is to include a provision in the articles of incorporation that section 11(b)(7) [35-9-202(2)(g)] (which exempts transfers made after termination of statutory close corporation status from the statutory transfer restrictions) does not apply. This eliminates the need to draft a complete set of transfer restrictions. To be binding on third parties, however, all new shares issued after the termination is effective must contain a notice meeting the requirements of MBCA section 6.27(b) [35-1-617(1) (now repealed)] (or analagous provisions in state corporation statutes) and other applicable law. See UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE §8.204 [30-8-204, now repealed]. The notice required as to shares of statutory close corporations by section 10 [35-9-201] is no longer appropriate, although it may be effective notice with respect to all shares outstanding at the time of termination.

If the Revised Model Business Corporation Act and the Model Professional Corporation Supplement have been enacted, most of the special control and distribution arrangements among the shareholders and the optional provisions that may be included in the articles of incorporation are not affected by the termination. For example, if sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] have been elected, the buy-out purchase option at the death of a shareholder continues to apply, unless the articles of incorporation are amended to terminate the option. See the Official Comment to section 14 [35-9-205]. Some provisions, however, may be of doubtful validity after termination. One that may be in this category is a provision in the articles of incorporation giving one or more minority shareholders the right to dissolve the corporation as authorized by section 33 [35-9-404]. At the time of termination, all relevant documents relating to the corporation and the shareholders should be carefully reviewed, and where necessary revised. This Supplement gives some automatic protection by providing in section 32(b) [35-9-403(2)] that the special control and contractual arrangements automatically continue in effect unless they are invalid under other applicable statutes or case law.

35-9-404. Shareholder option to dissolve corporation.

Official Comments

The purpose of this section is to give shareholders in a statutory close corporation, if they so elect, basically the same power to dissolve the business as general partners have under the Uniform Partnership Act. The section applies only if it is elected in the corporation's original or amended articles of incorporation. The right may be given to a single shareholder or to any group of shareholders and may be exercisable at will or restricted to certain designated circumstances. Rights under this section are in addition to other rights a shareholder may have under the state's general business corporation or professional corporation acts or this Supplement [Title 35, chapter 9, MCA] to dissolve the corporation.

This section gives considerable leverage to the shareholder or group of shareholders having the power to dissolve over the other shareholders. It should therefore be utilized with caution. Investors may wish to alter the statutory language to provide that the remaining shareholders have an option to purchase the shares of the shareholder(s) giving notice of dissolution under this section.

This section is generally patterned after the Delaware statute.

Part 5
Shareholder Protection

Part Case Notes

Lawsuit by Shareholder Causing Damages Considered Breach of Fiduciary Duty of Care: Sletteland brought a suit against two other corporate shareholders for charging excessive attorney fees and seeking their removal as corporate directors. The District Court held that the fees were excessive, but found no grounds for removal. The other shareholders filed a counterclaim against Sletteland, alleging that he breached his fiduciary duty in bringing the lawsuit because the timing of the suit caused refinancing of a project to fail, resulting in damage to the corporation and to other shareholders. The District Court agreed, and both parties appealed their respective issues. The Supreme Court reversed on the issue of excessive fees, but affirmed on the issue of breach of fiduciary duty. The fiduciary duty between shareholders of a close corporation is one of utmost good faith and loyalty. Sletteland admittedly knew of the refinancing and, as an attorney and investment banker, also knew the effect that a lawsuit alleging misconduct by board members would have on a refinancing effort. In fact, it appeared that the suit was brought to specifically derail the refinancing. Sletteland was the person who determined the timing of the suit, which was filed immediately before the individuals involved in the refinancing were to meet for discussions, and when asked to withdraw the suit so refinancing could conclude, he refused to do so. Sletteland did not use the care that an ordinarily prudent person would use in a similar situation, resulting in the breach of fiduciary duty. The Supreme Court also affirmed the award of damages. Although future damages could not be calculated exactly in this case, the District Court did not abuse its discretion in basing its calculations on expert testimony of a well-known regional economist. Sletteland v. Roberts, 2000 MT 382, 304 M 21, 16 P3d 1062, 57 St. Rep. 1639 (2000).

Fiduciary Duty Between Shareholders in Close Corporation When No Other Type of Relationship Exists: The fiduciary duty between stockholders of a close corporation is one of utmost good faith and loyalty. However, the controlling group should not be stymied by a minority stockholder's grievances if the controlling group can demonstrate a legitimate business purpose and the minority stockholder cannot demonstrate a less harmful alternative. If called on to settle a dispute between the stockholders, the court must weigh the legitimate business purpose, if any, against the practicability of a less harmful alternative. Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990), citing Donahue v. Rodd Electrotype Co. of New England, Inc., 328 NE 2d 505 (Mass. 1975), and Wilkes v. Springside Nursing Home, Inc., 353 NE 2d 657 (Mass. 1976), and distinguishing Skierka v. Skierka Bros., Inc., 192 M 505, 629 P2d 214 (1981), Deist v. Wachholz, 208 M 207, 678 P2d 188 (1984), and Dunfee v. Baskin-Robbins, 221 M 447, 720 P2d 1148 (1986).

In Warren v. Campbell Farming Corp., 2011 MT 324, 363 Mont. 190, 271 P.3d 36, the Montana Supreme Court, in answering a certified question from the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals, revisited the Daniels test and concluded that the Daniels test does not apply to claims involving director conflict of interest transactions. However, the Daniels test does apply to minority shareholders' claims of breach of fiduciary duties against majority shareholders.

35-9-501. Court action to protect shareholders.

Official Comments

1. INTRODUCTION

Sections 40 through 43 [35-9-501 through 35-9-504] are derived from similar provisions in the California, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, and South Carolina statutes, which in turn are derived from former section 210 of the 1948 English Companies Act (reenacted as section 75 of the 1980 English Companies Act). There are two major differences between these statutes and sections 40 through 43 [35-9-501 through 35-9-504]: (1) the statutes, either specifically or by implication, provide that a shareholder may obtain relief only if he has statutory grounds therefor, whereas section 43 [35-9-504] does not tie relief either to a suit to compel dissolution or to the establishment of grounds for dissolution; and (2) the range of relief available to the court is spelled out in greater detail.

The primary danger in granting relief for oppression and related conduct by dissolution is that the remedy is drastic and courts have usually refused to order dissolution of a solvent corporation, except in extreme cases of fraudulent conduct. Moreover, even though authority may exist to grant relief other than dissolution, courts have often been reluctant to grant any relief unless the fact situation itself justifies dissolution. This approach makes the grounds for relief too narrow to protect in an adequate fashion the rights of minority shareholders. At the same time the threat of dissolution gives minority shareholders a powerful weapon to hold over the head of the majority. Under this Supplement [Title 35, chapter 9, MCA], dissolution is one form of relief that may be ordered by the court, but it is appropriate only as a last resort after other possibilities of resolving the dispute have failed. If a shareholder is actually seeking liquidation of the corporation, he may bring an action for dissolution under the state's general business corporation act (assuming he qualifies to bring the proceeding) or under the option-to-dissolve provisions of section 33 [35-9-404].

Although sections 40 through 43 [35-9-501 through 35-9-504] probably will be invoked most frequently by minority shareholders, the ground for relief described in section 40(a)(2) [35-9-501(1)(b)] may be used by the holders of the majority of shares to seek relief from deadlocks created by veto rights given minority shareholders which threaten the corporation's continued existence. Moreover, even in suits brought by minority shareholders, the court has power under section 42 [35-9-503] to order the petitioning shareholders to sell their shares to the corporation or to the remaining shareholders, even if this is not the relief requested.

Relief available under sections 40 through 43 [35-9-501 through 35-9-504] is circumscribed to minimize the danger of abuse by shareholders. No relief of any kind may be ordered unless the court affirmatively finds that one or more of the specific conditions listed in section 40(a) [35-9-501(1)]—fraud, oppression, unfairly prejudicial conduct, deadlock, or grounds for involuntary dissolution—exist. The petitioner has the burden of proof on this issue. The court may award expenses and counsel fees to either side under section 41(b) [35-9-502(2)] in order to discourage or punish the bringing of harassment suits. Finally, if the complaining shareholder has agreed to arbitrate the dispute in question or to resolve it in some other nonjudicial manner, these remedies must be exhausted under section 40(c) [35-9-501(3)] before a suit under this section may be filed.

2. GROUNDS FOR RELIEF

Only shareholders of record or beneficial owners of shares held by a voting trust may bring an action under section 40(a) [35-9-501(1)] (see the definition of "shareholder" in MBCA section 1.40 [35-1-102 (now repealed)]). This parallels the limitations imposed on shareholder derivative proceedings by section 7.40 of the MBCA [35-1-514 (now repealed)]. Relief may be granted if any of the three categories of circumstances specified exist.

Section 40(a)(1) [35-9-501(1)(a)] provides relief from oppression and related conduct that adversely affects a minority shareholder in any relationship with the corporation. Attempted squeeze-outs in close corporations often involve removing a shareholder from his various offices or diminishing his compensation. The subsection makes clear that relief is not limited to those situations in which the value of the shareholder's share interest has been adversely affected.

No attempt has been made to define oppression, fraud, or unfairly prejudicial conduct. These are elastic terms whose meaning varies with the circumstances presented in a particular case, and it is felt that existing case law provides sufficient guidelines for courts and litigants. See, e.g., Annot., "What amounts to 'oppressive conduct' under statute authorizing dissolution of corporation at suit of minority stockholders," 56 A.L.R.3d 358 (1974).

Section 40(a)(2) [35-9-501(1)(b)] allows relief when the corporation is deadlocked. Whether a deadlock is created by majority or minority shareholders is immaterial and either majority or minority shareholders may claim relief under this subsection. Relief may be granted even though the corporation's financial condition is not threatened with irreparable injury if the court finds that the interest of all the shareholders is being damaged by the deadlock.

Section 40(a)(3) [35-9-501(1)(c)] permits a shareholder to claim relief under this section if grounds for involuntary dissolution exist (see MBCA section 14.30 [35-1-921 (now repealed)]). By filing an action under this section, a greater range of relief is made available to the shareholder. For example, the petitioning shareholder may not wish the corporation dissolved, even though grounds for dissolution exist.

3. PREREQUISITES TO GRANTING RELIEF

Under section 40(c) [35-9-501(3)], nonjudicial remedies that the petitioning shareholder has agreed to seek must be exhausted before a suit may be brought under this section. Arbitration clauses covering a wide variety of intracorporate disputes are commonly included in shareholder agreements. If a dispute is covered by an arbitration agreement, the shareholder must submit the claim to arbitration before filing suit under this section and the right to file under this section after the arbitration proceeding is commenced depends on the preclusive effect of the arbitration under state law independent of the corporation statutes.

The requirement in section 40(d) [35-9-501(4)] that a shareholder who has dissenters' rights with respect to a transaction must file suit challenging the transaction under this section before the time he is required to perfect his dissenters' rights is designed to prevent a shareholder who has foregone his dissenters' rights from filing suit under this section to prevent a proposed transaction from being consummated. If the complaining shareholder has not taken timely action to perfect his dissenters' rights, he is relegated to whatever other rights might be available to him under state or federal law. See, e.g. Official Comment 2 to MBCA section 13.02 [35-1-810 (now repealed)]. If the shareholder does file a timely proceeding under this section, the court must first determine whether relief under this section is warranted. If the court finds that a share purchase is the appropriate remedy, the proceeding should be treated as a valuation proceeding in a dissenters' rights case and consolidated with any other similar dissenters' rights proceedings involving the same transaction.

Section 40(e) [35-9-501(5)] makes clear that the remedies available under this and sections 41 through 43 [35-9-502 through 35-9-504] are cumulative and are in addition to any other remedies the petitioner may have, except as otherwise provided in sections 40(c) and 40(d) [35-9-501(3) and 35-9-501(4)].

Case Notes

Exchange of Corporate Property Not Contemplated in Stockholder Agreement — Minority Shareholder Entitled to Notice of Dissenters' Rights: The provisions of a stockholders' agreement dealt with procedures for the sale and transfer of shares but did not contemplate an exchange transaction of all corporate property or a fundamental change in the corporate form. Therefore, the Montana Business Corporation Act, Title 35, ch. 1, including provisions giving rise to dissenters' rights, rather than the provisions of the stockholders' agreement itself, controlled the resolution of the exchange transaction. Under the Act, a dissenting shareholder may demand that the corporation buy back that shareholder's shares at fair value if the corporation takes an action that fundamentally alters the character of the shareholder's investment. Because the corporation president and majority shareholder exchanged virtually all the corporate property other than in the ordinary course of business, all minority shareholders should have been notified of the proposed exchange or should have been allowed to vote on the proposal at a stockholders' meeting and should have been notified of dissenters' rights within 10 days after the exchange. The minority shareholders' mere failure to object to the exchange did not constitute a waiver of their dissenters' rights because they were never given notice of their right to dissent. Hansen v. 75 Ranch Co., 1998 MT 77, 288 M 310, 957 P2d 32, 55 St. Rep. 322 (1998).

Declaratory Judgment Action by Ranching Corporation Not Action for Full Value of Minority Shares: McCann Ranch, Inc. (MRI), brought a declaratory judgment action against Sharon in order to determine the value of her 600 minority shares for purposes of the dissolution of her marriage. Sharon argued that she should have been paid the full value of her shares because certain actions of MRI were illegal, oppressive, fraudulent, or unfairly prejudicial. The Supreme Court held that the actions of MRI in paying outstanding corporate debts, ceasing payment of dividends, and leasing corporate property did not constitute illegal, oppressive, fraudulent, or unfairly prejudicial acts. The Supreme Court also held that the action brought by Sharon was not pursuant to this section because it was brought as a declaratory judgment action by the corporation. McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239, 53 St. Rep. 349 (1996).

Payment of Attorney Fees Not Required — Inclusion of Litigation Cost in Corporate Value Approved: McCann Ranch, Inc. (MRI), brought a declaratory judgment action against Sharon in order to determine the value of her 600 minority shares for purposes of the dissolution of her marriage. Sharon argued that the District Court erred in refusing to award her attorney fees and costs. The Supreme Court held that inasmuch as the action was a declaratory judgment action brought by the corporation, attorney fees were not payable. The Supreme Court noted that even if the action had been a minority shareholder action, award of attorney fees was discretionary. The District Court did not abuse its discretion because there was no "prevailing party" in the action. The Supreme Court also held that the District Court did not err in the calculation of MRI's litigation expenses for inclusion in the corporate assets prior to valuation of Sharon's shares because the expenses as valued by Sharon were not supported by the record. McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239, 53 St. Rep. 349 (1996).

35-9-502. Ordinary relief.

Official Comments

The purpose of listing the types of relief available, in this section and in sections 42 and 43 [35-9-503 and 35-9-504], is to overcome the reluctance some courts have shown in the past to ordering anything other than dissolution, or possibly a buy-out. See, e.g., Gruenberg v. Goldmine Plantation, Inc., 360 So.2d 884 (La. Ct. App. 1978); Harkey v. Mobley, 552 S.W.2d 79 (Mo. Ct. App. 1977); White v. Perkins, 213 Va.129, 189 S.E.2d 315 (1972). A court should have broad discretion to fashion the most appropriate remedy to resolve the dispute. What works in one case may not work in another. Detailed standards are not provided since they might encourage litigation and also unduly restrict the court's discretion. The dangers of including detailed standards, however, outweigh the advantages. Existing cases applying principles of equity, are, of course, precedents for the exercise of a judge's discretion under this section.

Although most close corporation statutes contain special provisions similar to sections 40(a)(6) and (7) [(sic) correct reference is apparently 35-9-502(1)(f) and (1)(g)], authorizing the appointment of custodians and provisional directors, the number of actual cases in which appointments will be the most appropriate remedy are probably few. Usually the threat of an outsider running the company or acting as a tie-breaker in a deadlock situation leads to a settlement of the controversy.

35-9-503. Extraordinary relief — share purchase.

Official Comments

A court-ordered buy-out is a drastic remedy, particularly if the shareholder ordered to sell his shares does not wish to sell. For this reason section 42 [35-9-503] authorizes a share purchase order only if other relief short of liquidation will not, in the judge's opinion, resolve the dispute. If a buy-out ordered by the court is not consummated, however, an order dissolving the corporation is authorized. This may place pressure on the remaining shareholders to obey the order but also gives them the option of dissolution if they think the order is too onerous.

If the court orders a buy-out, it must also determine the fair value and other terms of the buy-out in accordance with subsection (b) [35-9-503(2)]. Fair value is to be determined under principles developed in dissenters' rights and other valuation cases. The court may require the selling shareholder to enter into a covenant not to compete and also may order an installment sale in order to protect the business and to minimize the financial strain on the purchasers. See also the Official Comment to section 14 [35-9-205].

This section permits the designated purchasers either to consummate the purchase or to permit the corporation to be dissolved. Presumably the remaining shareholders will elect to have the corporation dissolved if its economic prospects are bleak. Leaving the choice to the remaining shareholders is fairer than ordering dissolution without giving the remaining shareholders the opportunity to buy out the complaining shareholder or requiring the remaining shareholders to purchase the shares without giving them the option of voluntary dissolution (which they would not have unless they held sufficient voting shares to approve a dissolution).

If the remaining shareholders agree to comply with the court ordered buy-out, the sale operates as a release of all claims the selling shareholder may have against the corporation, or its directors, officers, or shareholders. The selling shareholder may still pursue any contractual claim he might have against the corporation—for example, a claim for breach of a long term employment contract—to the extent the claim is not dealt with in the court's order. Normally, however, the order should dispose of these contractual claims. The selling shareholder also retains the right to collect any unpaid balance due on the purchase price of his shares, including the right to realize on any collateral given as security for the unpaid balance. Quite frequently the shares being sold have been pledged as security; in these situations, if there is a default, the former shareholder has the choice of foreclosing on the note and again becoming a shareholder or suing to have the corporation dissolved under section 43 [35-9-504].

Under section 42(c) [35-9-503(3)] the court has power to modify its final order at any time upon the petition of any party. For example, should financial or legal constraints prevent the purchasers from fulfilling the terms of a mandated buy-out, the court might modify its order. See also the Official Comment to section 14 [35-9-205].

Finally, the buy-out and dissolution remedies provided by this section and section 43 [35-9-504] are cumulative of ordinary remedies available under section 41 [35-9-502]; for example, a court may award damages in addition to compelling a buy-out. See the Official Comment to section 40 [35-9-501].

CHAPTER 10
PARTNERSHIPS IN GENERAL

Chapter Compiler's Comments

Uniform State Law: This chapter constitutes the "Uniform Partnership Act" approved by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws in 1914. The Uniform Partnership Act has been adopted in 46 states and in the District of Columbia, Guam, and the Virgin Islands. Substantially similar provisions have been adopted in Alabama and Nebraska. Georgia, Louisiana, and Puerto Rico have not adopted the Uniform Act.

Chapter Case Notes

Partnerships — Capacity to Sue in Own Name: On certification from the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, the Montana Supreme Court held that a joint venture between two out-of-state corporations had the capacity to bring suit as a plaintiff against a corporation under Montana law. Relying on the Uniform Partnership Act and Montana statutes that allow a partnership to be sued in its own name and to sue in Small Claims Court, the Supreme Court found clear legislative intent to treat partnerships as distinct entities with the power to sue. Decker Coal Co. v. Commonwealth Edison Co., 220 M 251, 714 P2d 155, 43 St. Rep. 337 (1986).

Case Notes

Partnership Generally Governed by Partnership Agreement — Statutory Rules Applicable in Absence of Agreement to Contrary: A partnership is an association of two or more persons to carry on a business for profit as co-owners. An informal or oral agreement is usually sufficient to establish a partnership, and when a partnership agreement exists, the agreement will generally govern relations between partners. The statutory rules regarding partnerships are default rules that apply only in the absence of a partnership agreement to the contrary. McCormick v. Brevig, 2004 MT 179, 322 M 112, 96 P3d 697 (2004).

35-10-103. Knowledge and notice.

Official Comment

The word "notice" in judicial opinions and in other legal writings is often used when "knowledge" as here defined is intended. This has led to a great deal of confusion, of which the extraordinary expression "constructive notice" is evidence. To avoid this confusion the word "notice" as here defined designates definite things only, which, if proved to have been done, enable the person doing them to assert that notice has been had and claim the benefit thereof, irrespective of whether the person charged has had knowledge or not. By adhering strictly to this conception throughout the act, the things which a person must do in order to be confident that he can claim the benefit of "notice" are made plain.

A definition of the word "knowledge" enables it to be indicated clearly when "knowledge" as distinguished from "notice" must be had.

The present law in regard to that which must be done by the person who desired to be in a position to claim the benefit of "notice" is in considerable confusion. Under our case law, as a rule, in ordinary transactions, except those which relate to commercial paper, no one has had "notice" until he has "knowledge"; though, of course, "notice" to an agent is notice to a principal. Whether the delivery of a letter containing a "statement of a fact" would or would not be sufficient if the addressee did not read the letter is doubtful. The court might as well hold that the addressee, by his neglect to read the statement, was estopped from denying that he had "notice." The change in the law, if it is a change, which the present section as now drawn effects, is, it is submitted, in the right direction. The section does not go to the extent of saying that the mere deposit of a "written statement of the fact" in the mail is enough to charge the addressee with "notice." The addressor by selecting the post-office, telegraph or other public service corporation, as the method by which the letter shall be transferred, makes them his agents, not the agents of the addressee. On the other hand the section does go to the extent of declaring that if such written statement is received at the residence or place of business of the addressee in the usual way, the addressor, having done all that was reasonably possible to do to give the addressee "knowledge," should have the benefit of his diligence.

The section as drawn, in dealing with the character of the "statement of fact," where the statement is not a verbal statement merely requires a "written statement." The omission of the word "printed" is after deliberation. To insert the word "printed" might raise a doubt as to the effect of the delivery of a newspaper containing a "statement of the fact." There ought to be no doubt that this is an insufficient statement. Unquestionably, such delivery is not a delivery of a "written statement of the fact;" but, on the other hand, if a printed or typewritten statement of the fact—as the dissolution of the partnership—is made on a separate card which is enclosed in an envelope and given to the addressee, there would appear to be no doubt that any court would hold that "a written statement of the fact" had been delivered to such person. The principle is clear. Nothing should be regarded as "a written statement of the fact" which is not so prepared as to cause the one to whom it is addressed, as a reasonably prudent man, to read it. An exact definition of the character of the statement which is to be made is practically impossible; neither do we believe it to be desirable. The words employed, "written statement of the fact," do not preclude the statement from being typewritten or printed but they do emphasize—that which it is necessary to emphasize—that the statement must be a separate statement of the fact made to the addressee, and not a general statement for all the world to read or not as fancy dictates.

The notes to [35-10-104], in regard to "estoppel" and "agency," will perhaps answer some questions which may arise in connection with the present section.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 238 substituted present section clarifying the interpretation of "knowledge" and "notice" for former language that read: "(1) A person has "knowledge" of a fact within the meaning of this chapter not only when he has actual knowledge thereof but also when he has knowledge of such other facts as in the circumstances show bad faith.

(2) A person has "notice" of a fact within the meaning of this chapter when the person who claims the benefit of the notice:

(a) states the fact to such person; or

(b) delivers through the mail or by other means of communication a written statement of the fact to such person or to a proper person at his place of business or residence."

Severability: Section 62, Ch. 238, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

35-10-104. Uniformity of application and construction.

Official Comment

[Subsection] (1). This provision is customary in American Codes [Cal.C.C., section 4; 1 Ala. Code (1907), section 12; 1 Idaho Rev.Codes, section 4].

[Subsection] (2). This paragraph, applying to the whole act, obviates the necessity of constant repetition of the principle. Its necessity is illustrated in the provisions relating to "notice," [35-10-103(2)]. A "written statement" may be delivered in such a way as to induce the person to whom it is delivered to abstain from reading it. No one who has thus delivered a written statement should be permitted to claim the benefit of the notice. This result might be attained by inserting after the word "delivers," [35-10-103(2)(b)], the words "in good faith;" but these words would not provide for the case where the person who has delivered a written notice in good faith, changes his mind, and in bad faith reacquires the writing before it is read.

[Subsection] (3). This act is a partnership act and not an act relating to agency or any branch thereof. One of the causes of the present confused use of the word notice is due to the attempt to mix two distinct things: what is notice to a person of a fact, and how far notice to an agent is notice to a principal. The second question is wholly a question of the law of agency; the first has nothing to do with the law of agency. The first is dealt with in [35-10-103]; the second is not a question within the scope of a partnership act.

This [subsection] also avoids constant reference throughout the act to agents. For instance, in [35-10-301], there is provision that a partner cannot bind the partnership where the person dealing with him has knowledge that the partner with whom he deals has no authority to bind the partnership. The knowledge of an authorized agent of such person should, of course, be effectual. This [subsection] in regard to the law of agency avoids any possibility of a different construction, and renders unnecessary the insertion of the words "or authorized agent" after the word "person" in the section referred to and other similar sections.

[Subsection] (5). The wording is based on the American Codes. [Idaho Rev.Codes, section 4; Cal.C.C., section 4; Rev.Stat. of Colo. (1908), sections 467, 468; Gen.Stat. of Kans. (1905), 1633; 1 Burns Anno.Ind.Stat. (1908), sections 240, 241, 1356, 1359; Cobbey's Rev.Stat.Neb. 11, 363; 2 S. Dak.Comp.Laws (1908), 313, 316, 318.]

Charging Partnership More Interest Than Amount Paid on Partnership Loan Considered Adverse to Partnership: A partner, acting unilaterally and with no business reason, paid off a partnership loan carrying a 9.25% interest rate and then sought to charge the partnership 10% and keep the profit. The District Court ordered that the partner be paid 9.25% on the loan, and the partner appealed. The Supreme Court held that ordering the partner to be paid 10% interest would be inequitable and unlawful and that the partner's action constituted dealing with the partnership as a party with an adverse interest in violation of the duty of good faith and fair dealing for a partner. The District Court was affirmed. McCormick v. Brevig, 2007 MT 195, 338 M 370, 169 P3d 352 (2007).

Partnership Agreement — Definition of "Practice of Medicine" — Application to Psychologists: Former partners of a medical clinic sued the clinic, claiming they were entitled to full partnership interest payments under a partnership agreement. The agreement provided for a reduction of partnership interest payments if a former partner continued to engage in the "practice of medicine" within 3 years of disassociation. The plaintiffs, who were psychologists still working in the community, claimed the phrase "practice of medicine" was a technical term that did not include psychologists. The District Court disagreed and concluded that under contract law, the ordinary and plain meaning of the phrase should be followed and that the ordinary meaning of the phrase included the practice of psychology. The plaintiffs appealed to the Supreme Court, which affirmed the District Court's grant of summary judgment in favor of the clinic. Krajacich v. Great Falls Clinic, LLP, 2012 MT 82, 364 Mont. 455, 276 P.3d 922.

Allocation of Referral Fee Among Law Partners — Summary Judgment Proper: Attorney Frampton received a large settlement fee in a personal injury case that was referred to him personally. Although he and one other partner did all the work on the case, Frampton gave each of the other partners a $25,000 bonus but kept his share of the settlement. One of the partners, Phelps, did no work on the case but was dissatisfied with the bonus and sued Frampton, asserting that his share should have been $120,000. Phelps asserted that Frampton breached the firm's written contract, violated partnership laws, breached an oral contract to share a substantial portion of the fee, breached the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, breached the fiduciary duty, and should have established a constructive trust because the fee was not Frampton's sole property and Frampton would be unjustly enriched by keeping the fee. The District Court granted summary judgment to Frampton on all the claims, and Phelps appealed. The Supreme Court examined each claim and affirmed. An unambiguous partnership agreement controlled the fee allocation. Although the District Court erred in finding that no covenant of good faith and fair dealing existed, Frampton did not breach the covenant because Phelps was not deprived of a benefit or justified expectation created by the partnership agreement. Phelps did not work on the case and was not entitled to a percentage of the fee under the agreement, and any expectation that Phelps had of receiving a share was unjustified. Additionally, the claim that Phelps had for breach of the written contract was directed at acts or omissions of the firm, and Phelps was barred from bringing claims against the firm by a signed release. Phelps v. Frampton, 2007 MT 263, 339 M 330, 170 P3d 474 (2007).

Partnership Generally Governed by Partnership Agreement — Statutory Rules Applicable in Absence of Agreement to Contrary: A partnership is an association of two or more persons to carry on a business for profit as co-owners. An informal or oral agreement is usually sufficient to establish a partnership, and when a partnership agreement exists, the agreement will generally govern relations between partners. The statutory rules regarding partnerships are default rules that apply only in the absence of a partnership agreement to the contrary. McCormick v. Brevig, 2004 MT 179, 322 M 112, 96 P3d 697 (2004).

Allocation of Losses in Other Than Equal Proportion Than Division of Profits: One of two equal partners claimed all of the partnership's losses on his personal taxes for the purpose of receiving a tax benefit. When the time came for final settlement, it was contended that half the losses suffered by the partnership should be assigned to the estate and that because the losses for which the estate was allegedly responsible were greater than the assets to which the estate was entitled, nothing was owed to the estate from the partnership. The District Court held that because one partner benefited from the partnership losses, he must also bear the burden of the action and was effectively precluded from trying to assign a share of the losses to the estate. Citing section 704(b) of the Internal Revenue Code, the Supreme Court agreed, holding that when partners exercise their right to allot partnership losses in some fashion other than in equal proportion to their division of profits, that allotment controls for purposes of determining losses during settlement. The District Court did not err in refusing to allocate partnership losses to the estate, which would have diminished the value of the estate's interest in the partnership. In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767, 55 St. Rep. 1251 (1998).

Partners' Failure to Comply With Agreement Terms Resulting in No Explicit Partnership Value — Fair Market Value Properly Ascribed: A 1968 agreement established the value of a partnership at $47,790.30 and required the partners to arrive annually at a new and updated value that would serve for the following year as the value of the partnership. However, the partners never reestablished any different value during the duration of the partnership. After one partner died in 1995, the District Court properly concluded that fair market value at the time of death should apply because the partners failed to comply with the terms of the agreement and thus were left without an explicitly agreed-upon value. In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767, 55 St. Rep. 1251 (1998), following Chapman v. Dunnegan, 665 SW 2d 643 (Mo. Ct. App. 1984).

Nature of Partnership

35-10-201. Partnership as entity.

Official Comment

[Subsection] (1). Explanation of the Reason for the Words Employed in the Definition. The first inquiry is, Why say a partnership is "an association of two or more persons"? In view of the fact that the word "association" itself implies the acting together of two or more persons, why not merely say that a partnership is an association to carry on business in which the members are co-owners of the business? The word person includes, as stated in [35-10-102], "individuals, partnerships, corporations, and other associations." The definition as worded thus asserts, what would be doubtful if the words "of two or more persons" were omitted, namely, that any one of these associations may become members of a partnership. It is true that if two or more corporations attempt to form a partnership the contract may be ultra vires as to both (Boyd v. American Carbon Black Co., (1897) 37 Atl. 937, 182 Pa.St. 206); but the capacity of corporations to contract is a question of corporation law. Under the present law it appears that a partnership can, as such, be a member of another partnership, if that was the intent of the parties. [Raymond

v. Putman, (1862) 44 N.H. 160; Cheap v. Cramond, (1821), 4 Barn. & Ald. 663, 6 E.C.L. 645; In re Hamilton, (1880) 1 Fed. 800; Riddle v. Whitehill, (1890) 10 S.Ct. 924, 135 U.S. 621, 34 U.S. (L.Ed.) 282.]

The words "to carry on as co-owners a business" remove any doubt in the following case: A and B sign partnership articles and make their agreed contributions to the common fund. A refuses to carry on business as agreed. Is there a partnership to be wound up in accordance with the provisions of Part [6] "Dissolution and Winding-up"? The words quoted require an affirmative answer to this question. If the words "carrying on business" had been used, in the case given, no partnership would exist, and Part [6] would not apply.

The definition asserts that the associates are "co-owners" of the business. This distinguishes a partnership from an agency—an association of principal and agent. A business is a series of acts directed toward an end. Ownership involves the power of ultimate control. To state that partners are co-owners of a business is to state that they each have the power of ultimate control.

Lastly, the definition asserts that the business is for profit. Partnership is a branch of our commercial law; it has developed in connection with a particular business association, and it is, therefore, essential that the operation of the act should be confined to associations organized for profit.

In view of the many definitions of a partnership which have been proposed, it is desirable to note the reasons for the omission of certain ideas expressed in some of the definitions cited by Lindley in his work on Partnership, pp. 11, 12.

It is not indicated that the association must be a voluntary one. In the domain of private law the term association necessarily involves the idea that the association is voluntary.

To say that the association must be created by contract, is not only unnecessary, but in view of the varied use of the word "contract" in our law, if the word is used an explanation would have to be made as to whether the contract could be implied, and if so, whether it could be implied in law or only implied as a fact. By merely saying that it is an association these difficulties are avoided.

Again, it is not said that the business must be lawful business. The effect of the unlawfulness of the business is dealt with under Part [6] "Dissolution and Winding-up." Section [35-10-603(3), now repealed], provides that dissolution is produced "[b]y any event which makes it unlawful for the business of the partnership to be carried on or for the members to carry it on in partnership." If the business is wholly unlawful, then the partnership is dissolved the moment it is created. The omission of the word "lawful" in the definition does not prevent this result. Very often, however, a business may be in part lawful and in part unlawful. Hotelkeepers may run a "dive." Placing the word "lawful" before the word business in the definition would tend to throw a doubt on the propriety of the orderly winding up of such a business as a partnership.

[Subsection] (2). The reason for not following the English act and attempting to enumerate the associations which are excluded because formed under special statutes, is because such an enumeration is unnecessary, and because the [subsection] would have to be differently worded for each state. The [subsection] as drawn makes any association formed under a statute a partnership if it would have been a partnership in the state if the act had not been adopted. If the association would not have been a partnership had the act not been adopted, the adoption of the act does not make it a partnership. In short, the adoption of the act does not change the legal status in the state of any association formed under a statute.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 238 substituted present section defining a partnership as an entity for former language that read: "(1) A partnership is an association of two or more persons to carry on as co-owners a business for profit.

(2) But any association formed under any other statute of this state or any statute adopted by authority other than the authority of this state is not a partnership under this chapter unless such association would have been a partnership in this state prior to the adoption of this chapter. But this chapter shall apply to limited partnerships except insofar as the statutes relating to such partnerships are inconsistent herewith."

DECISIONS AFTER 1993 REVISION

No Liability for Unpaid Wage Claim by Former Business Partner: Donald and Gail Peterson owned and operated a bar and casino. When Gail discovered an intimate relationship between Donald and plaintiff who was an employee, she demanded that they leave the establishment, and Gail then operated the business alone. The Petersons agreed to divorce, and as part of the settlement, Donald was allowed to operate the jointly owned business, receive all the profits, and assume all liabilities generated by the operation of the business, and Gail ceased any involvement with the day-to-day operations. Donald and plaintiff continued to operate the business as a couple, but Donald paid plaintiff no wages for 18 months. Gail eventually purchased the business assets and assumed the business debts and liabilities, at which point plaintiff brought a claim against Gail for the unpaid wages. An administrative judge held that the Petersons were jointly and severally liable as partners. The District Court upheld the decision, and Gail appealed. The Supreme Court noted that all four criteria in MacArthur Co. v. Stein, 282 M 85, 934 P2d 214 (1997), must be established to prove the existence of a partnership. Here, three of the four criteria did not exist after Gail relinquished control of the business to Donald. Because Gail was not a partner during the time that the wage claim arose, she bore no responsibility for wages owing during the period in question. In re Wage Claim of Harker v. Peterson, 2003 MT 175, 316 M 393, 72 P3d 949 (2003). See also In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767 (1998).

Whether Partnership Exists — Mixed Question of Fact and Law: The question of whether a partnership exists constitutes a mixed question of fact and law. Courts must decide as a matter of law what constitutes a partnership, but the determination of whether the evidence in a given case supports the existence of a partnership is a question of fact. When the facts are undisputed or susceptible of only one inference, the question of whether a partnership exists between particular persons is one of law for the court. DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Joint Purchase of Real Estate — Finding of Partnership: The joint purchase of undeveloped real estate as tenants in common with equal contributions and with intent to resell the property for a profit, the subsequent consent to exchange the property for a commercial building, and the right to share in profits from the sale of the building are evidence that the parties were engaged together in business for profit. Barrett v. Larsen, 256 M 330, 846 P2d 1012, 50 St. Rep. 96 (1993).

Elements of Joint Venture: To qualify as a joint venture, four elements must be met: (1) an express or implied agreement or contract creating the joint venture; (2) a common purpose among the parties; (3) community of interest; and (4) an equal right to control of the venture. Weingart v. C&W Taylor Partnership, 248 M 76, 809 P2d 576, 48 St. Rep. 332 (1991).

Failure to Establish Partnership: Elements necessary to establish a partnership are outlined in Bender v. Bender, 144 M 470, 397 P2d 957 (1965). Partnership was not established where a party failed to provide sufficient evidence of: (1) commencement of partnership; (2) intent to form a partnership; (3) agreement to share profits and losses; and (4) the party's right to control partnership assets. Smith v. Estate of Smith, 230 M 140, 749 P2d 512, 45 St. Rep. 93 (1988), followed in Antonick v. Jones, 236 M 279, 769 P2d 1240, 46 St. Rep. 359 (1989), and in Wiberg v. 17 Bar, Inc., 241 M 490, 788 P2d 292, 47 St. Rep. 429 (1990), with Wiberg distinguished in Barrett v. Larsen, 256 M 330, 846 P2d 1012, 50 St. Rep. 96 (1993). See also Mont. Bank of Red Lodge v. Lightfield, 237 M 41, 771 P2d 571, 46 St. Rep. 605 (1989), Weingart v. Insubstantial Evidence of Partnership: There was conflicting evidence of an intention to form a partnership among three brothers—Jim, Fred, and Ross. There was: (1) no evidence of a contribution by Ross of anything promoting the partnership enterprise; (2) no joint proprietary interest in or right of mutual control over the business or its assets; and (3) a finding that, with regard to taxes, Ross received a share of net profits and losses of the business as payment of wages as an employee. The lower court properly held that Ross was a business employee rather than a partner. Pulliam v. Pulliam, 226 M 94, 733 P2d 1299, 44 St. Rep. 483 (1987).

Finding of Partnership — Splitting of Profits, Advertising, and Merging of Resources and Talents — Lack of Intent Not Controlling: Father and son shared equipment as needed, stored seed potatoes together in son's warehouse, advertised under the name of "Wilbur Kimm and Son", and split profits in a joint account. Son's insurer sued father's insurer for contribution for claims paid that were filed by buyers against son for crop damages caused by seeds treated by son. District Court found no partnership existed, primarily based on father's and son's testimony that they did not intend for a partnership to exist. The Supreme Court reversed and ordered judgment granting plaintiff insurer's motion for summary judgment. The Supreme Court held that splitting of profits, coupled with advertising under a joint name and the merging of resources and talents for the growing of the potatoes, preponderated against the District Court's finding of no partnership. Truck Ins. Exch. v. Indus. Indem. Co., 212 M 297, 688 P2d 1243, 41 St. Rep. 1835 (1984), followed in MacArthur Co. v. Stein, 282 M 85, 934 P2d 214, 54 St. Rep. 254 (1997).

Finding of Partnership — Authority of Partner: The Ellingson Agency and The Four Seasons Motor Inn held a lot as tenants in common. They made equal contributions to the purchase price and received equal distributions of the proceeds. They had made similar purchases for resale in the past. The Ellingson Agency collected the rent on the property and kept records of the amounts collected. The rent proceeds were used to pay property taxes and maintain a house on the property. These facts were sufficient to find that the corporations were acting as a partnership. Ellingson, as a partner, had the authority to enter into an agreement to convey the property. The buyer was able to compel specific performance of the buy-sell agreement. Walsh v. Ellingson Agency, 188 M 367, 613 P2d 1381 (1980), overruling Ivins v. Hardy, 120 M 35, 179 P2d 745 (1947), with Walsh followed in Barrett v. Larsen, 256 M 330, 846 P2d 1012, 50 St. Rep. 96 (1993).

Trial Court Selection of One Appraisal of Partnership Property Over Another Not Erroneous: Pursuant to a court order, partnership property was to be sold and the proceeds divided between two partners. Each partner desired to keep certain property, so in 2001 they agreed to have all the property appraised and have each partner purchase the desired equipment from the other. Partner Otto was dissatisfied with the appraisal and hired another appraiser to value the property. Despite having sought and received the second appraisal, Otto did not pay partner William for the property. About 2 years later, Otto hired a third appraiser, who completed an appraisal in 2006. In its post-2006 trial order, the District Court ordered Otto to pay William the value established in the second appraisal. Otto contended on appeal that the court erred in choosing the second appraisal over the third. The Supreme Court affirmed. The District Court's selection was a factual as opposed to a legal decision, and because there was substantial credible evidence to support the factual decision, the Supreme Court declined to disturb it. Baltrusch v. Baltrusch, 2008 MT 245, 344 M 489, 190 P3d 1034 (2008).

Property Acquired by Partner, but Not in Capacity as Partner, Considered Separate Property: Defendant's wife purchased 10 cows to live on the partnership ranch. The following year, she transferred the brand and ownership of the cattle to her husband, a partner in the ranch, and his sons. The cattle were thereafter listed and treated as partnership property for tax purposes, and proceeds from sale of the cattle were placed in a partnership account. When the partnership was winding up, the District Court concluded that the cattle were a partnership asset. Defendant contested the finding, arguing that the mere inclusion of the cattle in partnership tax returns was legally insufficient to transfer title of the cattle to the partnership. The Supreme Court agreed. Under subsection (5) of this section, property that is acquired in the name of a partner without an indication that the property is being transferred to that person in the capacity of a partner of the partnership is presumed to be separate property, even if the property is used for partnership purposes. Thus, the cattle were improperly characterized as partnership property, and the District Court was reversed. McCormick v. Brevig, 2004 MT 179, 322 M 112, 96 P3d 697 (2004). See also In re Marriage of Schultz, 199 M 332, 649 P2d 1268 (1982).

Separate Business Started by Partner Not Considered Partnership Asset: When one partner, Otto, refused to sign any more indemnity agreements, the other partner, William, started a separate business to allow further entry into additional bonding contracts. When the partnership dissolved, Otto contended that the assets of the separate business should be considered jointly owned and be equally divided. The District Court held that William's business was not a partnership asset, and the Supreme Court agreed because: (1) William's business was not purchased with partnership assets; (2) Otto had no part in operating William's business; (3) William's business paid rent to the partnership for equipment; (4) income from some of William's construction projects was donated to the partnership; and (5) William's business did not profit at the expense of or compete with the partnership. Baltrusch v. Baltrusch, 2003 MT 357, 319 M 23, 83 P3d 256 (2003).

Vehicles Listed as Partnership Assets Considered Property Subject to Equal Division Upon Dissolution of Partnership: Two partners agreed that the proceeds from the sale of all partnership assets would be divided equally between them upon dissolution. The District Court included two vehicles that were titled personally to one of the partners and his wife. The other partner contended that the personal use of the vehicles constituted conversion and that he was entitled to damages and interest under 27-1-320. The Supreme Court disagreed. Under this section, partnership property includes property purchased with partnership assets even if not purchased in the name of the partnership. Further, whether property is partnership property depends on the intent of the partners, as indicated by agreement or conduct. In this case, the vehicles were used for partnership business and listed as partnership assets and therefore considered partnership property, so proceeds from the vehicles' sale were properly divided between the partners. Baltrusch v. Baltrusch, 2003 MT 357, 319 M 23, 83 P3d 256 (2003).

Judgment Not Creating Lien Prior to Execution on Personal Property: In settling the assets of a partnership, the District Court stated that its judgment constituted a lien against all personal property of the partnership. The remaining partner contended that based on 25-9-301, the court lacked authority to create a lien against personal property and that a judgment cannot become a lien against personal property until there has been an execution to enforce the judgment. Reversing, the Supreme Court agreed that there is no authority for a District Court to summarily convert a judgment to a lien against personal property, noting that a lien does not arise prior to execution on personal property. In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767, 55 St. Rep. 1251 (1998).

Real Property Properly Not Considered Partnership Asset: The District Court refused to consider certain real property as a partnership asset, concluding that it was never intended by the partners that the property should become an asset subject to distribution or taken into account upon dissolution of the partnership or death of a partner. The Supreme Court noted that the question of whether property belongs to a partnership depends primarily on the intent of the partners, and that intent may be inferred from a variety of sources, such as an agreement between the partners or by their conduct, although no single factor is determinative. The presumption that property is partnership property if it is acquired with partnership assets is rebuttable. In the present case, one partner contributed land for partnership use, but reserved title and the right to sell the land. The partners' intent clearly indicated that the property was not intended to become a partnership asset, and the District Court did not err when it refused to award the estate a share of the value of the land. In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767, 55 St. Rep. 1251 (1998).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Master's Report Conclusive Unless Clearly Erroneous: The plaintiff, in a partnership dissolution action, argued that the lower court had erred in finding that a tavern he had given his ex-wife during his divorce was partnership property and that the court erred in placing a $50,000 value on the property. The Supreme Court held that there was sufficient evidence to find that the tavern had been originally purchased with partnership funds and therefore remained a partnership asset. The court also ruled that the valuation placed on the property was that arrived at by a court-appointed master and that unless clearly erroneous, the valuation was binding on the lower court. Mehl v. Mehl, 241 M 310, 786 P2d 1173, 47 St. Rep. 292 (1990).

Death of Partner — Disposition of Property Held Jointly by Partners: Robert and William, brothers, opened a joint checking account in 1947, paid all ranch expenses through the account, put all ranch income in the account, and equally split net profits. All cattle were branded with either of two brands, each of which was registered in the name of "William Palmer or Robert Palmer". The brothers were also joint tenants in a commodity brokerage account. The Supreme Court held that the cattle and both accounts were partnership property not held in joint tenancy and remained so upon Robert's death. Thus, they did not pass to William as the surviving joint tenant; rather, they remained in the partnership for the purpose of winding up the partnership and paying its liabilities, after which William must account to Robert's survivor, his widow, for Robert's share of the partnership. By its very nature, partnership property must be treated differently than property of individuals, including property held by individuals as joint tenants but who are not in partnership. This rule applies regardless of the formal legal manner in which the property is held. This is a rule of equity developed over hundreds of years and codified in the Uniform Partnership Act. In re Estate of Palmer, 218 M 285, 708 P2d 242, 42 St. Rep. 1585 (1985), followed in Fiedler v. Fiedler, 266 M 133, 879 P2d 675, 51 St. Rep. 691 (1994).

Acquisition of Real Property by Partnership: A partnership can acquire real estate by having the partners take title as cotenants. Robertson v. Robertson, 180 M 226, 590 P2d 113 (1978).

Ownership of Real Property: As against purchasers and lien creditors dealing with the owners of land on the faith of a recorded title and without notice that ownership is different from what appears on record, parol evidence is inadmissible to show that land conveyed to the grantees as individuals was held by them as partnership property. Robertson v. Robertson, 180 M 226, 590 P2d 113 (1978).

Part 3
Relation of Partner and Partnership to Other Persons

Part Case Notes

Individual Liability of Partners — General Rule: The Supreme Court cited the Wisconsin case of Phillip Lithographing Co. v. Babich, 135 NW 2d 343 (1965), in determining whether certain partners were individually liable on a contract. The general rule is that partners who continue to hold themselves out as such after the formation of a corporation cannot escape responsibility for contracts entered into after the change in business status without adequate notice that the partnership has been dissolved. This is especially true when the corporation operates under the same name and circumstances as the partnership. Springer v. Opsahl, 229 M 10, 744 P2d 884, 44 St. Rep. 1738 (1987).

Suit Against Partnership by Partner's Spouse: The spouse of one general partner may sue the partnership in tort for her individual property loss. Norick v. Dove Constr., 204 M 57, 662 P2d 1318, 40 St. Rep. 660 (1983).

35-10-301. Partner as agent of partnership.

Official Comment

The words "including the execution in the partnership name of any instrument" [in subsection (1)] avoid any possible doubt as to whether a partner has the authority, in the ordinary course of business, to enter into formal contracts for his partnership, or to convey partnership property when the conveyance is the result of a sale in the ordinary course of partnership business.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 238 at beginning inserted introductory clause; in (1) and (2) substituted "ordinary course of the partnership business or business of the kind carried on by the partnership" for "the usual way"; deleted (3) and (4) that read: "(3) Unless authorized by the other partners or unless they have abandoned the business, one or more but less than all the partners have no authority to:

(a) assign the partnership property in trust for creditors or on the assignee's promise to pay the debts of the partnership;

(b) dispose of the goodwill of the business;

(c) do any other act which would make it impossible to carry on the ordinary business of a partnership;

(d) confess a judgment;

(e) submit a partnership claim or liability to arbitration or reference.

(4) No act of a partner in contravention of a restriction on authority shall bind the partnership to persons having knowledge of the restriction"; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 62, Ch. 238, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

Application to Existing Relationships: Section 63, Ch. 238, L. 1993, provided: "(1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, [this act] applies to all partnerships in existence on October 1, 1993, that were formed under Title 35, chapter 10, or any other predecessor law providing for the formation, operation, and liquidation of partnerships.

(2) [This act] does not impair the obligations of a contract existing on October 1, 1993, or affect an action or proceeding begun or right accrued before October 1, 1993.

(3) A judgment against a partnership or a partner in an action commenced before October 1, 1993, may be enforced in the same manner as a judgment rendered before October 1, 1993."

DECISIONS AFTER 1993 REVISION

Termination of Land Leases Within Regular Course of Business — No Breach of Fiduciary Duty: A partnership held land leases for over 30 years until the partner who managed the leases realized that the leases were no longer economically advantageous to the partnership, at which point he offered the leases to his sons, who formed a separate corporation to manage the leases. The other partner contended that transferring the leases without his permission was a breach of fiduciary duty. The District Court held that there was a legitimate reason for the partnership to terminate the leases, that the decision was made in the regular course of business, and that no breach of duty occurred. The Supreme Court agreed. The partner who managed the leases did not act out of his authority as a partner or bind the other partner to something undesirable. The transfer did not harm the partnership, nor was the transfer out of the ordinary; therefore, no liability attached to the lease transfer. Baltrusch v. Baltrusch, 2003 MT 357, 319 M 23, 83 P3d 256 (2003).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Property Not Assignable Without Consent of All Partners: Two partners, without the knowledge or consent of the third partner who had instigated an action to dissolve the partnership, executed a trust indenture assigning marina property owned by the partnership as collateral for the loan. The Supreme Court held that the marina was partnership property and that the two partners had no authority to bind the partnership or encumber their individual one-third interests in the partnership property without the consent of all partners. The savings and loan had no interest in the property. Schrammeck v. Fed. Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. 258 M 391, 853 P2d 702, 50 St. Rep. 580 (1993).

Partnership by Estoppel — Corporate Shareholders: The shareholders of a corporation can be liable as partners to a person dealing with the corporation if through some action or inaction of the corporation the person reasonably believes he is dealing with a partnership and relies upon that belief in dealing with the corporation. In this case there were various partnerships and a corporation, all with similar names and consisting of the same people, and although some evidence tended to show that operations of the corporation were apparently partnership operations, the existence of a partnership by estoppel is a factual issue, and in this case summary judgment finding such a partnership was improperly granted because factual issues remained. Gamble Robinson Co. v. Carousel Properties, 212 M 305, 688 P2d 283, 41 St. Rep. 1757 (1984).

Realtor Buying Property — Not Usual Way of Doing Business: As part of a real estate transaction in which the buyers needed to sell a piece of property in order to purchase other property, the realtor acting on behalf of the buyers executed a memorandum stating that if the property was not sold by a set time, she would purchase the property at a stated price. The memorandum was not signed by the realtor's alleged partner. On appeal, he contended he could not be bound by the memorandum under the Statute of Frauds. The Supreme Court held that the realtor could not bind her ostensible partner since there was no written authority of agency and because the purchase of real estate was not the realtor's usual way of doing business. The alleged partner could not be bound to the contract evidenced by the memo absent his authorization thereunto in writing. McNabb v. Norine, 204 M 330, 664 P2d 927, 40 St. Rep. 878 (1983).

Finding of Partnership — Authority of Partner: The Ellingson Agency and The Four Seasons Motor Inn held a lot as tenants in common. They made equal contributions to the purchase price and received equal distributions of the proceeds. They had made similar purchases for resale in the past. The Ellingson Agency collected the rent on the property and kept records of the amounts collected. The rent proceeds were used to pay property taxes and maintain a house on the property. These facts were sufficient to find that the corporations were acting as a partnership. Ellingson, as a partner, had the authority to enter into an agreement to convey the property. The buyer was able to compel specific performance of the buy-sell agreement. Walsh v. Ellingson Agency, 188 M 367, 613 P2d 1381 (1980), overruling Ivins v. Hardy, 120 M 35, 179 P2d 745 (1947).

Business of Partnership: The sale of all the property of a partnership is not the "carrying on in the usual way the business of the partnership" within meaning of this section. Ditzel v. Kent, 131 M 129, 308 P2d 628 (1957).

Sale of Partnership Property: When real estate broker dealing with members of a partnership knew that certain partner did not have authority to bind the other partners, he could not bring action for breach of contract for payment of commission when the only signer to contract was that partner. Ditzel v. Kent, 131 M 129, 308 P2d 628 (1957).

35-10-302. Transfer of partnership property.

Official Comment

The adoption of this section does away with the existing uncertainty surrounding the subject of the conveyance of real property belonging to a partnership.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 238 substituted present section regarding transfer of partnership property for former language that read: "(1) Where title to real property is in the partnership name, any partner may convey title to such property by a conveyance executed in the partnership name, but the partnership may recover such property unless the partner's act binds the partnership under the provisions of 35-10-301(1) or unless such property has been conveyed by the grantee or a person claiming through such grantee to a holder for value without knowledge that the partner, in making the conveyance, has exceeded his authority.

(2) Where title to real property is in the name of the partnership, a conveyance executed by a partner in his own name passes the equitable interest of the partnership, provided the act is one within the authority of the partner under the provisions of 35-10-301(1).

(3) Where title to real property is in the name of one or more but not all the partners and the record does not disclose the right of the partnership, the partners in whose name the title stands may convey title to such property, but the partnership may recover such property if the partner's act does not bind the partnership under the provisions of 35-10-301(1), unless the purchaser or his assignee is a holder for value without knowledge.

(4) Where the title to real property is in the name of one or more or all the partners or in a third person in trust for the partnership, a conveyance executed by a partner in the partnership name or in his own name passes the equitable interest of the partnership, provided the act is one within the authority of the partner under the provisions of 35-10-301(1).

(5) Where the title to real property is in the names of all the partners, a conveyance executed by all the partners passes all their rights in such property."

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Dismissal of Partner Sued in Individual Capacity: It was not error for the trial court to dismiss a partner sued in his individual capacity when there was no evidence he was personally involved with any alleged wrongful acts. The dismissal did not affect his liability as a partner. Niles v. Big Sky Eyewear, 236 M 455, 771 P2d 114, 46 St. Rep. 504 (1989).

Negligence Not in Ordinary Course of Farming Partnership: Plaintiff sued father and son, both as individuals and as members of farming partnership, for injuries he received while a passenger in plane piloted by son. Plaintiff failed to establish that son's alleged negligence took place in the ordinary course of the farming partnership. Therefore, the trial court properly granted father's motion for summary judgment in claim against him. Waller v. Engelke, 227 M 470, 741 P2d 385, 44 St. Rep. 1241 (1987).

35-10-307. Partner's liability.

Official Comment

The actual condition of the American statute law affecting the nature of partnership liability is as follows:

In the following states by specific declaration of statutes all partnership liability is made both joint and several: [Miss.Code (1906), par. 2683; Mo.Anno.Stat. (1906), pars. 889, 892; 2 Ala.Code, par. 2506; N.Mex.Comp.L. (1897), pars. 2894, 2895, 2942, 2943; Md.Gen. Law (1904), p. 1357; W.Va.Code (1906), pars. 1996, 3467, 3787; D.C.Code (1889), par. 1205; Iowa (1897), pars. 3465, 3468; Gen.Stat.Kansas (1900), par. 1641; Minn.Rev.Laws (1905), pars. 4282, 4283; N.C.Rev. Laws (1905), par. 413; Ark.Statutes, Kirby (1904), pars. 4420, 4422]. In some of these states the liability is merely "deemed to be joint and several for the purpose of suit." In some of the states referred to the statutes are general; that is, they include all joint liability; while in others, there is the general statement followed by specific enumeration of partnership liability. But in all the states referred to the statutes, taken as a whole, effect, not only partnership liability, but also all joint liability.

In Illinois the court refused to interpret a general statute making all liability joint and several so as to include partnership liability. [Fleming v. Ross, (1907) 225 Ill. 149, 80 N.E. 92, 8 Ann.Cas. 314]; also the courts of Colorado [Erskine v. Russell, (1908) 43 Colo. 449, 453, 96 Pac. 249]. In New York, though the statute apparently made partners liable jointly and severally (3 Cons.L., p. 2522, par. 6), the court refused so to interpret the act [Seligman v. Friedlander, (1910) 138 App. Div. 784, 123 N.Y.S. 583].

In Texas, Oklahoma, Montana, Pennsylvania, New York, Colorado, Illinois, North Dakota, South Dakota, Ohio, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Georgia, Vermont, Virginia, Rhode Island, Kentucky, Michigan, Maine, Connecticut, Idaho and Indiana, partnership liability is joint. In many of these states, however, the results of joint liability as known to the common law have been modified by statute and decision. The extent of the modification varies. In some each partner must be sued severally or all jointly, an election being required. In some the partnership may be sued in the partnership name, and thereafter the partners separately until satisfaction is had.

In all the estate of the deceased partner is subject to liability, but in some only after action first had against the survivors; in others proof of no partnership property must first be made; in others proceedings may be first had against the estate.

The purpose of the statutes in those states which have made the liability joint and several was to effect certain procedural results, rather than to affect the substantive law. Where, therefore, a state has already declared the liability to be joint and several, then the principle of uniformity would not be affected by that state so altering this paragraph as to make the liability joint and several, as this change would affect only the procedural law and this act is one to make uniform the substantive law of partnership.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 449 in (1), at beginning, inserted exception clause; inserted (2) concerning items limited liability partnership is not liable for; inserted (3) concerning liability for partner's own negligence; inserted (4) concerning partner acting as guarantor or surety; inserted (5) concerning liability for partnership debts; and inserted (6) concerning partner as party to proceeding.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 238 substituted present section regarding partner's liability for former language that read: "All partners are liable:

(1) jointly and severally for everything chargeable to the partnership under 35-10-305 and 35-10-306;

(2) jointly for all other debts and obligations of the partnership, but any partner may enter into a separate obligation to perform a partnership contract."

Severability: Section 62, Ch. 238, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

Application to Existing Relationships: Section 63, Ch. 238, L. 1993, provided: "(1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, [this act] applies to all partnerships in existence on October 1, 1993, that were formed under Title 35, chapter 10, or any other predecessor law providing for the formation, operation, and liquidation of partnerships.

DECISIONS AFTER 1993 REVISION

No Breach of Partnership Duty of Loyalty and Care When Partnership Property Accounted For: One partner transferred a partnership-owned tractor to a corporation owned by his sons, allowed the sons limited use of other partnership property without charging rent, and used personal credit cards for items for which the partnership paid. The other partner contended that this constituted conversion of partnership property and a breach of the duty of loyalty and duty of care to the partnership. The District Court found no conversion or breach of duty, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Under 35-10-405, a partner has a duty to account for partnership property or benefits received from the use or appropriation of the property, and here a proper accounting was made. The tractor was paid for, the use of other partnership property was minimal, and personal credit card expenses were accounted for separately from partnership charges. Baltrusch v. Baltrusch, 2003 MT 357, 319 M 23, 83 P3d 256 (2003).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Liability of Innocent Partner for Restitution of Insurance Proceeds Paid Guilty Partner: Partners in a bar and motel business that was destroyed by fire threatened a bad faith claim against their insurer when 6 months had passed and no payments for the losses had been made. After payment was made, the insurer sought restitution from both partners after discovering that the fire was arson caused by one of the partners, even though one of the partners was not involved in the criminal activity. The Supreme Court found restitution to be proper from both partners because the insurance proceeds had been obtained through filing of a fraudulent claim, which voided the policy. A change in circumstances could not be argued by the innocent partner under the insurance exception set out in Comment b of Restatement of Restitution, sec. 142. Under this section, both partners were liable jointly for all debts and obligations of the partnership. (See 1993 and 1995 amendments.) Tyler v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 255 M 174, 841 P2d 538, 49 St. Rep. 958 (1992).

Dismissal of Partner Sued in Individual Capacity: It was not error for the trial court to dismiss a partner sued in his individual capacity when there was no evidence he was personally involved with any alleged wrongful acts. The dismissal did not affect his liability as a partner. Niles v. Big Sky Eyewear, 236 M 455, 771 P2d 114, 46 St. Rep. 504 (1989).

Joint Venture: Since joint ventures and partnerships are similar, employee of joint venture covered under Workmen's Compensation Act (now Workers' Compensation Act) was employee of individual members of joint venture and consequently could not maintain an action to recover damages from individual member of joint venture for negligence. Hamman v. U.S., 267 F. Supp. 420 (D.C. Mont. 1967).

35-10-308. Purported partner.

Official Comment

This section clears several doubts and confusions of our existing case law. It has been held that a person is liable if he has been held out as a partner and knows that he is being held out, unless he prevents such holding out, even if to do so he has to take legal action. (Fletcher v. Pullen, (1889) 16 Atl. 887, 70 Md. 205, 14 Am.St.Rep. 355; Tanner, etc., Engine Co. v. Hall, (1888) 5 So. 584, 86 Ala. 305; Rittenhouse v. Leigh, (1850) 57 Miss. 697; Speer v. Bishop, (1874) 24 Ohio St. 598; Prof. Burdick in 30 Cyc. 393.) On the other hand, the weight of authority is to the effect that to be held as a partner he must consent to the holding and that consent is a matter of fact. The act as drafted follows this weight of authority and better reasoning. Morgan v. Farrell, (1890) 20 Atl. 614, 58 Conn. 413, 18 Am.St.Rep. 282; Bishop v. Georgeson, (1871) 60 Ill. 484; Thompson v. Toledo First Nat. Bank, (1884) 4 S.Ct. 689, 111 U.S. 529, 28 U.S.(L.Ed.) 507; Fisher v. A. Y. McDonald Co., (1899) 85 Ill.App. 653; Ihmsen v. Lathrop, (1883) 104 Pa.St. 365.

Another confusion of our existing case law arises when A is held out with his consent as a partner of B who is in business by himself. Here no partnership in fact exists. Can anyone who relies on the representation have priority on the property in the business over those creditors of B who trusted only B and not A and B? The case of Thayer v. Humphrey, (1895) 64 N.W. 1007, 91 Wis. 276, 51 Am.St.Rep. 887, 30 L.R.A. 549, answers this question in the affirmative. Other cases have reached an opposite conclusion. Burdick, Partnership, p. 16 et seq. Clause (b) affirms this opposite conclusion. In the case put A and B would be liable jointly, but as there was in fact no partnership fund, the creditors who thought there was a firm of A and B would have no priority on the assets which B had in his business as distinguished from his other assets.

Partnership by Estoppel Found: Whether or not he was legally a partner, it was proper to consider defendant a partner of the business that had engaged the contractor's services for a remodeling job when defendant: first, during the remodeling, personally assured the contractor that the bill would be paid when the remodeling was completed; and second, informed the contractor that he had signed a lease in which he and the other lessees agreed to pay for any remodeling costs beyond the $25,000 which the lessor had agreed to pay. Price Bldg. Serv., Inc. v. Holms, 214 M 456, 693 P2d 553, 42 St. Rep. 84 (1985).

Partnership by Estoppel — Corporate Shareholders: The shareholders of a corporation can be liable as partners to a person dealing with the corporation if through some action or inaction of the corporation the person reasonably believes he is dealing with a partnership and relies upon that belief in dealing with the corporation. In this case there were various partnerships and a corporation, all with similar names and consisting of the same people, and although some evidence tended to show that operations of the corporation were apparently partnership operations, the existence of a partnership by estoppel is a factual issue, and in this case summary judgment finding such a partnership was improperly granted because factual issues remained. Gamble Robinson Co. v. Carousel Properties, 212 M 305, 688 P2d 283, 41 St. Rep. 1757 (1984).

Effect When No Representation of Partnership: Where defendant, in sale of real estate to plaintiff, introduced plaintiff to builder, whom defendant claimed to be reliable, and builder later defaulted in action brought by plaintiff, the court found no partnership by estoppel between defendant and builder, because no representation of partnership appeared in or could be inferred from the record. Krone v. McCann, 196 M 260, 642 P2d 584, 39 St. Rep. 500 (1982).

Operation and Effect: When defendant furnished working capital of firm, countersigned firm's checks, other members of firm said he was a partner, and defendant himself did not inform plaintiff otherwise, it was question for the jury whether the defendant should be treated as if he were a partner. Gustafson v. Taber, 125 M 225, 234 P2d 471 (1951).

35-10-309. Liability of incoming partner.

Official Comment

The present section eliminates the difficulty which arises when a new partner is admitted without liquidation of firm debts. The present theory of the common law is that a new partnership is formed; all the property of the partnership which existed up to the moment of the entrance of the new partner being transferred to the new partnership. The result of this theory is that if the business fails, the creditors who have extended credit after the admission of the new partner have a prior claim on the assets in the business. The inequitable character of this result has led the courts, where no notice of the change of membership is had by the creditors, to be diligent in finding an assumption of liability on the part of the new partnership of the debts of the old partnership.

Though this section changes the formal statement of the law, which is to the effect that an incoming partner is not liable for debts contracted before his admission, as a matter of fact the section as worded conforms to the actual decisions of the courts, which however, are arrived at by making every effort to impress an assumption of liability on the part of the new partnership, formed as a result of the admission of the new partner, of the debts of the old partnership.

The difficulty, which is overcome by this section as worded, is illustrated by the common case where all the property of the existing partnership is taken over, without notice of any break in the conduct of business, by the new partnership composed of all the members of the existing partnership and the incoming partner; thereby depriving the existing partnership of all its property. Both the existing and the subsequent creditors may believe it is one and the same partnership, but, as stated, such would not be the case under the present law. There is no peculiar equity in the subsequent creditors giving them a right to be preferred, as against the property employed in the business, to the existing creditors. The incoming partner partakes of the benefit of the partnership property and an established business. He has every means of obtaining full knowledge and protecting himself, because he may insist on the liquidation or settlement of existing partnership debts. The creditors have no means of protecting themselves. So as to preserve the present law as nearly as possible it is declared that the liability of the incoming partner shall be satisfied only out of partnership property. It, therefore, results that existing and subsequent creditors have equal rights as against partnership property and the separate property of all the previously existing members of the partnership, while only the subsequent creditors have rights against the separate estate of the newly admitted partner.

The section should be read in connection with [35-10-613, now repealed]. Both sections are based on the principle that where there has been one continuous business the fact that A has been admitted to the business, or C ceased to be connected with it, should not be allowed to cause, as at present, endless confusion as to the claims of the creditors on the property employed in the business; but that all creditors of the business, irrespective of the times when they became creditors and the exact combinations of persons then owning the business, should have equal rights in such property. The recognition of this principle solves one of the most perplexing problems of present partnership law.

Case Notes

Personal Liability of Person Not a Partner When Obligations Incurred: The lower court held that the general partner was personally liable for the partnership's debt because the obligations did not arise until the final adjudication in a previous contract action between the parties. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that a general partner is not personally liable for obligations incurred before he becomes a partner. The Supreme Court held that a judgment only controls rights previously existing between the parties. An obligation arises when the contract is executed. The contract was executed prior to the defendant becoming a general partner, so he was not personally liable. Magers v. Mallas, 244 M 117, 796 P2d 571, 47 St. Rep. 1438 (1990).

Part 4
Relation of Partners to Partnership and to One Another

Part Case Notes

Suit Against Partnership by Partner: In a suit for property damages by a partner against the partnership, it was error for the District Court to order summary judgment in favor of the partnership without making a determination of whether the partnership was negligent in causing the property damage and whether plaintiff's property was being used to further the business of the partnership. Norick v. Dove Constr., 204 M 57, 662 P2d 1318, 40 St. Rep. 660 (1983).

Case Notes

DECISIONS AFTER 1993 REVISION

Allocation of Referral Fee Among Law Partners — Summary Judgment Proper: Attorney Frampton received a large settlement fee in a personal injury case that was referred to him personally. Although he and one other partner did all the work on the case, Frampton gave each of the other partners a $25,000 bonus but kept his share of the settlement. One of the partners, Phelps, did no work on the case but was dissatisfied with the bonus and sued Frampton, asserting that his share should have been $120,000. Phelps asserted that Frampton breached the firm's written contract, violated partnership laws, breached an oral contract to share a substantial portion of the fee, breached the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, breached the fiduciary duty, and should have established a constructive trust because the fee was not Frampton's sole property and Frampton would be unjustly enriched by keeping the fee. The District Court granted summary judgment to Frampton on all the claims, and Phelps appealed. The Supreme Court examined each claim and affirmed. An unambiguous partnership agreement controlled the fee allocation. Although the District Court erred in finding that no covenant of good faith and fair dealing existed, Frampton did not breach the covenant because Phelps was not deprived of a benefit or justified expectation created by the partnership agreement. Phelps did not work on the case and was not entitled to a percentage of the fee under the agreement, and any expectation that Phelps had of receiving a share was unjustified. Additionally, the claim that Phelps had for breach of the written contract was directed at acts or omissions of the firm, and Phelps was barred from bringing claims against the firm by a signed release. Phelps v. Frampton, 2007 MT 263, 339 M 330, 170 P3d 474 (2007).

Charging Partnership More Interest Than Amount Paid on Partnership Loan Considered Adverse to Partnership: A partner, acting unilaterally and with no business reason, paid off a partnership loan carrying a 9.25% interest rate and then sought to charge the partnership 10% and keep the profit. The District Court ordered that the partner be paid 9.25% on the loan, and the partner appealed. The Supreme Court held that ordering the partner to be paid 10% interest would be inequitable and unlawful and that the partner's action constituted dealing with the partnership as a party with an adverse interest in violation of the duty of good faith and fair dealing for a partner. The District Court was affirmed. McCormick v. Brevig, 2007 MT 195, 338 M 370, 169 P3d 352 (2007).

No Breach of Partnership Duty of Loyalty and Care When Partnership Property Accounted For: One partner transferred a partnership-owned tractor to a corporation owned by his sons, allowed the sons limited use of other partnership property without charging rent, and used personal credit cards for items for which the partnership paid. The other partner contended that this constituted conversion of partnership property and a breach of the duty of loyalty and duty of care to the partnership. The District Court found no conversion or breach of duty, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Under 35-10-405, a partner has a duty to account for partnership property or benefits received from the use or appropriation of the property, and here a proper accounting was made. The tractor was paid for, the use of other partnership property was minimal, and personal credit card expenses were accounted for separately from partnership charges. Baltrusch v. Baltrusch, 2003 MT 357, 319 M 23, 83 P3d 256 (2003).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Agreement to Convey Partnership Property Void for Lack of Consideration — Agreement to Fund and Forbearance in Dissolving Partnership Held Insufficient: Marsha and Mac formed M&M Walkers, a partnership for the breeding, raising, training, and marketing of Tennessee

Walker horses. Their partnership agreement was oral and was sealed with a handshake. When Marsha became concerned about the amount of time and money that she was putting into the partnership, Mac executed a written conveyance of his share of partnership property, which said that if anything happened to him, Marsha was to get all the partnership property. After Mac died, Marsha tried to enforce Mac's written statement against his estate, but the District Court held the statement to be invalid for lack of consideration. The Supreme Court held that while the written instrument is presumptive evidence of consideration, that presumption could be rebutted by Mac's estate, which sought to invalidate the statement. Marsha contended that her agreement to continue funding the partnership was sufficient consideration, but the Supreme Court held that because she had a legal duty to contribute to the partnership in accordance with her share of the profits, her "agreement" was not sufficient consideration. Marsha also argued that her forbearance from dissolving the partnership was also sufficient consideration. Citing Rudio v. Yellowstone Merchandising Corp., 200 M 537, 652 P2d 1163 (1982), the Supreme Court noted that it had held that forbearance is sufficient consideration only if there is an agreement to forbear, and in this case, there was no evidence in the record that Marsha had made such an agreement with Mac. The Supreme Court therefore affirmed the District Court's finding that there was insufficient consideration to support Mac's written conveyance of the partnership's property to Marsha. Nitzel v. Wickman, 283 M 304, 940 P2d 451, 54 St. Rep. 684 (1997). See also St. v. Keys, 1999 MT 10, 293 M 81, 973 P2d 812, 56 St. Rep. 44 (1999).

Lack of Element of Intent to Associate as Partners: Direct testimony that one of the alleged partners did not wish to be associated in a partnership, coupled with evidence that the brand used to identify the business was never transferred to the partnership, that the partnership name was never registered with the Secretary of State, and that the parties filed separate rather than partnership tax returns mitigated against a clear manifestation of the parties' intent to form a partnership. Tondu v. Akerley, 259 M 194, 855 P2d 116, 50 St. Rep. 754 (1993).

Liability of Partners for Attorney Fees Incurred on Behalf of Partnership: The partnership attorney represented the partnership in a legal matter until one partner, Doting, hired her own attorney, who subsequently filed an answer on Doting's behalf. The partnership attorney continued as counsel for the other partners, Trunks. Trunks maintained that the partnership should pay all fees and costs of the partnership attorney because Doting's attorney merely adopted and ratified the partnership attorney's work on the case. However, the District Court properly found that Trunks should pay Doting one-half of the sums paid by the partnership to the partnership attorney for representation of the partnership after Doting's attorney filed an answer for Doting in the suit. Doting v. Trunk, 253 M 350, 833 P2d 1028, 49 St. Rep. 429 (1992).

Partner Failing to Keep Records Estopped From Objecting to Court's Division of Property: The defendant in a partnership dissolution action objected to the lower court's ruling that the partnership property be divided equally. The Supreme Court held that the defendant was estopped from objecting to the property division because it had been his responsibility to keep the partnership records and he had failed to do so. Frank v. Birky, 250 M 11, 817 P2d 696, 48 St. Rep. 850 (1991).

Ex-Partner Not Liable for Partnership's Debts: The defendants argued that the plaintiff, a former partner, was liable for a portion of the partnership's debts regardless of the date of the dissolution of the partnership. The Supreme Court held that under this section, a partner's rights and duties are subject to any agreement between the partners. The partners had agreed to reimburse the plaintiff for his original contribution, and therefore he was not liable for any debts incurred after that time. Westfall v. Anderson, 244 M 113, 795 P2d 976, 47 St. Rep. 1431 (1990).

No Wages for Winding Up Affairs: The plaintiff, in a partnership dissolution action, argued that the lower court erred in not awarding him wages for winding up the partnership's affairs. The Supreme Court ruled that this section clearly states that wages may only be given for winding up the partnership's affairs in those cases where one of the partners has died or where the agreement provides for wages. Mehl v. Mehl, 241 M 310, 786 P2d 1173, 47 St. Rep. 292 (1990).

Wages Paid to One Partner's Children: The plaintiff, in an action for dissolution of a partnership, argued that the lower court erred in holding that wages paid to the other partner's children were partnership expenditures. The plaintiff alleged that the children had been hired because the defendant's health prevented him from doing his share of the work and that therefore the amount paid his children should have been deducted from the defendant's share of the assets. The Supreme Court ruled that the plaintiff had acquiesced to the arrangement and had shared in the resultant tax advantage; therefore, the wages were properly designated a partnership expense. Mehl v. Mehl, 241 M 310, 786 P2d 1173, 47 St. Rep. 292 (1990).

Partnership Agreement Inadequate to Cover Situation — Section Prevails: Felton Investment Group was a retirement benefit investment partnership, with partners consisting of employees of Felton Construction Company. In its partnership agreement, persons who voluntarily terminated employment or who were discharged for misconduct received contribution refunds and those who were involuntarily terminated from employment because of disability, death, or retirement retained a full interest in the partnership. The plaintiffs in this action were involuntarily terminated for refusing to disassociate with their union—a termination that the District Court determined to be a contingency not covered by the partnership agreement. Thus, the provisions of this section control repayment of contributions by providing for a pro rata repayment to the partners. Felton Inv. Group v. Taurman, 222 M 238, 722 P2d 1135, 43 St. Rep. 1228 (1986).

Finding of Partnership — Splitting of Profits, Advertising, and Merging of Resources and Talents — Lack of Intent Not Controlling: Father and son shared equipment as needed, stored seed potatoes together in son's warehouse, advertised under the name of "Wilbur Kimm and Son", and split profits in a joint account. Son's insurer sued father's insurer for contribution for claims paid that were filed by buyers against son for crop damages caused by seeds treated by son. District Court found no partnership existed, primarily based on father's and son's testimony that they did not intend for a partnership to exist. The Supreme Court reversed and ordered judgment granting plaintiff insurer's motion for summary judgment. The Supreme Court held that splitting of profits, coupled with advertising under a joint name and the merging of resources and talents for the growing of the potatoes, preponderated against the District Court's finding of no partnership. Truck Ins. Exch. v. Indus. Indem. Co., 212 M 297, 688 P2d 1243, 41 St. Rep. 1835 (1984).

Default in Joint Venture: Absent a default agreement, the members of a joint venture cannot forfeit the rights of a member and exclude him from participation in the enterprise because he is in default. The remedy for members not in default is an action for rescission or breach of contract. Murphy v. Redland, 178 M 296, 583 P2d 1049 (1978).

Agreement Providing for Termination on Project Completion — Division of Assets — Renegotiation Costs: When partnership agreement provided for termination of partnership upon completion of project and equal division of assets and dividends, three partners had no right to $8,500 paid to other two partners as a part of renegotiation cost for excess profits of $35,000. The $8,500 was paid to the two partners and deducted from total renegotiation cost of $35,000 in order to secure to those two partners tax benefits which they would not be able to obtain as a refund, while the other three partners could claim as a refund their tax benefits after payment of $26,500 to federal government. Pappin v. Dudley, 125 M 248, 236 P2d 280 (1951).

Case Notes

Finality of Judgment Requirement in Applying Collateral Estoppel: In a 2003 suit, William sued his brother Otto on the issue of partnership assets, and then in 2004, when that case was still pending, William filed claims against Otto for further misappropriating business assets and against Otto's wife Frances for conspiring to assist Otto. The District Court held that the 2004 case was barred by collateral estoppel, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. It is appropriate to accord finality to an earlier judgment that contains findings of fact that definitively resolve all new allegations and legal theories included in a later complaint, and the 2004 judgment was sufficiently final for applying collateral estoppel. The determinative fact of whether and to what extent Frances misappropriated partnership funds without Otto's knowledge was actually and necessarily decided in the 2003 case. Because the precise issue or allegation that provided the basis for each of William's 2004 theories of recovery was already presented and decided in 2003, the District Court properly found that the 2004 suit was barred by collateral estoppel. Baltrusch v. Baltrusch, 2006 MT 51, 331 M 281, 130 P3d 1267 (2006). See also Martelli v. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County, 258 M 166, 852 P2d 579 (1993), and Dowell v. 35-10-405. General standards of partner's conduct.

Official Comment

[Subsection] (1) removes a doubt in the existing law. At present it is not clear whether the obligation to account where the partner has money or other property in his hands, is or is not an obligation in the nature of a trust. For instance: A, B and C are partners; A, as a result of a transaction connected with the conduct of the partnership, has in his hands, so that it may be traced, a specific sum of money or other property. A is insolvent. Is the claim of the partnership against A a claim against him as an ordinary creditor, or is it a claim to the specific property or money in his hands? The words "and hold as trustee for the partnership any profits" indicate clearly that the partnership can claim as their own any property or money that can be traced.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 238 substituted present section regarding partner conduct standards for former language that read: "(1) Every partner must account to the partnership for any benefit and hold as trustee for it any profits derived by him without the consent of the other partners from any transaction connected with the formation, conduct, or liquidation of the partnership or from any use by him of its property.

(2) This section applies also to the representatives of a deceased partner engaged in the liquidation of the affairs of the partnership as the personal representatives of the last surviving partner."

DECISIONS AFTER 1993 REVISION

Allocation of Referral Fee Among Law Partners — Summary Judgment Proper: Attorney Frampton received a large settlement fee in a personal injury case that was referred to him personally. Although he and one other partner did all the work on the case, Frampton gave each of the other partners a $25,000 bonus but kept his share of the settlement. One of the partners,

Phelps, did no work on the case but was dissatisfied with the bonus and sued Frampton, asserting that his share should have been $120,000. Phelps asserted that Frampton breached the firm's written contract, violated partnership laws, breached an oral contract to share a substantial portion of the fee, breached the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, breached the fiduciary duty, and should have established a constructive trust because the fee was not Frampton's sole property and Frampton would be unjustly enriched by keeping the fee. The District Court granted summary judgment to Frampton on all the claims, and Phelps appealed. The Supreme Court examined each claim and affirmed. An unambiguous partnership agreement controlled the fee allocation. Although the District Court erred in finding that no covenant of good faith and fair dealing existed, Frampton did not breach the covenant because Phelps was not deprived of a benefit or justified expectation created by the partnership agreement. Phelps did not work on the case and was not entitled to a percentage of the fee under the agreement, and any expectation that Phelps had of receiving a share was unjustified. Additionally, the claim that Phelps had for breach of the written contract was directed at acts or omissions of the firm, and Phelps was barred from bringing claims against the firm by a signed release. Phelps v. Frampton, 2007 MT 263, 339 M 330, 170 P3d 474 (2007).

Finality of Judgment Requirement in Applying Collateral Estoppel: In a 2003 suit, William sued his brother Otto on the issue of partnership assets, and then in 2004, when that case was still pending, William filed claims against Otto for further misappropriating business assets and against Otto's wife Frances for conspiring to assist Otto. The District Court held that the 2004 case was barred by collateral estoppel, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. It is appropriate to accord finality to an earlier judgment that contains findings of fact that definitively resolve all new allegations and legal theories included in a later complaint, and the 2004 judgment was sufficiently final for applying collateral estoppel. The determinative fact of whether and to what extent Frances misappropriated partnership funds without Otto's knowledge was actually and necessarily decided in the 2003 case. Because the precise issue or allegation that provided the basis for each of William's 2004 theories of recovery was already presented and decided in 2003, the District Court properly found that the 2004 suit was barred by collateral estoppel. Baltrusch v. Baltrusch, 2006 MT 51, 331 M 281, 130 P3d 1267 (2006). See also Martelli v. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County, 258 M 166, 852 P2d 579 (1993), and Dowell v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2006 MT 55, 331 M 305, 132 P3d 520 (2006).

Final Judgment in Prior Claim Prerequisite for Application of Res Judicata: In a 2003 suit, William sued his brother Otto on the issue of partnership assets, and then in 2004, when that case was still pending, William filed claims against Otto for further misappropriating business assets and against Otto's wife Frances for conspiring to assist Otto. The District Court held that the 2004 case was barred by res judicata because Otto and Frances were in privity and the issues in both cases were identical. On appeal, the parties argued vigorously as to whether the elements of res judicata were met, and William even conceded that the 2004 suit was barred as to claims against Otto. The Supreme Court disagreed. Because final judgment was not entered in the 2003 case, despite William's acquiescence, res judicata did not bar any claims raised in the 2004 case. Baltrusch v. Baltrusch, 2006 MT 51, 331 M 281, 130 P3d 1267 (2006).

No Breach of Partnership Duty of Loyalty and Care When Partnership Property Accounted For: One partner transferred a partnership-owned tractor to a corporation owned by his sons, allowed the sons limited use of other partnership property without charging rent, and used personal credit cards for items for which the partnership paid. The other partner contended that this constituted conversion of partnership property and a breach of the duty of loyalty and duty of care to the partnership. The District Court found no conversion or breach of duty, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Under this section, a partner has a duty to account for partnership property or benefits received from the use or appropriation of the property, and here a proper accounting was made. The tractor was paid for, the use of other partnership property was minimal, and personal credit card expenses were accounted for separately from partnership charges. Baltrusch v. Baltrusch, 2003 MT 357, 319 M 23, 83 P3d 256 (2003).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Partner Assuming Responsibility as Trustee: If a partner assumes responsibility of management and operation of partnership business and takes over the accounts, books, and bank accounts thereof, he acts as trustee for the partnership and his books and accounts must be full, true, and exact and he cannot defeat rights of his copartner to true settlement and proper distribution of assets by failing to keep full and complete accounts. Hansen v. Hansen, 130 M 175, 297 P2d 879 (1956).

35-10-406. Continuation of partnership beyond definite term or particular undertaking.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 238 substituted present section regarding partnership continuation for former language that read: "(1) When a partnership for a fixed term or particular undertaking is continued after the termination of such term or particular undertaking without any express agreement, the rights and duties of the partners remain the same as they were at such termination, so far as is consistent with a partnership at will.

(2) A continuation of the business by the partners or such of them as habitually acted therein during the term without any settlement or liquidation of the partnership affairs is prima facie evidence of a continuation of the partnership."

Severability: Section 62, Ch. 238, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

Application to Existing Relationships: Section 63, Ch. 238, L. 1993, provided: "(1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, [this act] applies to all partnerships in existence on October 1, 1993, that were formed under Title 35, chapter 10, or any other predecessor law providing for the formation, operation, and liquidation of partnerships.

(2) [This act] does not impair the obligations of a contract existing on October 1, 1993, or affect an action or proceeding begun or right accrued before October 1, 1993.

(3) A judgment against a partnership or a partner in an action commenced before October 1, 1993, may be enforced in the same manner as a judgment rendered before October 1, 1993."

Case Notes

Partners' Failure to Comply With Agreement Terms Resulting in No Explicit Partnership Value — Fair Market Value Properly Ascribed: A 1968 agreement established the value of a partnership at $47,790.30 and required the partners to arrive annually at a new and updated value that would serve for the following year as the value of the partnership. However, the partners never reestablished any different value during the duration of the partnership. After one partner died in 1995, the District Court properly concluded that fair market value at the time of death should apply because the partners failed to comply with the terms of the agreement and thus were left without an explicitly agreed-upon value. In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767, 55 St. Rep. 1251 (1998), following Chapman v. Dunnegan, 665 SW 2d 643 (Mo. Ct. App. 1984).

Case Notes

When Filing of Claim Required Following Withdrawal From Partnership When Partnership Agreement Applies: A physician withdrew from partnership with defendant medical clinic in September 2004, and the clinic offered to pay the physician the amount due under the partnership agreement. The physician did not accept payment at that time but subsequently filed an action for further payment in February 2006. The clinic asserted that the claim was time barred because it was not filed within 120 days after the offer of payment was made. The District Court held that the claim was not time barred, and on appeal the Supreme Court concurred. Statutes allow 120 days to bring a claim when a dissociating partner may maintain an action to determine how much is owed the partner when seeking to have the partner's interest in the partnership purchased, but it is not clear whether that includes a case when the amount due is determined by reference to a partnership agreement or whether the 120-day limitation applies only when no partnership agreement exists and the amount must be set by a court. Because a substantial question existed regarding whether the 120-day limit applied, the court resolved the doubt in accordance with public policy in favor of a longer period of limitation. The District Court's holding that the claim was not time barred was thus affirmed. Mungas v. Great Falls Clinic, LLP, 2009 MT 426, 354 M 50, 221 P3d 1230 (2009).

Liquidation of Partnership Assets Required Under Court-Ordered Partnership Dissolution — Full Accounting Required: The partnership agreement between partners in a family farm and ranch operation did not apply to a court-ordered dissolution pursuant to 35-10-624, so default statutory rules applied. To avoid breakup of the family farm, the District Court ordered that one partner buy out the other partner's share. However, in a court-ordered dissolution, 35-10-629 requires liquidation of the partnership assets with any surplus remaining after creditors are paid to be paid in cash to the partners in accordance with their right to distribution. Thus, the District Court committed reversible error in adopting a judicially created alternative to the statutory winding-up procedure. Further, because asset liquidation was required, the District Court was required to perform a detailed accounting of the partnership affairs. McCormick v. Brevig, 2004 MT 179, 322 M 112, 96 P3d 697 (2004), followed in Pankratz Farms, Inc. v. Pankratz, 2004 MT 180, 322 M 133, 95 P3d 671 (2004). On remand, following a complete partnership accounting, the District Court held that each party owned a 50% interest in the partnership but that one partner had not paid the partnership for the entire 50% interest. The court ordered that partner to pay for the unpaid 25% interest by establishing a deficit capital account. The partner appealed on grounds that the 2004 McCormick decision (McCormick II) established as the law of the case that the partner owned a 50% interest and that the entire interest was paid. The law of the 2004 case did establish the 50% interests, but the complete accounting showed that the partner still owed a 25% interest that was to be deducted from that partner's share of the proceeds of the sale of the partnership, and the District Court did not err in so holding. In addition, it was the partner's complaint about the inadequacy of the initial accounting that caused the remand in McCormick II, and the partner benefited by the new and complete accounting, so it was not error to charge the partner one-half of the special master's fee. McCormick v. Brevig, 2007 MT 195, 338 M 370, 169 P3d 352 (2007). While the appeal in this case (2007 MT 195, McCormick III) was pending, sale of the partnership took place. Both partners subsequently appealed orders of the District Court concerning how the sale was to be conducted. However, because of the results of the sale, the issues related to the conduct of the sale were decided between the parties, so the appeal was moot. McCormick v. Brevig, 2007 MT 196, 338 M 387, 165 P3d 1124 (2007), following Walker v. St., 2003 MT 134, 316 M 103, 68 P3d 872 (2003).

Property Rights of a Partner

Part Case Notes

DECISIONS UNDER CURRENT LAW

Property Not Assignable Without Consent of All Partners: Two partners, without the knowledge or consent of the third partner who had instigated an action to dissolve the partnership, executed a trust indenture assigning marina property owned by the partnership as collateral for the loan. The Supreme Court held that the marina was partnership property and that the two partners had no authority to bind the partnership or encumber their individual one-third interests in the partnership property without the consent of all partners. The savings and loan had no interest in the property. Schrammeck v. Fed. Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. 258 M 391, 853 P2d 702, 50 St. Rep. 580 (1993).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER LAW

Partnership Interest in Property No Defense to Charge of Theft: Kuntz claimed that he could not be convicted of theft of partnership property because under Montana common law, a partner cannot be guilty of stealing partnership property because a partner's interest extends to every portion of partnership property. He also argued that nothing in the Uniform Partnership Act in effect prior to the 1993 revision superseded the common law. The Supreme Court ruled that Kuntz was entitled only to an interest in the property for partnership purposes and that state criminal law specifically abandoned the common-law theory and made it a crime to steal property in which an individual has an interest but to which the individual is not entitled. St. v. Kuntz, 265 M 253, 875 P2d 1034, 51 St. Rep. 502 (1994).

Breach of Joint Venture Fiduciary Trust — Award of Investment Plus Interest Affirmed: Kelly and Rust agreed to purchase land, subdivide it, and sell it at a profit. Rust advanced Kelly $4,000 as one-half the purchase price. Kelly paid the $4,000 balance and recorded the deed, but did not include Rust on the recorded deed. Rust moved from the area and later attempted, through his agent, to purchase Kelly's interest in the land. The agent was told the land was already sold, so Rust brought an action to recover his investment plus interest. The trial court properly held that: (1) the parties had entered into a joint venture; (2) Kelly was required in equity to hold the property in a constructive trust; (3) Kelly breached the joint venture fiduciary duty and attempted to deprive Rust of his interest in the property; and (4) Rust was entitled to return of his $4,000 investment plus interest. Rust v. Kelly, 228 M 220, 741 P2d 786, 44 St. Rep. 1471 (1987).

Death of Partner — Disposition of Property Held Jointly by Partners: Robert and William, brothers, opened a joint checking account in 1947, paid all ranch expenses through the account, put all ranch income in the account, and equally split net profits. All cattle were branded with either of two brands, each of which was registered in the name of "William Palmer or Robert Palmer". The brothers were also joint tenants in a commodity brokerage account. The Supreme Court held that the cattle and both accounts were partnership property not held in joint tenancy and remained so upon Robert's death. Thus, they did not pass to William as the surviving joint tenant; rather, they remained in the partnership for the purpose of winding up the partnership and paying its liabilities, after which William must account to Robert's survivor, his widow, for Robert's share of the partnership. By its very nature, partnership property must be treated differently than property of individuals, including property held by individuals as joint tenants but who are not in partnership. This rule applies regardless of the formal legal manner in which the property is held. This is a rule of equity developed over hundreds of years and codified in the Uniform Partnership Act. In re Estate of Palmer, 218 M 285, 708 P2d 242, 42 St. Rep. 1585 (1985), followed in Fiedler v. Fiedler, 266 M 133, 879 P2d 675, 51 St. Rep. 691 (1994).

35-10-505. Partner's transferable interest subject to charging order.

Official Comment

[Section 35-10-505(1)] is taken from section 23(2) of the English Partnership Act. The operation of the provision has given great satisfaction. The judgment creditor does not acquire any greater rights than the debtor is entitled to for his own benefit. [Sutton v. English, etc., Produce Co., [1902] 2 Ch. 502; Howard v. Sadler, [1893] 1 Q.B. 1; Cooper v. Griffin, [1892] 1 Q.B. 740; Scott v. Hastings, (1858) 4 Kay & J. 633].

1993 Amendment: Chapter 238 substituted present section regarding partner's transferable interest for former language that read: "(1) On due application to a competent court by any judgment creditor of a partner, the court which entered the judgment, order, or decree or any other court may charge the interest of the debtor partner with payment of the unsatisfied amount of such judgment debt with interest thereon and may then or later appoint a receiver of his share of the profits and of any other money due or to fall due to him in respect of the partnership and make all other orders, directions, accounts, and inquiries which the debtor partner might have made or which the circumstances of the case may require.

(2) The interest charged may be redeemed at any time before foreclosure or, in case of a sale being directed by the court, may be purchased without thereby causing a dissolution:

(a) with separate property, by any one or more of the partners; or

(b) with partnership property, by any one or more of the partners with the consent of all the partners whose interests are not so charged or sold.

(3) Nothing in this chapter shall be held to deprive a partner of his right, if any, under the exemption laws as regards his interest in the partnership."

Severability: Section 62, Ch. 238, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

Application to Existing Relationships: Section 63, Ch. 238, L. 1993, provided: "(1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, [this act] applies to all partnerships in existence on October 1, 1993, that were formed under Title 35, chapter 10, or any other predecessor law providing for the formation, operation, and liquidation of partnerships.

(2) [This act] does not impair the obligations of a contract existing on October 1, 1993, or affect an action or proceeding begun or right accrued before October 1, 1993.

(3) A judgment against a partnership or a partner in an action commenced before October 1, 1993, may be enforced in the same manner as a judgment rendered before October 1, 1993."

Question of Validity of Offset Moot — Dismissal of Counterclaim and Motion for Partial Summary Judgment Proper: A promissory note related to a stock sale provided for acceleration upon notice of default. Following defendants' default, plaintiff paid an escrow agent an amount that satisfied plaintiff's obligation under the sale agreement, and the agent then deducted from that payment the amount owed by defendants under the promissory note, transferred the balance back to plaintiff in satisfaction of the note, and forwarded the balance of plaintiff's payment to defendants. Defendants filed a counterclaim and moved for partial summary judgment based on the validity of the offset. The District Court dismissed both, and defendants appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Because both parties received the money owed to them, and because the acceleration and offset were appropriate, the issues raised by defendants lost any practical purpose. The issue of the validity of the offset was moot, and the Supreme Court declined to address the issue further. Lewistown Propane Co. v. Moncur, 2002 MT 349, 313 M 368, 61 P3d 780 (2002).

Dissolution and Winding Up

Part Case Notes

DECISIONS UNDER CURRENT LAW

Trial Court Selection of One Appraisal of Partnership Property Over Another Not Erroneous: Pursuant to a court order, partnership property was to be sold and the proceeds divided between two partners. Each partner desired to keep certain property, so in 2001 they agreed to have all the property appraised and have each partner purchase the desired equipment from the other. Partner Otto was dissatisfied with the appraisal and hired another appraiser to value the property. Despite having sought and received the second appraisal, Otto did not pay partner William for the property. About 2 years later, Otto hired a third appraiser, who completed an appraisal in 2006. In its post-2006 trial order, the District Court ordered Otto to pay William the value established in the second appraisal. Otto contended on appeal that the court erred in choosing the second appraisal over the third. The Supreme Court affirmed. The District Court's selection was a factual as opposed to a legal decision, and because there was substantial credible evidence to support the factual decision, the Supreme Court declined to disturb it. Baltrusch v. Baltrusch, 2008 MT 245, 344 M 489, 190 P3d 1034 (2008).

Proper Calculation of Fractional Partnership Interest — Attorney Fees Based on Fractional Interest Affirmed: Six brothers had equal interests in a farming operation. Four of the brothers sought to buy out the interests of the other two. One brother, Marvin, refused to sell, but the other, Larry, agreed, so Larry's interest was divided between the four participating brothers, giving each an additional 4% ownership interest. The four then mortgaged the partnership's interest without Marvin's consent. In winding up the partnership, the District Court found that Marvin still had a one-sixth interest and that because he was aware of Larry's buyout but declined to participate, Marvin was not entitled to any portion of the buyout. Marvin appealed on grounds that the District Court miscalculated his fractional interest because mortgaging the partnership interest without his consent was a breach of duty and the partnership agreement, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Marvin could not demonstrate that he was damaged by the breach of duty and the partnership agreement. Marvin's interest was not mortgaged, nor did Marvin become obligated to Larry through the buyout. Thus, the District Court properly calculated Marvin's fractional partnership interest. Further, because Marvin retained a one-sixth interest, the District Court correctly charged Marvin with one-sixth of the attorney fees incurred in the dissolution. Pankratz Farms, Inc. v. Pankratz, 2004 MT 180, 322 M 133, 95 P3d 671 (2004).

No Error in Failure to Consider Tax Implications on Partner Who Took Loans From Partnership When Dividing Partnership Interests: When determining how to equally divide partnership assets between two partners, the District Court did not account for the tax implications related to loans taken by one partner from the partnership, which that partner contended was error because the tax obligations related to the loans, as opposed to wage income, and would result in that partner receiving less money. The Supreme Court found no error in the District Court's calculations. If the partner had taken the income in wages rather than in loans, the taxes would have been paid immediately and there would be no controversy. The court declined to hold one partner responsible for tax implications based on the monetary decisions of the other. Baltrusch v. Baltrusch, 2003 MT 357, 319 M 23, 83 P3d 256 (2003).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER LAW

Court Dissolution of Partnership Prior to Winding Up — Equity: Even though certain contract receivables would not be paid in full during the 60-day period ordered for winding up the partnership affairs, the District Court properly ordered the partnership dissolved as a matter of equity, given the extreme animosity between the parties and the fact that dissolution does not terminate a partnership for purposes of winding up and suing and being sued while winding up. Doting v. Trunk, 253 M 350, 833 P2d 1028, 49 St. Rep. 429 (1992).

Split of Expenses Related to Dissolution Proceeding: Noting that each party should pay for its own defense in a dissolution action, the District Court properly held each partner liable for paying one-half of the amount attributable to legitimate partnership expenses incurred as the result of the dissolution. Doting v. Trunk, 253 M 350, 833 P2d 1028, 49 St. Rep. 429 (1992).

When Reason for Partnership Ceases, Damages and Attorney Fees Not Payable Upon Dissolution: The District Court correctly found that Doting owed no damages or attorney fees to Trunks as the result of the dissolution of the parties' partnership because: (1) the reason for the partnership ceased to exist when the partnership assets were sold; (2) Trunks had moved out of state; and (3) the partnership agreement Doting was alleged to have violated did not provide for dissolution, only buyout. Doting v. Trunk, 253 M 350, 833 P2d 1028, 49 St. Rep. 429 (1992).

Proper Date of Valuation of Deceased Partner's Interest: Where one partner died and the surviving partners continued the business, continued to graze cattle on the partnership land, and did not elect to liquidate partnership assets, the business was continued under 35-10-613(2) and (3) (now repealed). Therefore, 35-10-614 (now repealed) applies, and the deceased partner's interest is properly valued as of the date of his death. Webb v. Wolfe, 230 M 322, 749 P2d 531, 45 St. Rep. 242 (1988).

Death of Partner — Disposition of Property Held Jointly by Partners: Robert and William, brothers, opened a joint checking account in 1947, paid all ranch expenses through the account, put all ranch income in the account, and equally split net profits. All cattle were branded with either of two brands, each of which was registered in the name of "William Palmer or Robert Palmer". Partnership Accounting: When no balance of the partnership business could be arrived at without an accounting and the defendant made all his records available and it was clear from the record that the defendant in good faith had thought there was a loss instead of a profit, interest on the amount due was figured from date of judgment rather than date of termination of partnership. Shidu v. Hollenback, 133 M 265, 322 P2d 325 (1958).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Termination Reasonable: The Uniform Partnership Act does not require that every transaction be completed before a partnership can be terminated. The District Court did not err in ordering termination of the partnership on the date of final distribution to the parties from the partnership's trust account. Property may be held as trust in common after partnership affairs are settled. An escrow agent could make pro rata distributions to the partners when payments are received on contracts for deed without continuing the partnership. Doting v. Trunk, 259 M 343, 856 P2d 536, 50 St. Rep. 826 (1993).

Court Dissolution of Partnership Prior to Winding Up — Equity: Even though certain contract receivables would not be paid in full during the 60-day period ordered for winding up the partnership affairs, the District Court properly ordered the partnership dissolved as a matter of equity, given the extreme animosity between the parties and the fact that dissolution does not terminate a partnership for purposes of winding up and suing and being sued while winding up. Doting v. Trunk, 253 M 350, 833 P2d 1028, 49 St. Rep. 429 (1992).

Disposition of Assets: When surviving partners of law partnership were unable to agree on distribution of pending cases, an asset of the partnership, and it became necessary to appoint special master to facilitate final dissolution, decision to split returns of unfinished business, two-thirds to partner handling business and one-third to other, was fair. DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Right to Possession of Property After Dissolution: In action in claim and delivery brought by partner against third party and involving partnership property acquired by third person after dissolution of partnership by express will of partners, allegations of existence of partnership, subsequent dissolution, and defendant's wrongfully taking possession of property were sufficient to show right to possession and to state cause of action. Rykken v. Black, 136 M 464, 348 P2d 998 (1960).

35-10-616. Events causing partner's dissociation.

Case Notes

No Error in Finding That Partner Did Not Dissociate From Partnership: A partner contended that the other partner dissociated by withdrawing from the partnership through wrongful conduct and should be expelled. The District Court found that no notice was given of an express will to withdraw as a partner, that the partnership agreement did not apply, and that the partner in question had continued to operate the partnership after the alleged dissociation, even to the benefit of the complaining partner. The court's findings were not clearly erroneous, and the court did not err in holding that a wrongful dissociation had not occurred. McCormick v. Brevig, 2004 MT 179, 322 M 112, 96 P3d 697 (2004).

No Liability for Unpaid Wage Claim by Former Business Partner: Donald and Gail Peterson owned and operated a bar and casino. When Gail discovered an intimate relationship between Donald and plaintiff who was an employee, she demanded that they leave the establishment, and Gail then operated the business alone. The Petersons agreed to divorce, and as part of the settlement, Donald was allowed to operate the jointly owned business, receive all the profits, and assume all liabilities generated by the operation of the business, and Gail ceased any involvement with the day-to-day operations. Donald and plaintiff continued to operate the business as a couple, but Donald paid plaintiff no wages for 18 months. Gail eventually purchased the business assets and assumed the business debts and liabilities, at which point plaintiff brought a claim against Gail for the unpaid wages. An administrative judge held that the Petersons were jointly and severally liable as partners. The District Court upheld the decision, and Gail appealed. The Supreme Court noted that all four criteria in MacArthur Co. v. Stein, 282 M 85, 934 P2d 214 (1997), must be established to prove the existence of a partnership. Here, three of the four criteria did not exist after Gail relinquished control of the business to Donald. Because Gail was not a partner during the time that the wage claim arose, she bore no responsibility for wages owing during the period in question. In re Wage Claim of Harker v. Peterson, 2003 MT 175, 316 M 393, 72 P3d 949 (2003). See also In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767 (1998).

Death of Partner — Disposition of Property Held Jointly by Partners: Robert and William, brothers, opened a joint checking account in 1947, paid all ranch expenses through the account, put all ranch income in the account, and equally split net profits. All cattle were branded with either of two brands, each of which was registered in the name of "William Palmer or Robert Palmer". The brothers were also joint tenants in a commodity brokerage account. The Supreme Court held that the cattle and both accounts were partnership property not held in joint tenancy and remained so upon Robert's death. Thus, they did not pass to William as the surviving joint tenant; rather, they remained in the partnership for the purpose of winding up the partnership and paying its liabilities, after which William must account to Robert's survivor, his widow, for Robert's share of the partnership. By its very nature, partnership property must be treated differently than property of individuals, including property held by individuals as joint tenants but who are not in partnership. This rule applies regardless of the formal legal manner in which the property is held. This is a rule of equity developed over hundreds of years and codified in the Uniform Partnership Act. In re Estate of Palmer, 218 M 285, 708 P2d 242, 42 St. Rep. 1585 (1985).

Case Notes

When Filing of Claim Required Following Withdrawal From Partnership When Partnership Agreement Applies: A physician withdrew from partnership with defendant medical clinic in September 2004, and the clinic offered to pay the physician the amount due under the partnership agreement. The physician did not accept payment at that time but subsequently filed an action for further payment in February 2006. The clinic asserted that the claim was time barred because it was not filed within 120 days after the offer of payment was made. The District Court held that the claim was not time barred, and on appeal the Supreme Court concurred. Statutes allow 120 days to bring a claim when a dissociating partner may maintain an action to determine how much is owed the partner when seeking to have the partner's interest in the partnership purchased, but it is not clear whether that includes a case when the amount due is determined by reference to a partnership agreement or whether the 120-day limitation applies only when no partnership agreement exists and the amount must be set by a court. Because a substantial question existed regarding whether the 120-day limit applied, the court resolved the doubt in accordance with public policy in favor of a longer period of limitation. The District Court's holding that the claim was not time barred was thus affirmed. Mungas v. Great Falls Clinic, LLP, 2009 MT 426, 354 M 50, 221 P3d 1230 (2009).

Case Notes

Missing Opportunities to Timely Appeal Legal Decisions Establishes Law of Case: After multiple litigation proceedings between two former spouses, the District Court found that the husband had not satisfied a New Jersey judgment against him by the wife. The court issued a writ of execution, a charging order, and an order for the appointment of a receiver, foreclosure of the lien, and the sale of a limited liability corporation to satisfy the debts. On a third appeal to the Montana Supreme Court, the husband appealed the charging order and the appointment of a receiver. The Supreme Court held that because the husband had previous opportunities to raise these issues, the law of the case concerning them had already been rendered, and he was bound by the finality of the previous rulings. Jonas v. Jonas, 2013 MT 202, 371 Mont. 113, 308 P.3d 33.

Proper Calculation of Fractional Partnership Interest — Attorney Fees Based on Fractional Interest Affirmed: Six brothers had equal interests in a farming operation. Four of the brothers sought to buy out the interests of the other two. One brother, Marvin, refused to sell, but the other, Larry, agreed, so Larry's interest was divided between the four participating brothers, giving each an additional 4% ownership interest. The four then mortgaged the partnership's interest without Marvin's consent. In winding up the partnership, the District Court found that Marvin still had a one-sixth interest and that because he was aware of Larry's buyout but declined to participate, Marvin was not entitled to any portion of the buyout. Marvin appealed on grounds that the District Court miscalculated his fractional interest because mortgaging the partnership interest without his consent was a breach of duty and the partnership agreement, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Marvin could not demonstrate that he was damaged by the breach of duty and the partnership agreement. Marvin's interest was not mortgaged, nor did Marvin become obligated to Larry through the buyout. Thus, the District Court properly calculated Marvin's fractional partnership interest. Further, because Marvin retained a one-sixth interest, the District Court correctly charged Marvin with one-sixth of the attorney fees incurred in the dissolution. Pankratz Farms, Inc. v. Pankratz, 2004 MT 180, 322 M 133, 95 P3d 671 (2004).

Liquidation of Partnership Assets Required Under Court-Ordered Partnership Dissolution — Full Accounting Required: The partnership agreement between partners in a family farm and ranch operation did not apply to a court-ordered dissolution pursuant to this section, so default statutory rules applied. To avoid breakup of the family farm, the District Court ordered that one partner buy out the other partner's share. However, in a court-ordered dissolution, 35-10-629 requires liquidation of the partnership assets with any surplus remaining after creditors are paid to be paid in cash to the partners in accordance with their right to distribution. Thus, the District Court committed reversible error in adopting a judicially created alternative to the statutory winding-up procedure. Further, because asset liquidation was required, the District Court was required to perform a detailed accounting of the partnership affairs. McCormick v. Brevig, 2004 MT 179, 322 M 112, 96 P3d 697 (2004), followed in Pankratz Farms, Inc. v. Pankratz, 2004 MT 180, 322 M 133, 95 P3d 671 (2004). On remand, following a complete partnership accounting, the District Court held that each party owned a 50% interest in the partnership but that one partner had not paid the partnership for the entire 50% interest. The court ordered that partner to pay for the unpaid 25% interest by establishing a deficit capital account. The partner appealed on grounds that the 2004 McCormick decision (McCormick II) established as the law of the case that the partner owned a 50% interest and that the entire interest was paid. The law of the 2004 case did establish the 50% interests, but the complete accounting showed that the partner still owed a 25% interest that was to be deducted from that partner's share of the proceeds of the sale of the partnership, and the District Court did not err in so holding. In addition, it was the partner's complaint about the inadequacy of the initial accounting that caused the remand in McCormick II, and the partner benefited by the new and complete accounting, so it was not error to charge the partner one-half of the special master's fee. McCormick v. Brevig, 2007 MT 195, 338 M 370, 169 P3d 352 (2007). While the appeal in this case (2007 MT 195, McCormick III) was pending, sale of the partnership took place. Both partners subsequently appealed orders of the District Court concerning how the sale was to be conducted. However, because of the results of the sale, the issues related to the conduct of the sale were decided between the parties, so the appeal was moot. McCormick v. Brevig, 2007 MT 196, 338 M 387, 165 P3d 1124 (2007), following Walker v. St., 2003 MT 134, 316 M 103, 68 P3d 872 (2003).

Case Notes

Equalization of Capital Account Prior to Termination of Partnership — Interest Due: The District Court did not err in ordering one partner, Otto, to deposit $821,008 into a capital account in order to equalize the other partner's capital account balance to allow for an equal payment of partnership debts and expenses in preparation for terminating the partnership. Further, as a result of Otto's withdrawal of more than $800,000 from the capital account, the partnership incurred an interest expense of $210,143 on operating loans. Because Otto mismanaged the partnership finances, resulting in the partnership incurring interest costs to pay for business expenses and for Otto's compensation, the District Court correctly ordered Otto to repay the interest expenses. Baltrusch v. Baltrusch, 2008 MT 245, 344 M 489, 190 P3d 1034 (2008).

Acceptance of Special Master's Report in Partnership Dissolution Case Not Error: The District Court appointed an accountant as a special master to examine and report on a complicated partnership dissolution. One of the partners complained that the District Court erred in adopting the findings of a special master because the special master did not comply with former Rule 53, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), failing to hold proceedings on the record and preparing findings of fact and conclusions of law. The Supreme Court disagreed. The special master complied with the directive of the District Court by holding hearings with the parties, receiving evidence, and issuing a report, and although the findings and conclusions were not in a typical legal format, they were not clearly erroneous, and the District Court was required to accept the special master's report. McCormick v. Brevig, 2004 MT 179, 322 M 112, 96 P3d 697 (2004).

Liquidation of Partnership Assets Required Under Court-Ordered Partnership Dissolution — Full Accounting Required: The partnership agreement between partners in a family farm and ranch operation did not apply to a court-ordered dissolution pursuant to 35-10-624, so default statutory rules applied. To avoid breakup of the family farm, the District Court ordered that one partner buy out the other partner's share. However, in a court-ordered dissolution, this section requires liquidation of the partnership assets with any surplus remaining after creditors are paid to be paid in cash to the partners in accordance with their right to distribution. Thus, the District Court committed reversible error in adopting a judicially created alternative to the statutory winding-up procedure. Further, because asset liquidation was required, the District Court was required to perform a detailed accounting of the partnership affairs. McCormick v. Brevig, 2004 MT 179, 322 M 112, 96 P3d 697 (2004), followed in Pankratz Farms, Inc. v. Pankratz, 2004 MT 180, 322 M 133, 95 P3d 671 (2004). On remand, following a complete partnership accounting, the District Court held that each party owned a 50% interest in the partnership but that one partner had not paid the partnership for the entire 50% interest. The court ordered that partner to pay for the unpaid 25% interest by establishing a deficit capital account. The partner appealed on grounds that the 2004 McCormick decision (McCormick II) established as the law of the case that the partner owned a 50% interest and that the entire interest was paid. The law of the 2004 case did establish the 50% interests, but the complete accounting showed that the partner still owed a 25% interest that was to be deducted from that partner's share of the proceeds of the sale of the partnership, and the District Court did not err in so holding. In addition, it was the partner's complaint about the inadequacy of the initial accounting that caused the remand in McCormick II, and the partner benefited by the new and complete accounting, so it was not error to charge the partner one-half of the special master's fee. No Breach of Partnership Duty of Loyalty and Care When Partnership Property Accounted For: One partner transferred a partnership-owned tractor to a corporation owned by his sons, allowed the sons limited use of other partnership property without charging rent, and used personal credit cards for items for which the partnership paid. The other partner contended that this constituted conversion of partnership property and a breach of the duty of loyalty and duty of care to the partnership. The District Court found no conversion or breach of duty, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Under 35-10-405, a partner has a duty to account for partnership property or benefits received from the use or appropriation of the property, and here a proper accounting was made. The tractor was paid for, the use of other partnership property was minimal, and personal credit card expenses were accounted for separately from partnership charges. Baltrusch v. Baltrusch, 2003 MT 357, 319 M 23, 83 P3d 256 (2003).

Allocation of Losses in Other Than Equal Proportion Than Division of Profits: One of two equal partners claimed all of the partnership's losses on his personal taxes for the purpose of receiving a tax benefit. When the time came for final settlement, it was contended that half the losses suffered by the partnership should be assigned to the estate and that because the losses for which the estate was allegedly responsible were greater than the assets to which the estate was entitled, nothing was owed to the estate from the partnership. The District Court held that because one partner benefited from the partnership losses, he must also bear the burden of the action and was effectively precluded from trying to assign a share of the losses to the estate. Citing section 704(b) of the Internal Revenue Code, the Supreme Court agreed, holding that when partners exercise their right to allot partnership losses in some fashion other than in equal proportion to their division of profits, that allotment controls for purposes of determining losses during settlement. The District Court did not err in refusing to allocate partnership losses to the estate, which would have diminished the value of the estate's interest in the partnership. CHAPTER 12
LIMITED PARTNERSHIPS

Chapter Commissioners' Comments

The Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act adopted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws in August, 1976, was intended to modernize the prior uniform law while retaining the special character of limited partnerships as compared with corporations. The draftsman of a limited partnership agreement has a degree of flexibility in defining the relations among the partners that is not available in the corporate form. Moreover, the relationship among partners is consensual, and requires a degree of privity that forces the general partner to seek approval of the partners (sometimes unanimous approval) under circumstances that corporate management would find unthinkable. The limited partnership was not intended to be an alternative in all cases where corporate form is undesirable for tax or other reasons, and the new act was not intended to make it so. The new act clarifies many ambiguities and fills interstices in the prior uniform law by adding more detailed language and mechanics. In addition, some important substantive changes and additions have been made.

[Part 5] provides a list of all of the definitions used in the act, integrates the use of limited partnership names with corporate names and provides for an office and agent for service of process in the state of organization. All of these provisions are new. [Part 6] collects in one place all provisions dealing with execution and filing of certificates of limited partnership and certificates of amendment and cancellation. [Parts 5 and 6] reflect an important change in the statutory scheme: recognition that the basic document in any partnership, including a limited partnership, is the partnership agreement. The certificate of limited partnership is not a constitutive document (except in the sense that it is a statutory prerequisite to creation of the limited partnership), and merely reflects matters as to which creditors should be put on notice.

[Part 7] deals with the single most difficult issue facing lawyers who use the limited partnership form of organization: the powers and potential liabilities of limited partners. Section [35-12-703] lists a number of activities in which a limited partner may engage without being held to have so participated in the control of the business that he assumes the liability of a general partner. Moreover, it goes on to confine the liability of a limited partner who merely steps over the line of participation in control to persons who actually know of that participation in control. General liability for partnership debts is imposed only on those limited partners who are, in effect, "silent general partners". With that exception, the provisions of the new act that impose liability on a limited partner who has somehow permitted third parties to be misled to their detriment as to the limited partner's true status confine that liability to those who have actually been misled. The provisions relating to general partners are collected in [part 8].

[Part 9], the finance section, makes some important changes from the prior uniform law. The contribution of services and promises to contribute cash, property or services are now explicitly permitted as contributions. And those who fail to perform promised services are required, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, to pay the value of the services stated in the certificate of limited partnership.

A number of changes from the prior uniform law are made in [part 10], dealing with distributions from and the withdrawal of partners from the partnership. For example, [35-12-1008, now repealed] creates a statute of limitations on the right of a limited partnership to recover all or part of a contribution that has been returned to a limited partner, whether to satisfy creditors or otherwise.

The assignability of partnership interests is dealt with in considerable detail in [part 11]. The provisions relating to dissolution appear in [part 12], which, among other things, imposes a new standard for seeking judicial dissolution of a limited partnership.

One of the thorniest questions for those who operate limited partnerships in more than one state has been the status of the partnership in a state other than the state of organization. Neither existing case law nor administrative practice makes it clear whether the limited partners continue to possess their limited liability and which law governs the partnership. [Part 13] deals with this problem by providing for registration of foreign limited partnerships and specifying choice-of-law rules.

Finally, [part 14] of the new act authorizes derivative actions to be brought by limited partners.

Relation to Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act: Section 95, Ch. 216, L. 2011, provided: "This chapter modifies, limits, or supersedes the federal Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act, 15 U.S.C. 7001, et seq., but this chapter does not modify, limit, or supersede section 101(c) of that act or authorize electronic delivery of any of the notices described in section 103(b) of that act."

Application to Existing Relationships: Section 96, Ch. 216, L. 2011, provided: "(1) Before [the effective date of this act] [October 1, 2011], [this act] governs only:

(a) a limited partnership formed on or after [the effective date of this act]; and

(b) except as otherwise provided in subsections (3) and (4), a limited partnership formed before [the effective date of this act] that elects, in the manner provided in its partnership agreement or by law for amending the partnership agreement, to be subject to [this act].

(2) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (3), on and after [the effective date of this act], [this act] governs all limited partnerships.

(3) With respect to a limited partnership formed before [the effective date of this act], the following rules apply except as the partners otherwise elect in the manner provided in the partnership agreement or by law for amending the partnership agreement:

(a) Section 35-12-509(3) does not apply and the limited partnership has whatever duration it had under the law applicable immediately before [the effective date of this act].

(b) The limited partnership is not required to amend its certificate of limited partnership to comply with 35-12-601(1)(d).

(c) [Sections 49 and 50] [35-12-1016 and 35-12-1017] do not apply, and a limited partner has the same right and power to dissociate from the limited partnership, with the same consequences, as existed immediately before [the effective date of this act].

(d) [Section 51(4)] [35-12-1018(4)] does not apply.

(e) [Section 51(5)] [35-12-1018(5)] does not apply, and a court has the same power to expel a general partner as the court had immediately before [the effective date of this act].

(f) Section 35-12-1201(3) does not apply, and the connection between a person's dissociation as a general partner and the dissolution of the limited partnership is the same as existed immediately before [the effective date of this act].

(4) With respect to a limited partnership that elects pursuant to subsection (1)(b) to be subject to [this act], after the election takes effect, the provisions of [this act] relating to the liability of the limited partnership's general partners to third parties apply:

(a) before [the effective date of this act], to:

(i) a third party that had not done business with the limited partnership in the year before the election took effect; and

(ii) a third party that had done business with the limited partnership in the year before the election took effect only if the third party knows or has received a notification of the election; and

(b) on and after [the effective date of this act], to all third parties, but those provisions remain inapplicable to any obligation incurred while those provisions were inapplicable under subsection (4)(a)(ii)."

Saving Clause: Section 63, Ch. 522, L. 1981, provided: "(1) This act does not impair the obligation of any contract existing on October 1, 1981, or affect any rights accrued, duties incurred, or proceedings begun before October 1, 1981.

(2) A limited partnership formed under any statute of this state before October 1, 1981, may elect to be governed by this chapter. The general partner or partners may make the election for the limited partnership at any time on or after October 1, 1981, by complying with 35-12-601 of this chapter, except that the limited partners shall not be required to execute a new certificate of limited partnership. Notwithstanding such election by the general partner or partners:

(a) 35-12-901, 35-12-902, and 35-12-1008 apply only to contributions and distributions made after the date of the election;

(b) 35-12-1104 applies only to assignments made after the date of the election; and

(c) 35-12-1204 does not change the priority of creditors for transactions entered into before the date of the election.

(3) A limited partnership formed under any statute of this state before October 1, 1981, until or unless it elects to be governed by this chapter, shall be governed by 35-12-101 through 35-12-403, or other applicable prior law."

35-12-504. Definitions.

Commissioners' Comments

The definitions in this section clarify a number of uncertainties in [former] law and make certain changes.

Contribution: this definition makes it clear that a present contribution of services and a promise to make a future payment of cash, contribution of property or performance of services are permissible forms for a contribution. Accordingly, the present services or promise must be accorded a value in the certificate of limited partnership [35-12-601], and, in the case of a promise, that value may determine the liability of a partner who fails to honor his agreement [35-12-902]. Section 3 of the prior uniform law [35-12-103, now repealed] did not permit a limited partner's contribution to be in the form of services, although that inhibition did not apply to general partners.

Foreign limited partnership: the act only deals with foreign limited partnerships formed under the laws of another "State" of the United States [see 35-12-504(12)], and any adopting State that desires to deal by statute with the status of entities formed under the laws of foreign countries must make appropriate changes throughout the act. The exclusion of such entities from the act was not intended to suggest that their "limited partners" should not be accorded limited liability by the courts of a State adopting the act. That question would be resolved by the choice-of-law rules of the forum State.

General partner: this definition recognizes the separate functions of the partnership agreement and the certificate of limited partnership. The partnership agreement establishes the basic grant of management power to the persons named as general partners; but because of the passive role played by the limited partners, the separate, formal step of embodying that grant of power in the certificate of limited partnership has been preserved to emphasize its importance.

Limited partner: as in the case of general partners, this definition provides for admission of limited partners through the partnership agreement and solemnization in the certificate of limited partnership. In addition, the definition makes it clear that being named in the certificate of limited partnership is a prerequisite to limited partner status. Failure to file does not, however, mean that the participant is a general partner or that he has general liability. See [35-12-602(5) and 35-12-703].

Partnership agreement: the prior uniform law did not refer to the partnership agreement, assuming that all important matters affecting limited partners would be set forth in the certificate of limited partnership. Under modern practice, however, it has been common for the partners to enter into a comprehensive partnership agreement, only part of which was required to be included in the certificate of limited partnership. As reflected in [35-12-601], the certificate of limited partnership is confined principally to matters respecting the addition and withdrawal of partners and of capital, and other important issues are left to the partnership agreement.

Partnership interest: this definition is new and is intended to define what it is that is transferred when a partnership interest is assigned.

35-12-505. Name.

Commissioners' Comments

[Subsection] (2) of [this section] has been carried over from Section 5 of the prior uniform law [35-12-205, now repealed] with certain editorial changes. The remainder of [this section] is new and primarily reflects the intention to integrate the registration of limited partnership names with that of corporate names. Accordingly, [35-12-601] provides for central, state-wide filing of certificates of limited partnership, and [subsections] (3), (4) and (5) of [this section] contain standards to be applied by the filing officer in determining whether the certificate should be filed. [Subsection] (1) requires that the proper name of a limited partnership contain the words "limited partnership" in full.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language for former language that read: "(1) The name of each limited partnership as set forth in its certificate of limited partnership:

(a) must contain the words "limited partnership", the abbreviation "l.p.", or the designation "lp";

(b) may not contain the name of a limited partner unless:

(i) it is also the name of a general partner; or

(ii) the business of the limited partnership had been carried on under that name before the admission of that limited partner;

(c) may not contain business name identifiers, as defined in 30-13-201, or other language that states or implies that the limited partnership is other than a limited partnership; and

(d) must be distinguishable on the record from the name of any corporation, limited partnership, or limited liability company organized under the laws of this state or licensed or registered as a foreign corporation or limited partnership in this state.

(2) The use of a limited partnership's name by another corporation, limited partnership, or limited liability company is governed by 35-1-308." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 27 inserted (1)(c) prohibiting the use of a business name identifier in the name of a limited partnership; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 229 inserted (2) providing that use of limited partnership's name is governed by 35-1-308; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 2, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in (1) substituted "the abbreviation "l.p.", or the designation "lp"" for "in full"; deleted former (3) that read: "may not contain any word or phrase indicating or implying that it is organized other than for a purpose stated in its certificate of limited partnership"; at beginning of (4) substituted "must be distinguishable on the record from" for "may not be the same as or deceptively similar to"; and made minor changes in style.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 120 in (4) inserted reference to limited liability company.

35-12-508. Required information.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is new. In view of the passive nature of the limited partner's position, it has been widely felt that limited partners are entitled to access to certain basic documents, including the certificate of limited partnership and any partnership agreement. In view of the great diversity among limited partnerships, it was thought inappropriate to require a standard form of financial report, and [35-12-508] does no more than require retention of tax returns and any other financial statements that are prepared. The names and addresses of the partners are made available to the general public.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 in (1) substituted "street and mailing address" for "business address"; in (2) substituted current language for former language that read "a copy of the certificate of limited partnership and all certificates of amendment, together with executed copies of any powers of attorney pursuant to which any certificate has been executed"; inserted (3) referring to articles of conversion or merger; deleted former (1)(d) that read: "(d) copies of any then-effective written partnership agreements and of any financial statements of the limited partnership for the 3 most recent years"; inserted (5) pertaining to copy of partnership agreement; inserted (6) pertaining to copy of financial statement; inserted (7) pertaining to copy of consent or vote of a partner; in (8) substituted "partnership agreement made in a record, a record stating" for "written partnership agreement, a writing setting out"; in (8)(a) substituted "other benefits contributed" for "other property or services contributed"; in (8)(c) substituted current language for former language that read "any right of a partner to receive or of a general partner to make distributions to a partner that include a return of all or any part of the partner's contribution"; in (8)(d) substituted "activities" for "affairs"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) Records kept under this section must be available for inspection and copying at the reasonable request and at the expense of any partner during ordinary business hours"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 240 in (1) substituted "principal office" for "office referred to in 35-12-507(1)". Amendment effective October 1, 2008.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in (1)(a), after "partner", substituted "separately identifying the general partners" for "set forth" and at end inserted "and the limited partners, in alphabetical order"; inserted (1)(e) regarding a record of the contributions of the partners and events triggering dissolution; and made minor changes in style.

35-12-509. Nature, purpose, and duration of entity.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is identical to Section 3 of the prior uniform law [35-12-103, now repealed]. Many states require that certain regulated industries, such as banking, may be carried on only by entities organized pursuant to special statutes, and it is contemplated that the prohibited activities would be confined to the matters covered by those statutes.

35-12-510. Business transactions of partner with the partnership.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] makes a number of important changes in Section 13 of the prior uniform law [35-12-310, now repealed]. Section 13, in effect, created a special fraudulent conveyance provision applicable to the making of secured loans by limited partners and the repayment by limited partnerships of loans from limited partners. [Section 35-12-510] leaves that question to a State's general fraudulent conveyance statute. In addition, [this section] eliminates the prohibition in former Section 13 against a general partner (as opposed to a limited partner) sharing pro rata with general creditors in the case of an unsecured loan. Of course, other doctrines developed under bankruptcy and insolvency laws may require the subordination of loans by partners under appropriate circumstances.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 at beginning deleted "Except as otherwise provided in the partnership agreement" and after "partnership and" deleted "subject to other applicable provisions of law"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Case Notes

Illinois Partnership Agreement Ruled a Controlling Document Under Montana Law — Shares Pass as if Decedent Died Intestate: The decedent was a member of a family limited partnership agreement formed under Illinois law. The decedent, a Montana resident, devised 65% of the residual estate to her nieces and nephews. However, the decedent's will did not mention the interest in the limited partnership. Siblings to the decedent petitioned the District Court to determine whether the interest was included in the residual estate. The District Court held that the partnership agreement was a governing instrument under 72-2-721 and that the interest was a nonprobate asset and not part of the residual estate. The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that 72-2-721 applied instead of Illinois law and that the partnership interest must pass to the heirs in the manner it would had she died intestate. Estate of Kelly, 2014 MT 254, 376 Mont. 361, 334 P.3d 911.

Part 6
Formation — Certificate of Limited Partnership

35-12-601. Formation of limited partnership — certificate of limited partnership.

Commissioners' Comments

The matters required to be set forth in the certificate of limited partnership are not different in kind from those required by Section 2 of the prior uniform law [35-12-201, now repealed], although certain additions and deletions have been made and the description has been revised to conform with the rest of the act. In general, the certificate is intended to serve two functions: first, to place creditors on notice of the facts concerning the capital of the partnership and the rules regarding additional contributions to and withdrawals from the partnership; second, to clearly delineate the time at which persons become general partners and limited partners. [Subsection (2)], which is based upon the prior uniform law, has been retained to make it clear that the existence of the limited partnership depends only upon compliance with this section. Its continued existence is not dependent upon compliance with other provisions of this act.

2011 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 26 in (1)(c) substituted "business mailing address" for "complete business street address". Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Chapter 216 substituted current language for former language that read: "(1) In order to form a limited partnership, a certificate of limited partnership must be executed, must be filed in the office of the secretary of state, and must set forth:

(a) the name of the limited partnership;
(b) the information required by 35-7-105(1);
(c) the name and the complete business street address of each general partner; and
(d) any other matters the general partners, in their sole discretion, determine to include.

(2) A limited partnership is formed at the time of the filing of the certificate of limited partnership in the office of the secretary of state or at any later time specified in the certificate of limited partnership if, in each case, there has been substantial compliance with the requirements of this section." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 240 substituted (1)(b) concerning information required by 35-7-105(1) for former text that read: "the complete street address of the office and the name and complete street address of the agent for service of process required to be maintained by 35-12-507"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2008.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 75 in (1)(b) in two places substituted "complete street address" for "address"; and in (1)(c) substituted "complete business street address" for "business address". Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in (1), at beginning, substituted "In order" for "Two or more persons desiring"; deleted former (1)(b) that read: "the general character of its business"; in (1)(c), after "each", inserted "general" and after "partner" deleted "(specifying the general partners and limited partners separately)"; deleted (1)(e) through (1)(l) that read: "(e) the amount of cash and a description and statement of the agreed value of the other property or services contributed by each partner and which each partner has agreed to contribute in the future;

(f) the times at which or events on the happening of which any additional contributions agreed to be made by each partner are to be made;

(g) any power of a limited partner to grant an assignee of any part of his partnership interest the right to become a limited partner and the terms and conditions of the power;

(h) if agreed upon, the time at which or the events on the happening of which a partner may terminate his membership in the limited partnership and the amount of or the method of determining the distribution to which he may be entitled respecting his partnership interest and the terms and conditions of the termination and distribution;

(i) any right of a partner to receive distributions of property, including cash, from the limited partnership;

(j) any right of a partner to receive or of a general partner to make distributions to a partner which include a return of all or any part of the partner's contribution;

(k) any time at which or events on the happening of which the limited partnership is to be dissolved and its affairs wound up;

(l) any right of the remaining general partners to continue the business on the happening of an event of withdrawal of a general partner"; in (1)(d), before "partners", inserted "general"; and made minor changes in style.

35-12-602. Amendments or restatement of certificate.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] makes substantial changes in Section 24 of the prior uniform law [35-12-203, now repealed]. [Subsection (2)] lists the basic events—the addition or withdrawal of partners or capital or capital obligations—that are so central to the function of the certificate of limited partnership that they require prompt amendment. [Subsection (3)] makes it clear, as it was not clear under subdivision (2)(g) of former Section 24, that the certificate of limited partnership is intended to be an accurate description of the facts to which it relates at all times and does not speak merely as of the date it is executed. [Subsection (5)] provides a "safe harbor" against claims of creditors or others who assert that they have been misled by the failure to amend the certificate of limited partnership to reflect changes in any of the important facts referred to in [subsection (2)]; if the certificate of limited partnership is amended within 30 days of the occurrence of the event, no creditor or other person can recover for damages sustained during the interim. Additional protection is afforded by the provisions of [35-12-704].

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 in (1) in introductory clause substituted current language for former language that read "A certificate of limited partnership is amended by filing a certificate of amendment in the office of the secretary of state. The certificate must set forth"; in (1)(b) inserted "initial"; in (1)(c) substituted "changes the amendment makes to the certificate as most recently amended or restated" for "amendments to the certificate"; in (2) in introductory clause substituted current language for former language that read "An amendment to a certificate of limited partnership reflecting the occurrence of the event or events must be filed within 30 days after the happening of any of the following events"; in (2)(b) substituted "dissociation of a person as" for "withdrawal of"; in (2)(c) substituted current language for former language that read "the continuation of the business under 35-12-1201(3) after an event of withdrawal of a general partner"; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) A certificate of limited partnership must be amended promptly by any general partner upon becoming aware that any statement in the certificate was false when made or that any arrangements or other facts described have changed, making the certificate inaccurate in any respect"; inserted (3) pertaining to general partner responsibilities regarding false information; in (4) substituted "purpose as determined by the limited partnership" for "purpose the general partners may determine"; deleted former (5) that read: "(5) A person is not liable because an amendment to a certificate of limited partnership has not been filed to reflect the occurrence of any event referred to in subsection (2) if the amendment is filed within the 30-day period specified in subsection (2)"; in (5) substituted "be delivered to the secretary of state for filing" for "be executed and filed" and at end substituted "an amendment" for "a certificate of amendment"; inserted (6) pertaining to effective date of filed amendment or certificate; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 deleted former (2)(a) that read: "a change in the amount or character of the contribution of any partner or in any partner's obligation to make a contribution"; in (2)(a), after "new", inserted "general"; in (2)(b), before "partner", inserted "general"; in (3), at end after "respect", deleted "but amendments to show changes of addresses of limited partners need be filed only once every 12 months"; inserted (6) allowing execution of a restated certificate in the same manner as a certificate of amendment; and made minor changes in style.

35-12-603. Statement of cancellation.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] changes Section 24 of the prior uniform law [35-12-203, now repealed] by making it clear that the certificate of cancellation should be filed upon the commencement of winding up of the limited partnership. Section 24 provided for cancellation "when the partnership is dissolved".

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 in (1) substituted current language for former language that read "A certificate of limited partnership must be canceled upon the dissolution and the commencement of winding up of the limited partnership and at any other time there are no remaining limited partners. A certificate of cancellation must be filed in the office of the secretary of state and shall set forth"; deleted former (4) that read: "(4) the effective date (which must be a date certain) of cancellation if it is not to be effective upon the filing of the certificate"; in (1)(d) substituted current language for former language that read "any other information the general partners filing the certificate may determine"; inserted (2) pertaining to effective date of cancellation; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

35-12-604. Signing of records.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] collects in one place the formal requirements for the execution of certificates which were set forth in Sections 2 and 25 of the prior uniform law [35-12-201 and 35-12-204, now repealed]. Those sections required that each certificate be signed by all partners, and there developed an unnecessarily cumbersome practice of having each limited partner sign powers of attorney to authorize the general partners to execute certificates of amendment on their behalf. [This section] insures that each partner must sign a certificate when he becomes a partner or when the certificates reflect any increase in his obligation to make contributions. Certificates of amendment are required to be signed by only one general partner and all general partners must sign certificates of cancellation. [This section] prohibits blanket powers of attorney for the execution of certificates in many cases, since those conditions under which a partner is required to sign have been narrowed to circumstances of special importance to that partner. The former requirement that all certificates be sworn has been confined to statements by the general partners, recognizing that the limited partner's role is a limited one.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language for former language that read: "(1) Each certificate required by 35-12-601 through 35-12-609 to be filed in the office of the secretary of state must be executed in the following manner:

(a) An initial certificate of limited partnership must be signed by all general partners.

(b) Each certificate of amendment must be signed by at least one general partner and by each other general partner who is designated in the certificate as a new general partner.

(c) Each certificate of cancellation must be signed by all general partners.

(2) Any person may sign a certificate by an attorney-in-fact, but any power of attorney to sign a certificate relating to the admission of a general partner must specifically describe the admission.

(3) The execution of a certificate by a general partner constitutes an affirmation under the penalties of perjury that the facts stated in the certificate are true." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in (1)(a), at beginning, substituted "An initial" for "Each original" and at end substituted "all general partners" for "each partner named therein"; in (1)(b), after "other" and after "new", inserted "general" and at end deleted "or whose contribution is described as having been increased"; in (2), after "admission", substituted "of a general partner" for "or increased contribution of a partner" and at end deleted "or increase"; and made minor changes in style.

35-12-605. Signing and filing pursuant to judicial order.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] changes subdivisions (3) and (4) of Section 25 of the prior uniform law [35-12-204, now repealed] by confining the persons who have standing to seek judicial intervention to partners and to those assignees who are adversely affected by the failure or refusal of the appropriate persons to file a certificate of amendment or cancellation.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language for former language that read "If the persons required by 35-12-604 to execute any certificate fail or refuse to do so, any other person who is adversely affected by the failure or refusal may petition the district court to direct the execution of the certificate. If the court finds that it is proper for the certificate to be executed and that the persons so designated have failed or refused to execute the certificate, it shall order the secretary of state to record an appropriate certificate." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in first sentence, after "certificate", deleted "of amendment or cancellation", after "other" substituted "person" for "partner and any assignee of a partnership interest", and at end substituted "execution of the certificate" for "amendment or cancellation" and in second sentence, after "finds that", substituted "it is proper for the certificate to be executed" for "the amendment or cancellation is proper" and at end deleted "of amendment or cancellation".

35-12-607. Liability for false statement in certificate.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] changes Section 6 of the prior uniform law [35-12-202, now repealed] by providing explicitly for the liability of persons who sign a certificate as agent under a power of attorney and by confining the obligation to amend a certificate of limited partnership in light of future events to general partners.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language for former language that read: "If any certificate of limited partnership or certificate of amendment, restatement, or cancellation contains a false statement, any person who suffers loss by reliance on the statement may recover damages for the loss from:

(1) any person actually executing the certificate or causing another to execute it on the person's behalf who knew and any general partner who knew or should have known the statement to be false at the time the certificate was executed; and

(2) any general partner who after the execution of the certificate knew or should have known that any arrangements or other facts described in the certificate have changed, making the statement inaccurate in any respect, within a sufficient time before the statement was relied upon to have reasonably enabled that general partner to cancel, restate, or amend the certificate or to file a petition for its cancellation, restatement, or amendment under 35-12-605." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in introductory clause, after "amendment", inserted "restatement"; in (2), near end after "cancel", inserted "restate" and after "cancellation" inserted "restatement"; and made minor changes in style.

35-12-610. Term and renewal of certification.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 26 in (1) in first sentence near beginning before "limited partnership" inserted "domestic or foreign" and after "certification" inserted "or the date of issuance of a certificate under 35-12-1303"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011. The amendment by Ch. 216 rendered the amendment by Ch. 26 void.

Chapter 216 in (1) in first sentence inserted "limited partnership or a certificate of authority of a foreign" and inserted "or the date of issuance of a certificate"; inserted (5) pertaining to expiration of certificate of authority; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

35-12-611. Application for renewal of certification.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 75 at beginning deleted "One original and one copy of"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in second sentence, after "limited to the", substituted "information required by 35-12-601" for "following information:

(1) the complete name of the limited partnership;

(2) the name and address, including street name and number, if any, of each general partner;

(3) the address of the principal office of the limited partnership, including the street name and number;

(4) a description of the business;

(5) the name of the county or counties in which business is being transacted; and

(6) the name and address of the specified agent for service of process in the state."

35-12-612. Filing of application for renewal of certification — issuance of certificate.

(a) is produced by a method of transmission of images in which the image is scanned at the transmitter, reconstructed at the receiving station, and duplicated on paper at the receiving station; and

(b) is legible and the same size as the original.

(2) During the 5-day period referred to in subsection (1), the recorded facsimile copy constitutes constructive notice for all purposes of the original document.

(3) If the original document is not received within 5 working days of receipt of the facsimile copy as provided in subsection (1), the filing of the facsimile copy is void"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 18, 1997.

Part 7
Limited Partners

35-12-701. Becoming limited partner.

Commissioners' Comments

[Section 35-12-701(1)(a)] adds to Section 8 of the prior uniform law [35-12-207, now repealed] an explicit recognition of the fact that unanimous consent of all partners is required for admission of new limited partners unless the partnership agreement provides otherwise. [Section 35-12-701(1)(b)] is derived from Section 19 of the prior uniform law [35-12-304, now repealed] but abandons the former terminology of "substituted limited partner".

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language for former language that read: "(1) A person becomes a limited partner:

(a) at the time the limited partnership is formed; or

(b) at any later time specified in the partnership agreement for becoming a limited partner.

(2) After the filing of a limited partnership's original certificate of limited partnership, a person may be admitted as an additional limited partner:

(a) in the case of a person acquiring a partnership interest directly from the limited partnership, upon compliance with the partnership agreement or, if the partnership agreement does not so provide, upon the written consent of all partners; and

(b) in the case of an assignee of a partnership interest of a partner who has the power, as provided in 35-12-1104, to grant the assignee the right to become a limited partner, upon the exercise of that power and compliance with any conditions limiting the grant or exercise of the power." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 inserted (1) regarding the time at which a person becomes a limited partner; in (2), after "admitted as", substituted "an additional" for "a new"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) In each case under subsection (1), the person acquiring the partnership interest becomes a limited partner only upon amendment of the certificate of limited partnership reflecting that fact"; and made minor changes in style.

35-12-703. No liability as limited partner for limited partnership obligations.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] makes several important changes in Section 7 of the prior uniform law [35-12-301, now repealed]. The first sentence of [35-12-703(1)] carries over the basic test from former Section 7—whether the limited partner "takes part in the control of the business"—in order to insure that judicial decisions under the prior uniform law remain applicable to the extent not expressly changed. The second sentence of [35-12-703(1)] reflects a wholly new concept. Because of the difficulty of determining when the "control" line has been overstepped, it was thought it unfair to impose general partner's liability on a limited partner except to the extent that a third party had knowledge of his participation in control of the business. On the other hand, in order to avoid permitting a limited partner to exercise all of the powers of a general partner while avoiding any direct dealings with third parties, the "is not substantially the same as" test was introduced. [Subsection (2)] is intended to provide a "safe harbor" by enumerating certain activities which a limited partner may carry on for the partnership without being deemed to have taken part in control of the business. [Subsection (4)] is derived from Section 5 of the prior uniform law [35-12-205, now repealed], but adds as a condition to the limited partner's liability the fact that a limited partner must have knowingly permitted his name to be used in the name of the limited partnership.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language for former language that read: "(1) Except as provided in subsection (4), a limited partner is not liable for the obligations of a limited partnership unless, in addition to the exercise of the rights and powers as a limited partner, the limited partner participates in the control of the business. However, if the limited partner participates in the control of the business, the limited partner is liable only to persons who transact business with the limited partnership reasonably believing, based on the limited partner's conduct, that the limited partner is a general partner.

(2) A limited partner does not participate in the control of the business within the meaning of subsection (1) solely by doing one or more of the following:

(a) being a contractor for or an agent or employee of the limited partnership or of a general partner or being an officer, director, or shareholder of a general partner that is a corporation;

(b) consulting with and advising a general partner with respect to the business of the limited partnership;

(c) acting as surety for the limited partnership or guaranteeing or assuming one or more specific obligations of the limited partnership;

(d) taking any action required or permitted by law to bring or pursue a derivative action in the right of the limited partnership;

(e) requesting or attending a meeting of partners;

(f) proposing, approving, or disapproving, by voting or otherwise, one or more of the following matters:

(i) the dissolution and winding up of the limited partnership;

(ii) the sale, exchange, lease, mortgage, pledge, or other transfer of all or substantially all of the assets of the limited partnership;

(iii) the incurrence of indebtedness by the limited partnership other than in the ordinary course of its business;

(iv) a change in the nature of the business;

(v) the admission or removal of a general partner;

(vi) the admission or removal of a limited partner;

(vii) a transaction involving an actual or potential conflict of interest between a general partner and the limited partnership or the limited partners;

(viii) an amendment to the partnership agreement or certificates of limited partnership; or

(ix) matters related to the business of the limited partnership not otherwise enumerated in this subsection (2)(f) that the partnership states in writing may be subject to the approval or disapproval of limited partners;

(g) winding up the limited partnership pursuant to 35-12-1203; or

(h) exercise any right or power permitted to limited partners under this chapter and not specifically enumerated in this subsection (2).

(3) The enumeration in subsection (2) does not mean that the possession or exercise of any other powers by a limited partner constitutes participation by the limited partner in the business of the limited partnership.

(4) A limited partner who knowingly permits the limited partner's name to be used in the name of the limited partnership, except under circumstances permitted by 35-12-505(1)(b)(i) and (1)(b)(ii), is liable to creditors who extend credit to the limited partnership without actual knowledge that the limited partner is not a general partner." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 7 in (4) near middle substituted "35-12-505(1)(b)(i) and (1)(b)(ii)" for "35-12-505(2)(a) and (2)(b)". Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in (1), near middle of second sentence after "the business", deleted "is not substantially the same as the exercise of the powers of a general partner" and at end substituted "reasonably believing, based on the limited partner's conduct, that the limited partner is a general partner" for "with actual knowledge of his participation in control"; in (2)(a), at end, inserted "or being an officer, director, or shareholder of a general partner that is a corporation"; in (2)(c), at end, inserted "or guaranteeing or assuming one or more specific obligations of the limited partnership"; substituted (2)(d) regarding pursuit of a derivative action for former language that read: "approving or disapproving an amendment to the partnership agreement"; inserted (2)(e) regarding meetings of partners; in (2)(f), at beginning, substituted "proposing, approving, or disapproving, by voting or otherwise" for "voting on"; in (2)(f)(ii), at end, deleted "other than in the ordinary course of its business"; in (2)(f)(v), before "removal", inserted "admission or"; inserted (2)(f)(vi) through (2)(f)(ix) adding additional actions related to voting; inserted (2)(g) regarding winding up the limited partnership; inserted (2)(h) regarding unenumerated powers; and made minor changes in style.

35-12-704. Person erroneously believing self to be limited partner.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is derived from Section 11 of the prior uniform law [35-12-312, now repealed]. The "good faith" requirement has been added in the first sentence of [35-12-704(1)]. The provisions of [35-12-704(1)(b)] are intended to clarify an ambiguity in the prior law by providing that a person who chooses to withdraw from the enterprise in order to protect himself from liability is not required to renounce any of his then current interest in the enterprise so long as he has no further participation as an equity participant. [Subsection (2)] preserves the liability of the equity participant prior to withdrawal (and after the time for appropriate amendment in the case of a limited partnership) to any third party who has transacted business with the person believing in good faith that he was a general partner.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 in (1) in introductory clause near beginning substituted "makes an investment" for "makes a contribution", after "in the enterprise" substituted "is not liable for the" for "is not a general partner in the enterprise and is not bound by its", after "making the" substituted "investment" for "contribution", and after "rights of" inserted "or appropriate to"; in (1)(a) substituted "amendment, or statement of correction to be signed and delivered to the secretary of state for filing" for "amendment to be executed and filed"; in (1)(b) substituted "participation as an owner" for "equity participation", after "executing" substituted "and delivering to" for "and filing in the office of", and after "state" substituted "for filing a statement of" for "a certificate declaring"; in (2) substituted current language for former language that read "Any person who makes a contribution of the kind described in subsection (1) is liable as a general partner to any third party who transacts business with the enterprise before the person withdraws and an appropriate certificate, if any, is filed to show that the person is not a general partner, but in each case only if the third party actually believed in good faith that the person was a general partner at the time of the transaction"; in (2) and (3) substituted current language for former language that read "Any person who makes a contribution of the kind described in subsection (1) is liable as a general partner to any third party who transacts business with the enterprise before the person withdraws and an appropriate certificate, if any, is filed to show that the person is not a general partner, but in each case only if the third party actually believed in good faith that the person was a general partner at the time of the transaction"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in (2), near middle after "show", substituted "that the person is not a general partner" for "the withdrawal or before an appropriate certificate is filed to show his status as a limited partner and, in the case of an amendment, after expiration of the 30-day period for filing an amendment relating to the person as a limited partner under 35-12-602"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: At end of (1)(b) after "enterprise", inserted "by executing and filing in the office of the secretary of state a certificate declaring withdrawal under this section".

The amendment of this section of the uniform law was approved by the executive committee of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws to add a more specific notice requirement to facilitate withdrawal from equity participation when a partner believes that he has limited partner status but finds that he has made a good faith mistake.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language regarding right of limited partner and former limited partner to information for former language on right to information that read: "Each limited partner has the right to:

(1) inspect and copy any of the partnership records required by 35-12-508 to be maintained; and

(2) obtain from the general partners from time to time upon reasonable demand:

(a) true and full information regarding the state of the business and financial condition of the limited partnership;

(b) promptly after becoming available, a copy of the limited partnership's federal, state, and local income tax returns for each year; and

(c) any other information regarding the affairs of the limited partnership as is just and reasonable." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

35-12-801. Becoming partner.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is derived from Section 9(1)(e) of the prior law [35-12-306, now repealed] and carries over the unwaivable requirement that all limited partners must consent to the admission of an additional general partner and that such consent must specifically identify the general partner involved.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language on becoming a partner for former language on admission that read: "After the filing of a limited partnership's original certificate of limited partnership, new general partners may be admitted as provided in writing in the partnership agreement or, if the partnership agreement does not provide in writing for the admission of additional general partners, with the written consent of all partners." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 near middle substituted "as provided in writing in the partnership agreement or, if the partnership agreement does not provide in writing for the admission of additional general partners" for "only", before "written" deleted "specific", and after "consent of" substituted "all partners" for "each partner".

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is derived from Section 9(1) of the prior uniform law [35-12-306, now repealed].

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language on partner liability for former language on general powers and liabilities that read: "(1) Except as otherwise provided in this chapter and in the partnership agreement, a general partner of a limited partnership has all the rights and powers and is subject to all the restrictions of a partner in a partnership without limited partners.

(2) Except as otherwise provided in this chapter, a general partner of a limited partnership has the liabilities of a partner in a partnership without limited partners to persons other than the partnership and the other partners. Except as provided in this chapter or in the partnership agreement, a general partner of a limited partnership has the liabilities of a partner in a partnership without limited partners to the partnership and to the other partners." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

1985 Amendment: Near end of (1) after "restrictions", deleted "and liabilities"; and inserted (2) relating to the liabilities of a general partner in a limited partnership.

35-12-901. Form of contributions.

Commissioners' Comments

As noted in the comment to [35-12-504], the explicit permission to make contributions of services expands Section 4 of the prior uniform law [35-12-206, now repealed].

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language on form of contributions for former language that read: "The contribution of a partner may be in cash, property, or services rendered or a promissory note or other obligation to contribute cash or property or to perform services." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

35-12-902. Liability for contributions.

Commissioners' Comments

Although Section 17(1) of the prior uniform law [35-12-309, now repealed] required a partner to fulfill his promise to make contributions, the addition of contributions in the form of a promise to render services means that a partner who is unable to perform those services because of death or disability as well as because of an intentional default is required to pay the cash value of the services unless the certificate of limited partnership provides otherwise. [Subsection (2)] is derived from Section 17(3) of the prior uniform law.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language in (1) and (2) for former language that read: "(1) A promise by a limited partner to contribute to the limited partnership is not enforceable unless set out in a writing signed by the limited partner.

(2) Except as otherwise provided in the partnership agreement, a partner is liable to the limited partnership for any enforceable promise to contribute cash or property or to perform services regardless of whether the partner is personally unable to perform because of disability, death, or any other reason. If a partner does not make the required contribution of property or services, the partner is obligated at the option of the limited partnership to contribute cash equal to that portion of the value, as stated in the partnership records required to be kept pursuant to 35-12-508, of the stated contribution that has not been made"; in (3) at beginning of first sentence deleted "Unless otherwise provided in the partnership agreement", in second sentence at beginning deleted "Notwithstanding a compromise so authorized", and after "obligation" substituted "described in subsection (1), without notice of any compromise under this subsection, may enforce the original obligation" for "after the partner signs a writing that, in either case, reflects the obligation and before the amendment or cancellation to reflect the compromise may enforce the precompromise obligation"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 inserted (1) regarding enforceability of a promise to contribute; in (2), near beginning of first sentence after "provided in the", substituted "partnership agreement" for "certificate of limited partnership" and before "promise" inserted "enforceable" and near end of second sentence, after "stated in the", substituted "partnership records required to be kept pursuant to 35-12-508" for "certificate of limited partnership"; in (3), near middle after "credit or", substituted "otherwise acts in reliance on that obligation after the partner signs a writing that" for "whose claim arises after the filing of the certificate of limited partnership or an amendment thereto which"; and made minor changes in style.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 deleted (2) that read: "(2) if any distribution constitutes a return of any part of his contribution under 35-12-1008(3), to the extent and at the time or on the happening of the events specified in the certificate of limited partnership"; and made minor changes in style.

35-12-1005. Distributions in kind.

Commissioners' Comments

The first sentence of [this section] is derived from Section 16(3) of the prior uniform law [35-12-314, now repealed]. The second sentence is new, and is intended to protect a limited partner (and the remaining partners) against a distribution in kind of more than his share of particular assets.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 at beginning of first sentence substituted "A partner does not have a right to demand or receive" for "Except as provided in writing in the partnership agreement, a partner, regardless of the nature of the partner's contribution, has no right to demand and receive" and substituted language in second sentence for former language that read "Except as provided in writing in the partnership agreement, a partner may not be compelled to accept a distribution of any asset in kind from a limited partnership to the extent that the percentage of the asset distributed to the partner exceeds a percentage of that asset that is equal to the percentage in which the partner shares in distributions from the limited partnership"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 near beginning of first sentence, after "provided in", substituted "writing in the partnership agreement" for "the certificate of limited partnership" and near beginning of second sentence, after "provided", inserted "in writing"; and made minor changes in style.

Source: This section is derived from sec. 605 of the Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act (1976).

35-12-1006. Right to distributions.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is new and is intended to make it clear that the right of a partner to receive a distribution, as between the partners, is not subject to the equity risks of the enterprise. On the other hand, since partners entitled to distributions have creditor status, there did not seem to be a need for the extraordinary remedy of Section 16(4)(a) of the prior uniform law, which granted a limited partner the right to seek dissolution of the partnership if he was unsuccessful in demanding the return of his contribution. It is more appropriate for the partner to simply sue as an ordinary creditor and obtain a judgment.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 in first sentence in two places inserted "or transferee"; inserted second sentence pertaining to distributions being subject to offset; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Part 11
Assignment of Partnership Interests

35-12-1103. Rights of creditors of partner or transferee.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is derived from Section 22 of the prior uniform law [35-12-305, now repealed] but has not carried over some provisions that were thought to be superfluous. For example, references in Section 22(1) to specific remedies have been omitted, as has a prohibition in Section 22(2) against discharge of the lien with partnership property. Ordinary rules governing the remedies available to a creditor and the fiduciary obligations of general partners will determine those matters.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language on rights of creditors of partner or transferee for former language on rights of creditors that read: "On due application to a court of competent jurisdiction by any judgment creditor of a partner, the court may charge the partnership interest of the partner with payment of the unsatisfied amount of the judgment debt, with interest. To the extent charged, the judgment creditor has only the rights of an assignee of the partnership interest. This chapter does not deprive any partner of the benefit of any exemption laws applicable to the partner's partnership interest." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

35-12-1105. Power of estate of deceased partner.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is derived from Section 21(1) of the prior uniform law [35-12-402, now repealed]. Former Section 21(2), making a deceased limited partner's estate liable for his liabilities as a limited partner was deleted as superfluous, with no intention of changing the liability of the estate.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language on power of estate of deceased partner for former language on power of estate of deceased or incompetent partner that read: "If a partner who is a natural person dies or a court of competent jurisdiction adjudges that partner to be incompetent to manage the partner's person or property, the partner's personal representative, guardian, conservator, or other legal representative may exercise all of the partner's rights for the purpose of settling the partner's estate or administering the partner's property, including any power the partner had to give an assignee the right to become a limited partner. If a partner that is a corporation, trust, or other entity other than a natural person is dissolved or terminated, those powers may be exercised by the legal representative or successor of the partner." Part 12
Dissolution

35-12-1201. Nonjudicial dissolution.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] merely collects in one place all of the events causing dissolution. [Subsection] (3) is derived from Sections 9(1)(g) [35-12-306, now repealed] and 20 of the prior uniform law, but adds the 90-day grace period.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language on nonjudicial dissolution for former language that read: "A limited partnership is dissolved and its affairs must be wound up on the occurrence of the first of the following:

(1) at the time or on the happening of the events specified in writing in the partnership agreement;

(2) on the unanimous written consent of all partners;

(3) on the happening of an event of withdrawal of a general partner unless at the time there is at least one other general partner and the written provisions of the partnership agreement permits the business of the limited partnership to be carried on by the remaining general partner and the remaining general partner does so, but the limited partnership may not be dissolved or wound up by reason of any event of withdrawal if, within 90 days after the withdrawal, all partners agree in writing to continue the business of the limited partnership and to the appointment of one or more new general partners if necessary or desired; or

(4) on entry of a decree of judicial dissolution in accordance with 35-12-1202." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in (1), at end after "specified", substituted "in writing in the partnership agreement" for "in the certificate of limited partnership"; in (3), near middle before "permits", substituted "written provisions of the partnership agreement" for "certificate of limited partnership"; and made minor changes in style.

Foreign Limited Partnerships

35-12-1301. Governing law.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 280 in (1) near beginning inserted "including the laws of a federally recognized Indian tribe". Amendment effective April 23, 2015.

2011 Amendment: Chapter 216 substituted current language on governing law for former language that read: "Subject to the constitution and public policy of this state, the laws of the state under which a foreign limited partnership is organized govern its organization and internal affairs and the liability of its limited partners, and a foreign limited partnership may not be denied registration by reason of any difference between those laws and the laws of this state." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Source: This section is derived from sec. 901 of the Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act (1976).

35-12-1302. Application for certificate of authority.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is new. It was thought that requiring a full copy of the certificate of limited partnership and all amendments thereto to be filed in each state in which the partnership does business would impose an unreasonable burden on interstate limited partnerships and that the information on file was sufficient to tell interested persons where they could write to obtain copies of these basic documents.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 42 deleted former (2) that read: "(2) A foreign limited partnership shall deliver with the completed application a certificate of existence or a record of similar import dated within 6 months of its submission signed by the secretary of state or other official having custody of the foreign limited partnership's publicly filed records in the state or other jurisdiction under whose law the foreign limited partnership is organized"; inserted (7) regarding statement of compliance for foreign limited partnership; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 18, 2015.

2011 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 26 in (1)(d) before "address" inserted "business mailing"; in (1)(e) before "address" inserted "mailing"; and in (1)(f) before "address" inserted "business mailing". Amendment effective October 1, 2011. The amendment by Ch. 216 rendered the amendment by Ch. 26 void.

Chapter 216 substituted current language on application for certificate of authority for former language on registration that read: "Before transacting business in this state, a foreign limited partnership shall register with the secretary of state. In order to register, a foreign limited partnership shall submit to the secretary of state the application for registration as a foreign limited partnership, signed and sworn to by a general partner and setting forth:

(1) the name of the foreign limited partnership or the fictitious name adopted by a foreign limited partnership authorized to transact business in this state because its real name is unavailable;

(2) the state in which the foreign limited partnership was formed and the date of the foreign limited partnership's formation;

(3) the name and address of any agent for service of process on the foreign limited partnership whom the foreign limited partnership desires to appoint. An agent appointed under this section must be an individual resident of this state, a domestic corporation, or a foreign corporation authorized to do business in this state and with a place of business in this state.

(4) a statement that the secretary of state is appointed the agent of the foreign limited partnership for service of process if an agent has not been appointed pursuant to subsection (3) or, if an agent was appointed, the agent's authority has been revoked or the agent cannot be found or served with the exercise of reasonable diligence;

(5) the address of the office required to be maintained in the state of the foreign limited partnership's organization by the laws of that state or, if not so required, of the principal office of the foreign limited partnership;

(6) the name and business address of each general partner; and

(7) the address of the office at which is kept a list of the names and addresses of the limited partners and their capital contributions, together with an undertaking by the foreign limited partnership to keep those records until the foreign limited partnership's registration in this state is canceled or withdrawn." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 71 in (1) after "limited partnership" substituted remainder of (1) regarding name of foreign limited partnership for "and, if different, the name under which it proposes to transact business and register in this state"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 75 in introductory clause near middle after "secretary of state" deleted "one original and one copy of"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 deleted former (3) that read: "the general character of the business it proposes to transact in this state"; deleted former (7) that read: "(7) if the certificate of limited partnership filed in the foreign limited partnership's state of organization is not required to include the names and business addresses of the partners, a list of the names and addresses"; inserted (6) requiring the name and business address of each general partner; inserted (7) regarding the address of the office; adjusted subsection references; and made minor changes in style.

1983 Amendment: In introduction, in middle of second sentence, substituted "one original and one copy of the" for "in duplicate an".

Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Source: This section is derived from sec. 1003 of the Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act (1976).

Case Notes

Failure of Limited Partners to Request General Partner to Initiate Suit: The limited partners sued the bank, alleging that the bank had forced the general partner to breach his fiduciary duty to the limited partners. The lower court dismissed the complaint for failure to state a claim, holding that the plaintiffs had not alleged that they were suing in a derivative capacity and that they had failed to set forth with particularity their efforts to obtain action by the general partner. The Supreme Court ruled that under former Rule 9(a), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), the plaintiffs did not need to allege that they were suing in a derivative capacity. The court also held that although former Rule 23.1, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), and this section require the plaintiffs to set out with particularity their efforts to get the general partner to take action, the lower court should have given the plaintiffs a chance to amend their complaint. CHAPTER 13

MINING PARTNERSHIPS

Formation

35-13-101. When a mining partnership exists.

Case Notes

Liabilities Incurred Before Incorporation: When contract between holder of lease and bond on mining claim and others who contributed money for the operations contained all the requirements necessary to constitute a mining partnership and also provided that a corporation should be formed when contributors would exchange interests for stock therein, the contributors were responsible for liabilities incurred for operating expenses as mining partners under the agreement to join in immediate operation of mine, effective even if no corporation was ever formed. Meister v. Farrow, 109 M 1, 92 P2d 753 (1939).

Qualifications Not Required of Members: Members need not have skill or knowledge of the practical working of a mine; they need not have actual control of mining operations; a "grubstake" contract does not create the relationship; it is not necessary that all the partners actually participate in removal of minerals. Meister v. Farrow, 109 M 1, 92 P2d 753 (1939).

What Sufficient to Meet Requirements: Ownership of a lease and bond meets requirement of owning or acquiring a mining claim. Persons furnishing money for mining operations have sufficient interest in ownership to become members; those who contribute money for mining operations and share equally in the result are mining partners as much as those who work and supervise the mine. Meister v. Farrow, 109 M 1, 92 P2d 753 (1939).

Right of Surviving Partner to Partnership Property: The rule declared by Title 72, ch. 12, part 7 (now repealed), that in case of death of one member of partnership the surviving partner has right to all the partnership property and to settle its business and that the partnership assets form no part of individual estate of deceased partner until the partnership affairs have been wound up by the survivor applies to general trading partnerships only, not to mining partnerships. Bielenberg v. Higgins, 85 M 56, 277 P 631 (1929).

Creation by Law: Two things are requisite to a mining partnership: (1) that two or more persons own or acquire a mining claim for purpose of working it and extracting ore; (2) that they actually work the mine. When these factors are present, the law forms a mining partnership; no express agreement of partnership is necessary. State ex rel. Cole v. District Court, 79 M 1, 254 P 863 (1927).

Interest Under Agreement With Lessee: An interest in a mine under agreement with lessee will not support a mining partnership. Crystal Copper Co. v. Gaido, 5 F2d 881 (9th Cir. 1925).

General Partnership Distinguished: Mining partnerships differing from general partnerships were recognized by the decisions of this court before the enactment of this section July 1, 1895. Congdon v. Olds, 18 M 487, 46 P 261 (1896).

Rights of Cotenants: When plaintiff owned undivided three-fourths of mining claim and defendant, who owned the other one-fourth, also owned an adjoining claim through which it was extracting and appropriating to itself ore from vein alleged to have its apex in claim in which it was cotenant, no mining partnership existed since there was no actual working of mine by both owners, because the defendant alone was working the disputed portion. Anaconda Copper Min. Co. v. Butte & Boston Min. Co., 17 M 519, 43 P 924 (1896).

Relations Between Partners and with Third Persons

35-13-201. When contract in writing is binding.

Case Notes

Operation and Effect: Mining partnership differs from general partnership in the statutory restriction prohibiting one member of mining partnership from binding partnership by written contract unless expressly authorized by other members. Wilkinson v. Bell, 118 M 403, 168 P2d 601 (1946).

Partners Liable for Machinery Purchased: Members of mining partnership were held liable for machinery purchased by one in charge of operations even though latter executed conditional sales contract without express authority by remaining members under this section when no rights were claimed by plaintiff under the contract and judgment in its favor was not based thereon. Meister v. Farrow, 109 M 1, 92 P2d 753 (1939).

35-13-202. Owners of majority interest govern.

Case Notes

Conduct of Business: Under this section holders of majority interest in mining partnership may do all things proper to its operations, take the necessary steps to preserve partnership property, and select counsel for it. State ex rel. Cole v. District Court, 79 M 1, 254 P 863 (1927).

Management and Control: Those who own majority interest in mining partnership are entitled to management and control. Boehme v. Fitzgerald, 43 M 226, 115 P 413 (1911).

Part Case Notes

"Dividends" Not Deductible as "Interest" in Determining Income Tax: Money paid by farmers' cooperative corporation created under Montana law to preferred stockholders constitutes "dividends" and is not deductible as "interest" in determining income tax on ground that the stock creating proceeding was a nullity so that the preferred stock certificates were required to be regarded as notes, when it appeared that holders of preferred stock held it as stock and not as a note or other promise to pay par value of the shares (citing Title 14, ch. 2, R.C.M. 1947, now Title 35, ch. 15, MCA, as amended). Case Notes

Failure of Jury Instructions to State Law of Case Regarding Test to Be Applied in Evaluating Insured's Opinion on Health — Reversible Error: When applying for credit life insurance, plaintiff's husband, Clarence, indicated that he was in good health. Less than 1 year later, Clarence died, and plaintiff submitted an insurance claim, but the claim was denied and the policy was rescinded, so plaintiff sued. At trial, the District Court gave jury instructions outlining both an objective test and a subjective test for evaluating Clarence's opinion as to the condition of his health and also failed to give an instruction setting forth defendant's defense theory. The law in Montana is to use a subjective standard for evaluating an insurance applicant's certification as to the applicant's health, so the District Court committed reversible error in also giving an instruction requiring an objective test. On remand, the District Court was instructed to instruct on the subjective theory and to give an instruction setting forth defendant's defense theory. Williams v. Union Fidelity Life Ins. Co., 2005 MT 273, 329 M 158, 123 P3d 213 (2005). See also Lentz v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 164 M 197, 520 P2d 769 (1974), and Kiely Constr. v. 35-15-411. Disposal of earnings — dividends — reserve fund — educational fund.

Case Notes

"Patronage Dividends" Not Deductible as Business Expenses in Computing Income Tax — "May" Defined: Money paid by farmers' cooperative corporation created under Montana law as so-called patronage dividends out of its earnings to purchasers from it of farmers' commodities is not deductible in computing corporation's income tax as "ordinary and necessary business expenses", where it appeared that so-called patronage dividends were paid in violation of this section. "May" means that directors may or may not apportion earnings, but if directors choose so to do, they must follow statutory method of apportionment. Gallatin Farmers Co. v. Comm'r of Internal Revenue, 132 F2d 706 (9th Cir. 1942).

Dividends Not Proper Deduction for Taxation: In an action to recover a corporation license tax exacted from a cooperative association under section 84-1502, R.C.M. 1947, since amended (now 15-31-114, MCA), and paid under protest, the amount of dividends paid on capital stock outstanding was not a proper deduction in determining its net income for taxation purposes, such dividends being neither an expense of the association nor a payment of interest on indebtedness. Gallatin Farmers Co. v. Shannon, 109 M 155, 93 P2d 953 (1939).

"Net Profits" and Other Terms Synonymous: The words "net profits", as used in this section, mean that part of the receipts of a cooperative association remaining after payment of operating expenses, and the terms "profits", "net earnings", "funds", and "earnings", used indiscriminately in this section and 35-15-412, mean the same thing. Gallatin Farmers Co. v. Shannon, 109 M 155, 93 P2d 953 (1939).

Patronage Dividends an Expense in Computing Tax: Patronage dividends, which a cooperative association organized must pay under this section in apportioning its earnings if there be money remaining after paying certain other items, are in effect refunds or rebates to customers, whether they be stockholders or not, and are to be treated as a necessary expense of the association in computing the net income upon which it must pay a license tax. CHAPTER 18
RURAL COOPERATIVE UTILITIES

Chapter Case Notes

Electric Cooperative Requirement That New Customer Pay Prior Customer's Delinquent Bill Unreasonable: Granbois applied to have an electric cooperative provide service to her lot. However, the bylaws of the cooperative required that before she could receive service, Granbois pay the delinquent bill of the person who previously received service at the location. She paid the delinquent bill, began receiving service, and then brought an action against the cooperative on grounds that the policy violated unfair trade practices. Citing Howe v. Big Horn Elec. Co-op, 206 M 297, 670 P2d 936, 40 St. Rep. 1670 (1983), the Supreme Court held that the disparity in the relative positions of the cooperative and the consumer necessarily required the cooperative to deal reasonably with its members and that the policy requiring a new customer to either pay the predecessor's bill or go without electricity was an unreasonable restriction on Granbois's access to electric services. After determining that the case could proceed as an unfair trade practices action, the court remanded with instructions to refund Granbois the amount of the delinquent bill. Granbois v. Big Horn County Elec. Co-op, Inc., 1999 MT 222, 296 M 45, 986 P2d 1097, 56 St. Rep. 874 (1999).

Duty of Cooperative to Deal Reasonably With Members: Because of the disparity in relative positions of a rural electric cooperative and its members, a cooperative has a duty to deal with its members in a reasonable manner. Howe v. Big Horn Elec. Co-op, 206 M 297, 670 P2d 936, 40 St. Rep. 1670 (1983).

Co-op Unreasonable to Require Payment of Prior Resident's Bill as Condition of Provision of New Electric Service: It is a violation of a rural electric cooperative's duty to deal reasonably with its members for a co-op to use its superior bargaining position to force a prospective member to pay his predecessor's delinquent bill and to terminate service for nonpayment of that bill. In this case, the District Court found that the co-op's policy allowing disconnection of services for nonpayment of fees was reasonable. However, the District Court made no factual findings on the issue of whether renter's payment of landlord's prior bill was voluntarily made or was coerced as a condition of obtaining the services of the co-op. Therefore the case was remanded to District Court for a hearing on that issue. Howe v. Big Horn Elec. Co-op, 206 M 297, 670 P2d 936, 40 St. Rep. 1670 (1983).

Construction of Act: Nothing in the Rural Electric and Telephone Cooperative Act (prior to 1957 amendment) indicated that the Legislature intended that cooperatives should have the exclusive right to furnish electric energy in such rural areas and thus prevent competition by other authorized electric public utilities. Sheridan County Elec. Co-op, Inc. v. Montana-Dakota Util. Co., 128 M 84, 270 P2d 742 (1954).

35-18-102. Definitions.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 406 deleted former (1) that read: "(1) Corporations organized under this chapter and corporations which become subject to this chapter in the manner hereinafter provided are hereinafter referred to as "cooperatives""; inserted definition of cooperative; in definition of member near middle after "and retaining membership" substituted "in a cooperative as provided by the articles of incorporation or by laws of the cooperative, including persons" for "therein and shall include a husband and wife"; in definition of person at end substituted "or other organization or group or persons" for "or any body politic"; in definition of rural area inserted (c) regarding former rural area and inserted (d) regarding incorporated municipality; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 28, 2001.

Saving Clause: Section 7, Ch. 406, L. 2001, was a saving clause.

1987 Amendment: At end of (2)(e), after "February 1, 1971", deleted language that read: ""rural area", as applied to all corporations organized under the provisions of 35-18-105(2), means any area not included within the boundaries of any incorporated or unincorporated city or town having a population in excess of 1,500 persons except that an incorporated or unincorporated city or town with population more than 1,500 persons is considered a "rural area" for purposes of this chapter if the system or facilities serving the persons in the city or town is acquired by a cooperative by agreement with the company or entity serving the city or town, or if the city or town was served by the cooperative when it had a population of less than 1,500 persons and subsequently grew to a population more than 1,500 persons; but for the purposes of this chapter a "rural area" means an area not included within the boundary of any incorporated or unincorporated city or town having a population in excess of 3,500 persons which is not already being served by a system or facilities".

1981 Amendment: Added the exceptions at the end of (2)(e) (see 1987 amendment note for text).

Severability Clause: Section 12, Ch. 7, L. 1971, read: "If a part of this act is invalid, all valid parts that are severable from the invalid part remain in effect. If a part of this act is invalid in one or more of its applications, the part remains in effect in all valid applications that are severable from the invalid applications."

Case Notes

Dial-Up Internet Service Allowed Under Rural Electric and Telephone Cooperative Act: Plaintiffs, who were members of a rural telephone cooperative, provided dial-up Internet services. When the cooperative entered the market to provide similar competitive services, plaintiffs sued on grounds that the Rural Electric and Telephone Cooperative Act prohibited the cooperative from engaging in Internet services. The District Court held for the cooperative, plaintiffs appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Although the Legislature did not foresee the Internet when the Act was adopted, the plain language of the Act was to be construed liberally in allowing rural telephone cooperatives to provide adequate telephone service as technology advanced. Internet dial-up service, although not specifically enumerated in 35-18-105, is sufficiently similar to telephone service to be allowed under the Act. Weber v. Interbel Tel. Co-op, Inc., 2003 MT 320, 318 M 295, 80 P3d 88 (2003).

1985 Amendment: At end of (13)(a) after "thereof", deleted "provided that no duplication of lines, facilities, or systems providing reasonably adequate service will result therefrom".

Case Notes

Annotator's Note: These cases were decided prior to 1985 amendment that eliminated nonduplication provisions from rural cooperative utilities law.

Moving or Raising Utility Wires — Police Power, Not Eminent Domain: Under 69-4-603, a utility was required to move or raise utility wires so that oversized objects could be moved through public streets. The statute was determined to be an exercise of police power rather than sounding in eminent domain. Therefore, due process requirements of the 14th amendment may be met without compensation. Four factors were cited in the determination that the statute exercises police power: (1) public safety is concerned; (2) a public benefit is conferred; (3) a reasonable and necessary public use is allowed; and (4) the public's right to use the highways is recognized under the statute. Yellowstone Valley Elec. Co-op, Inc. v. Ostermiller, 187 M 8, 608 P2d 491 (1980).

Electric Service:

When electrical service was available from utility and utility was ready, willing, and able to serve new customer, electrical cooperative had no right under this section to serve customer, notwithstanding that cooperative had available power line 3,400 feet from site while utility's closest line was 6 miles from site, since availability of service from existing facilities and plants cannot be determined solely on basis of distance between existing transmission lines and site where electrical energy is to be delivered. Mont. Power Co. v. Sun River Elec. Co-op, Inc., 157 M 468, 487 P2d 307 (1971).

In determining that electrical service was available from existing facilities of private company thereby denying cooperative right to supply electric service to potential customer, court relied upon evidence that private company was serving other customers in area and evidence that distance private company would have to extend its service to supply new customer was less than distance cooperative would have to extend its service to supply same customer. Mont. Power Co. v. Fergus Elec. Co-op, 149 M 258, 425 P2d 329 (1967).

The right of a cooperative electric company to service nonmembers not in excess of 10% of the total number of members is subject to the rural areas limitation, and when a rural area served by a co-op is annexed by a city of more than 3,500 population, the co-op may continue to serve existing customers in the annexed area but is not authorized to extend its services to other customers there. Mont. Power Co. v. Vigilante Elec. Co-op, Inc., 143 M 119, 387 P2d 718 (1963).

A rural electric cooperative did not have a lawful right to service an addition contemplated, planned, promoted, and organized as a subdivision to a city. Mont. Power Co. v. Park Elec. Co-op, 140 M 293, 371 P2d 1 (1962), distinguished in Mont. Power Co. v. Vigilante Elec. Co-op, Inc., 143 M 119, 387 P2d 718 (1963).

Action to Determine Rights: When a controversy existed between a rural electric cooperative and an electric power company as to the right of the cooperative to supply service to an addition to the city, the cooperative could have brought an action under the Uniform Declaratory Judgments Act to determine its legal position before proceeding to install facilities to service the addition. Mont. Power Co. v. Park Elec. Co-op, 140 M 293, 371 P2d 1 (1962).

Underground Installations: A power company that operated an electric line along the edge of an addition to a city was not required to pay for facilities and underground installations constructed by a rural electric cooperative in such addition despite protests of power company. Mont. Power Co. v. Park Elec. Co-op, 140 M 293, 371 P2d 1 (1962).

Construction of Section: This section (prior to 1957 amendment) indicated the intention to limit the rights of the cooperatives in such rural areas to certain users. Such cooperatives do not have an implied exclusive franchise right whereby other public utilities would be prevented from competing therein. Sheridan County Elec. Co-op, Inc. v. Montana-Dakota Util. Co., 128 M 84, 270 P2d 742 (1954).

Case Notes

Electric Cooperative Requirement That New Customer Pay Prior Customer's Delinquent Bill Unreasonable: Granbois applied to have an electric cooperative provide service to her lot. However, the bylaws of the cooperative required that before she could receive service, Granbois pay the delinquent bill of the person who previously received service at the location. She paid the delinquent bill, began receiving service, and then brought an action against the cooperative on grounds that the policy violated unfair trade practices. Citing Howe v. Big Horn Elec. Co-op, 206 M 297, 670 P2d 936, 40 St. Rep. 1670 (1983), the Supreme Court held that the disparity in the relative positions of the cooperative and the consumer necessarily required the cooperative to deal reasonably with its members and that the policy requiring a new customer to either pay the predecessor's bill or go without electricity was an unreasonable restriction on Granbois's access to electric services. After determining that the case could proceed as an unfair trade practices action, the court remanded with instructions to refund Granbois the amount of the delinquent bill. Granbois v. Big Horn County Elec. Co-op, Inc., 1999 MT 222, 296 M 45, 986 P2d 1097, 56 St. Rep. 874 (1999).

Bylaw at Variance With Permissive Statutory Provision: Bylaws may contain regulation and management provisions not inconsistent with statutory provisions. A bylaw which is at variance with a permissive provision of the statutes is not so "inconsistent" as to require voiding of the bylaw provision. Dreyer v. Bd. of Trustees of Mid-Rivers Tel., Inc., 183 M 43, 598 P2d 205 (1979).

Operation — Members, Trustees, and Officers

Part Case Notes

Duty of Cooperative to Deal Reasonably With Members: Because of the disparity in relative positions of a rural electric cooperative and its members, a cooperative has a duty to deal with its members in a reasonable manner. Howe v. Big Horn Elec. Co-op, 206 M 297, 670 P2d 936, 40 St. Rep. 1670 (1983).

Co-op Unreasonable to Require Payment of Prior Resident's Bill as Condition of Provision of New Electric Service: It is a violation of a rural electric cooperative's duty to deal reasonably with its members for a co-op to use its superior bargaining position to force a prospective member to pay his predecessor's delinquent bill and to terminate service for nonpayment of that bill. In this case, the District Court found that the co-op's policy allowing disconnection of services for nonpayment of fees was reasonable. However, the District Court made no factual findings on the issue of whether renter's payment of landlord's prior bill was voluntarily made or was coerced as a condition of obtaining the services of the co-op. Therefore the case was remanded to District Court for a hearing on that issue. Howe v. Big Horn Elec. Co-op, 206 M 297, 670 P2d 936, 40 St. Rep. 1670 (1983).

Chapter 406 in (1) substituted language denying membership in cooperative unless person agrees to use electrical energy and electrical energy delivery services as provided in bylaws for former text that read: "No person who is not an incorporator shall become a member of a cooperative unless such person shall agree to use electric energy or telephone service furnished by the cooperative when such electric energy or telephone service shall be available through its facilities. The bylaws may provide that any person, including an incorporator, shall cease to be a member of a cooperative if he shall fail or refuse to use electric energy or telephone service made available by the cooperative or if electric energy or telephone service shall not be made available to such person by the cooperative within a specified time after such person shall have become a member thereof"; in (2) substituted second sentence regarding articles of incorporation and bylaws prescription of matters pertaining to membership and membership class for former sentence that read: "The bylaws may prescribe additional qualifications and limitations in respect to membership"; inserted (3) regarding classification of members; inserted (4) regarding designation of voting delegates; and made minor changes in style. 1981 Amendment: Substituted "at such place as shall be determined by the board of trustees" for "in the city or town in which the principal office of the cooperative is located" at the end of (3); inserted "or 50 members present in person, whichever is fewer" before "shall constitute a quorum" in (5); inserted "or number" after "greater percentage" in (5).

Case Notes

Meeting Place — Bylaws Providing for Board Determination: Where a cooperative's bylaws allowed the trustees to determine the place of the annual meeting but failed to expressly name the meeting place, the statute prevailed and the meeting was ordered held in the place of the principal cooperative office, even though the trustees had acted to fix the meeting place in a different location. (Case decided prior to amendment by Ch. 131, L. 1981.) Dreyer v. Bd. of Trustees of Mid-Rivers Tel., Inc., 183 M 43, 598 P2d 205 (1979).

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 41 in (2)(a) inserted exception clause regarding provision of insurance coverage; inserted (5) allowing extension of benefit coverage to trustees; and made minor changes in style.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "the board of trustees may establish a fixed sum . . . for: (a) attendance . . . (b) representing . . . approved by the board" for "a fixed fee and expenses of attendance, if any, may be allowed for attendance at each meeting of the board of trustees" at the end of (2).

Case Notes

Bylaws Providing for "Fixed Fee" by Board Resolution: The bylaws of a telephone cooperative provided that a fixed per diem fee and expenses could by board resolution be allowed to the trustees for attending meetings. The language of this section does not necessarily mean that the "fixed fee" must be set forth in the bylaw itself. The bylaws provision that the fee and expenses should be fixed by board resolution is simply a method for providing these items. Since the bylaw provision of the statute is an exception to the statutory requirement of approval of board compensation, the trustees have no clear legal duty to procure the prior approval of the membership for the resolution. (Case decided prior to amendment by Ch. 237, L. 1981.) Dreyer v. Bd. of Trustees of Mid-Rivers Tel., Inc., 183 M 43, 598 P2d 205 (1979).

(2) (a) An electricity buying cooperative shall honor terms and conditions of contracts executed on or before [the effective date of this section].

(b) Upon expiration of those contracts, an electricity buying cooperative shall dissolve and wind up its affairs within 1 year of the contract's expiration." Effective March 25, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 575, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, residential and small commercial customers of investor-owned distribution utilities in Montana need access to reliable electricity supply at equitable prices; and

WHEREAS, the aggregation of residential and small commercial customers that do not have access to competitive electricity suppliers at equitable prices provides them with market power to secure electricity at the least cost; and

WHEREAS, allowing one or more default suppliers to aggregate residential and small commercial customers to purchase electricity maximizes economies of scale, increases administrative efficiency, and provides maximum benefits to all small electricity customers; and

WHEREAS, wholesale competition in electricity markets may be facilitated by allowing entities to compete for the opportunity to provide electricity supply to those residential and small commercial customers on an aggregated basis; and

WHEREAS, the formation of nonprofit electricity buying cooperatives enhances the chances of securing for small customers the greatest amount of electricity at the least cost from the federal power system; and

WHEREAS, the state of Montana desires that its residents have access to the benefits of competitive retail electricity markets and federal Power Marketing Administration electricity; and

WHEREAS, federal Power Marketing Administration power or benefits should be distributed as widely and equitably as possible among small customers of open-access public utilities in the state of Montana in a manner that promotes efficient development and operation of the competitive retail electricity markets; and

WHEREAS, the state of Montana benefits by enacting legislation this session that maximizes the chances of an electricity buying cooperative being able to purchase power for small customers from the Bonneville Power Administration at preferential rates for the subscription period that begins in 2001."

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 427 in (10) inserted last sentence regarding board of public accountants. Amendment effective October 1, 2015, and terminates September 30, 2019.

2007 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 11 in (5) near end after "board" inserted "or a program"; in (9)(a) near beginning after "notice to the" inserted "board and to the"; inserted (9)(b) through (9)(d) outlining additional department duties regarding boards; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

Chapter 44 in introductory clause after "department" deleted "of labor and industry"; and in (8) at end substituted "37-1-307(1)(d)" for "37-1-307(1)(e)". Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Chapter 225 in (8) substituted "37-1-307(1)(d)" for "37-1-307(1)(e)"; inserted (12) concerning uniform rules for public notice; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2009.

Severability: Section 6, Ch. 225, L. 2007, was a severability clause.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 467 at end of introductory clause substituted "shall" for "may"; in (1) at beginning inserted "establish and", after "corresponding" substituted "receiving and processing routine" for "taking", after first "licenses" inserted "as defined by a board", after "issuing and" deleted "denying licenses granted by the boards", after "renewing" inserted "routine", after second "licenses" inserted "as defined by a board", and after "licensees" substituted "setting administrative fees, preparing agendas and meeting notices, conducting mailings" for "registering"; in (2) after "standardize" inserted "policies and procedures"; in (4) at beginning inserted "contract for" and at end after "board" deleted "or by law for licensing, unless the board determines that experts or professionals are necessary to administer or grade a particular examination"; in (6) after "boards" inserted "and programs"; in (7) after "setting" inserted "administrative fees and"; in (8) near middle after "individual's" deleted "licensing"; inserted (9) requiring notice to the appropriate legislative interim committee when a board cannot operate in a cost-effective manner; inserted (10) requiring monitoring of a board's cash balances; inserted (11) requiring the establishment of policies and procedures to set fees; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 483 in introductory clause after "department of" substituted "labor and industry" for "commerce". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 at end of introductory clause substituted "may" for "shall"; in (1), after "administrative", inserted "legal", after "issuing" inserted "and denying", and before "registering" inserted "disciplining licensees"; at beginning of (5), before "investigate", deleted "at the request of a board"; in (7), after "rules", substituted "setting expiration, renewal, and termination dates for licenses" for "establishing expiration dates of licenses for barbers, barbershops, professional engineers, professional land surveyors, nursing home administrators, optometrists, plumbers, social workers, speech-language pathologists, audiologists, and radiologic technologists"; and inserted (8) authorizing Department to issue notice and pursue action against licensed individual before licensing board pursuant to 37-1-307(1)(e). Amendment of 37-1-101(7) effective April 13, 1995, for the purpose of drafting rules that will be adopted on or after October 1, 1995.

Applicability: Section 133, Ch. 429, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to licenses applied for, complaints submitted, and proceedings begun after [the effective date of this section]." Effective October 1, 1995.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 83, in (7) inserted "professional" before "land surveyors".

Chapter 413, changed reference to speech pathologist to reference to speech-language pathologist.

1985 Amendment: In (7) after "plumbers", inserted "social workers, speech pathologists, audiologists".

1985 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 307, L. 1985, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it authorizes the department of commerce to adopt rules establishing uniform expiration dates for licenses for social workers, speech pathologists, and audiologists. It is the intent of the legislature that, in establishing a standard expiration date, the rules take into account any credit a person may have in what would have been his licensure period. The rules should also take into account the expiration dates of other licenses in order to spread the workload more evenly over the year."

1983 Amendment: Inserted (7) requiring Department to adopt rules establishing license expiration dates.

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 390, L. 1983, provided: "A statement of intent is required with House Bill 633 because it provides that the department of commerce may establish renewal dates for certain licenses by rule.

It is the intention of the legislature that in the promulgation of such rules, the department will consult with the affected boards, and, where possible, the professions to be regulated. It is the intention of this legislature that in attempting to meet the needs of the department in maintaining efficient licensing procedures, the needs of the board and the professions regulated are given the closest scrutiny and consideration."

1981 Amendments: Chapter 274 substituted "department of commerce" for "department of professional and occupational licensing" in the introductory clause.

Chapter 293 deleted "a pro rata basis according to the number of man-days and the actual operating costs of the department for each board" in (6); added "an equitable basis as determined by the department" to (6).

Case Notes

Revocation of Real Estate Broker's License — No Denial of Rights at Administrative Hearing — Hearing Examiner and Board Attorney as Deputy Attorneys General: A hearing examiner recommended that Sorini's real estate broker's license be revoked for violations of 37-51-321. On appeal, Sorini argued that she was denied her rights at the administrative hearing because both the hearing examiner and the attorney for the Board of Realty Regulation were deputies in the Attorney General's office; however, she failed to submit any proof to support this allegation. The Supreme Court noted that 2-4-611 establishes the manner in which a party may file an affidavit for disqualification of a hearing examiner, holding that in the absence of an affidavit it was not proper to raise the issue on appeal. The court agreed that having a greater separation of prosecutorial and decisionmaking functions would eliminate an appearance of impropriety, but found nothing to warrant a reversal of the District Court. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Construction of Inconsistent Statutes: Statutes relating to the Board of Public Accountants, contained in Title 37, ch. 50, appear to have been amended by implication by the Executive Reorganization Act of 1971, now codified as part of Titles 2, 37, and 39, thereby transferring the duties specified in 37-1-101 and 37-1-121 from the Board of Public Accountants to the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing (now Department of Labor and Industry) and the director thereof. Where two acts of the Legislature are inconsistent on the same subject, the prior statute is to be treated as repealed by the subsequent statute. 35 A.G. Op. 58 (1974).

37-1-104. Standardized forms.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 467 at beginning of first sentence substituted "The department shall" for "It is the responsibility of the department whenever possible to", after "standardized" deleted "application, license, and other", and after "forms" inserted "and processes to be" and in second sentence after "is to" inserted "streamline processes, expedite services" and near end after "waste, and" deleted "the use of out-of-date forms and" and after "facilitate" deleted "automated printing and"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

37-1-105. Reporting disciplinary actions against licensees.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 467 in first sentence near beginning after "all" deleted "licensing" and after "boards" substituted "and department programs" for "within the department"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 271 near middle of second sentence after "information" inserted "except pursuant to 37-1-138"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 63, Ch. 271, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to occurrences after December 31, 2002."

37-1-106. Biennial report.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 349 in last sentence, after "shall", substituted "submit the report to the office of budget and program planning as a part of the information required by 17-7-111" for "provide a copy of the report to the governor and, as provided in 5-11-210, to the legislature".

1991 Amendment: Inserted last sentence requiring Department to provide a copy of the report to the Governor and Legislature. Amendment effective March 20, 1991.

1983 Amendment: Near middle of section, before "The biennial report" deleted "In addition to the information prescribed by the governor under 2-7-102".

37-1-107. Joint meetings — department duties.

37-1-121. Duties of commissioner.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 467 in (1) in first sentence after "hearings" deleted "before each board within the department" and after "board" inserted "or department program"; in (2) at beginning of first sentence inserted "establish the qualifications of and", in second sentence after "authority to" inserted "establish the qualifications of" and after "hire" inserted "or terminate", and inserted third sentence requiring the department to consult with the boards regarding recommendations for qualifications for executive or executive director positions; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 483 in introductory clause substituted "commissioner of labor and industry" for "director of commerce"; at end of (3) substituted "commissioner" for "director"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 in (1), in first sentence after "impartial", substituted "hearing examiner" for "legal counsel" and in second sentence substituted "The hearing examiner shall conduct hearings" for "The legal counsel appointed shall see that hearings are conducted"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) whenever the department conducts an investigation of a complaint of illegal or unethical conduct of a member of a particular profession or occupation as prescribed in 37-1-101(5) and if requested by the appropriate board, appoint an impartial member of that profession or occupation to assist the department in its investigation. The member so appointed may not be a member of the board having jurisdiction over the particular profession or occupation"; in (2), after "administrative", inserted "legal"; and made minor changes in style.

Saving Clause: Section 132, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

Applicability: Section 133, Ch. 429, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to licenses applied for, complaints submitted, and proceedings begun after [the effective date of this section]." Effective October 1, 1995.

1985 Amendment: At beginning of (1) inserted "at the request of a party" and near end of first sentence of (1), before "hearing", inserted "contested case".

1981 Amendment: Substituted "director of commerce" for "director of professional and occupational licensing" in the introductory clause.

Case Notes

No Error by District Court in Affirming Final Agency Decision: The petitioner sought licensure as a clinical psychologist and was denied by the Board of Psychologists because he did not meet the educational requirements. The petitioner challenged the board's decision and requested a hearing. The hearing officer found in the petitioner's favor and recommended licensure. The board rejected the hearing officer's findings and again denied licensure. The petitioner sought judicial review of the board's decision and the District Court held in the board's favor. The Supreme Court affirmed and determined that the hearing officer's finding was based on a misinterpretation of the board's rules and was not supported by substantial competent evidence. Mayer v. Bd. of Psychologists et. al., 2014 MT 85, 374 Mont. 364, 321 P.3d 819.

37-1-130. Definitions.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 502 in definition of expired license after "period of" increased 45 days to 46 days; in definition of license at end after "occupation" inserted "regardless of the specific term used for the permission, including permit, certificate, recognition, or registration"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Saving Clause: Section 52, Ch. 502, L. 2007, was a saving clause.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 467 in introductory clause after "part" substituted "the following definitions apply" for ""board" means each board in this title"; inserted definition of administrative fee; in definition of board at beginning inserted ""Board" means a licensing board created under Title 2, chapter 15", after "that is" substituted "administratively attached" for "allocated", and after "department" substituted "as provided in 2-15-121" for "of labor and industry"; and inserted definitions of board fee, department, department program, expired license, lapsed license, license, and terminated license. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 483 at end after "department of" substituted "labor and industry" for "commerce". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

37-1-131. Duties of boards — quorum required.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 80 in (1)(b) at beginning inserted exception clause; deleted former (4)(d) that read: "(d) require continuing education for licensure, as provided in 37-1-306, or require continued state, regional, or national certification for licensure. Except as provided in subsection (3), if the board or department requires continuing education or continued state, regional, or national certification for continued licensure, the board or department may not audit or require proof of continuing education or continued state, regional, or national certification requirements as a precondition for renewing the license, certification, or registration. 1985 Amendment: Near end of (2) after "counsel", substituted "when required" for "appointed".

Case Notes

Board Increase in Penalty for Unprofessional Psychiatrist Conduct Affirmed: Following charges against a psychiatrist for unprofessional conduct, the Board of Medical Examiners considered the entire record and decided to exceed sanctions proposed by the hearings examiner by revoking the psychiatrist's license. The District Court affirmed the Board's action, and on appeal, the Supreme Court also affirmed. Having reviewed the complete record, the Board's increase in the proposed penalty was statutorily authorized and was not arbitrary or capricious. Thus, the Board did not commit an error of law by imposing the increase in penalty. Munn v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 2005 MT 303, 329 M 401, 124 P3d 1123 (2005), distinguishing St. v. Attorney General's Opinions

Interpretation of Plumber Licensing Statutes by Board of Plumbers — Licensing Authority Restricted by Statute — Intention of Legislature — Penalty Statute Inapplicable: The Board of Plumbers has the legal authority to interpret Title 37, ch. 69, and the interpretation by the Board must be given deference unless it is incorrect. In interpreting the plumbing licensing statutes, the intent of the Legislature must be determined, and if that intent can be understood from a plain reading of the statutes, there is no need to look further. The statutes as well as the statutory history clearly indicated that a plumber's license is required only for a person who is: (1) working in the field of plumbing in an incorporated city or town; (2) working in the field of plumbing in an area served by a public water supply or sewer system; or (3) working in the field of plumbing and connects or disconnects plumbing to or from a public water supply or sewer system, unless an exemption is granted. There is no penalty applicable to an unlicensed person for whom a license is not required by statute. 47 A.G. Op. 21 (1998).

Board of Dentistry Not to Reconsider Licensing Decisions of Board of Denturitry: Administrative agencies enjoy only those powers specifically conferred upon them by statute. They possess no common-law powers, and implied powers are limited only to those necessary for the effective exercise and discharge of powers and duties expressly conferred. Therefore, when the Board of Denturitry had no power to reconsider its licensing decisions, the Board of Dentistry, having succeeded to the functions of the Board of Denturitry, may not reconsider a prior decision of the Board of Denturitry to issue a denturist's license. 43 A.G. Op. 33 (1989).

Construction of Inconsistent Statutes: Statutes relating to the Board of Public Accountants, contained in Title 37, ch. 50, appear to have been amended by implication by the Executive Reorganization Act of 1971, now codified as part of Titles 2, 37, and 39, thereby transferring the duties specified in 37-1-101 and 37-1-121 from the Board of Public Accountants to the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing (now Department of Labor and Industry) and the director thereof. Where two acts of the Legislature are inconsistent on the same subject, the prior statute is to be treated as repealed by the subsequent statute. 35 A.G. Op. 58 (1974).

37-1-132. Nominees for appointment to licensing and regulatory boards.

Preamble: The preamble to SB 312 (Ch. 244, L. 1981) read: "WHEREAS, during the course of the Legislative Audit Committee's review of regulatory and licensing boards under the first two sunset cycles it was noted that appointments by the Governor to some boards must be made from lists submitted by private associations; and

WHEREAS, requirements tying board membership to private associations have been struck down by the courts in a number of states; and

WHEREAS, the opportunity for members of the public and private associations to submit nominees to the Governor for board appointments is in the public interest.

THEREFORE, it is the intent of this bill to delete requirements that appointments by the Governor to regulatory and licensing boards must be made from lists submitted by private associations and to provide that members of the public and private associations may submit nominees to the Governor for appointment to regulatory and licensing boards."

1983 Amendments: Chapter 123 substituted, at end of second sentence, "2-18-502" for "2-18-501, for each day in which 6 or more hours are spent on official board business".

Chapter 672 increased per diem from $25 to $50.

Preamble: The preamble to SB 463 (Ch. 474, L. 1981) read: "WHEREAS, during its sunset reviews of licensing and regulatory boards the Legislative Audit Committee noted that compensation and travel expenses for the boards vary considerably from board to board; and

WHEREAS, the various boards have very similar duties and responsibilities.

THEREFORE, it is the intent of this act to provide for the payment of uniform compensation and travel expenses for members of state licensing and regulatory boards."

2015 Amendment: Chapter 187 in (1) substituted first three sentences regarding board fees, amount needed, consideration of prior revenues and expenses, and cap on cash balances for "Each board allocated to the department shall set board fees related to the respective program area that are commensurate with costs for licensing, including fees for initial licensing, reciprocity, renewals, applications, inspections, and audits. A board may set an examination fee that must be commensurate with costs. A board that issues endorsements and licenses specialties shall set respective fees commensurate with costs", in middle after "standardized" inserted "administrative", and after "shall collect" deleted "administrative"; inserted (2) regarding rules for fees; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2015.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 467 in first sentence after "set" inserted "board", after "fees" deleted "reasonably", after "area" inserted "that are commensurate with", and after "costs" inserted "for licensing, including fees for initial licensing, reciprocity, renewals, applications, inspections, and audits. A board may set an examination fee that must be commensurate with costs. A board that issues endorsements and licenses specialties shall set respective fees commensurate with costs", in fourth sentence after "law" deleted "each board within", after "establish" inserted "standardized", and after "fees for" substituted "administrative services such as license verification, duplicate licenses, late penalty renewals, licensee lists, and other administrative service fees determined by the department as applicable to all boards and department programs. The department shall collect administrative fees on behalf of each board or department program and deposit the fees in the state special revenue fund in the appropriate account for each board or department program" for "program areas such as application, examination, renewal, reciprocity, late renewal, and continuing education", at beginning of sixth sentence substituted "Administrative service" for "Board", after "specific" inserted "board or", after "distributed to" inserted "board or", and at end after "determined by the" substituted "department" for "board", and at beginning of seventh sentence after "Each board" inserted "and department program"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 345, L. 1981, provided: "WHEREAS, most fees set by professional and occupational licensing boards are specified or limited in amount by law; and

WHEREAS, such limitations are not necessarily serving the purpose intended in that the fees are not related to costs incurred and board revenues are insufficient in some cases and excessive in others.

THEREFORE, it is the intent of this act to authorize and require such licensing boards to set fees reasonably related to the costs of administering the various programs under their jurisdiction."

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 412 (Ch. 345, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for Senate Bill 412 because it grants licensing boards within the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing the authority to set fees.

Presently fees charged by most licensing boards are set by law. Wherever changed circumstances require a change in fees legislation is required. Each session several bills are introduced to modify board fees. By allowing boards to set their own fees, flexibility is provided the boards to meet changing circumstances. At the present time, fees set by law are not based upon actual costs incurred by licensing boards in carrying out their various functions.

It is the intent of the Legislature that fees set by licensing boards be reasonably related to the costs of the respective programs. "Programs" of the licensing boards are intended to be such areas of responsibility as applications, examinations, renewals, and reciprocity. "Reasonably related" is intended to mean that the department generally breaks down the costs associated with the various programs and sets each fee at a level to cover these costs and the costs of maintaining the ongoing operations of the board. "Reasonably related" does not mean the department is required to maintain an exact system of actual costs, but rather means the department should generally allocate costs of the program equitably among the various fee categories."

Board Action in Seeking Injunction — No Intentional Interference With Business: The Board of Dentistry received a complaint from a dentist who claimed Kandarian was practicing dentistry without a license by performing temporomandibular joint disfunction evaluations. The Board discussed the complaint in an open meeting, releasing the contents of the complaint to the press at the same time, and subsequently filed for an injunction seeking to enjoin Kandarian from the practice. The Board's action was not tortious but rather was authorized by statute. Thus, Kandarian's claim that the Board negligently released the contents of its complaint, negligently filed suit, and intentionally interfered with his business was properly dismissed by summary judgment. Revocation of Real Estate Broker's License — No Denial of Rights at Administrative Hearing — Hearing Examiner and Board Attorney as Deputy Attorneys General: A hearing examiner recommended that Sorini's real estate broker's license be revoked for violations of 37-51-321. On appeal, Sorini argued that she was denied her rights at the administrative hearing because both the hearing examiner and the attorney for the Board of Realty Regulation were deputies in the Attorney General's office; however, she failed to submit any proof to support this allegation. The Supreme Court noted that 2-4-611 establishes the manner in which a party may file an affidavit for disqualification of a hearing examiner, holding that in the absence of an affidavit it was not proper to raise the issue on appeal. The court agreed that having a greater separation of prosecutorial and decisionmaking functions would eliminate an appearance of impropriety, but found nothing to warrant a reversal of the District Court. Jurisdiction Over Lapsed License: In 1987, Gilpin was convicted on two counts of sexual assault. In 1990, Gilpin's nursing license lapsed for failure to renew. In 1990, the Board of Nursing sought to revoke Gilpin's nursing license. The parties submitted an agreed statement of facts to a hearing examiner who submitted findings, conclusions, and a recommendation to the Board. The Board heard Gilpin's objections orally and in writing, adopted the hearing examiner's recommendations, and revoked the license. Gilpin then appealed to the District Court, which heard the parties' arguments and issued an order affirming the revocation of the license. The Supreme Court held that because the Board has power to reinstate a nursing license 3 years after it lapses (see 2005 amendment), the Board retains jurisdiction over a license 3 years after it lapses (see 2005 amendment). Thus, the Board did not lose jurisdiction over Gilpin's license and had jurisdiction to revoke the license. The Supreme Court also held that the stipulation of facts was a sufficient factual basis to revoke the license and that Gilpin was not entitled to any hearings in addition to those that he was given. Gilpin v. Bd. of Nursing, 254 M 308, 837 P2d 1342, 49 St. Rep. 831 (1992).

Case Notes

Criminal Conviction Not Conclusive Evidence of Unprofessional Conduct Sufficient to Warrant Revocation of Mortician's License: A criminal conviction is not conclusive evidence of unprofessional conduct and does not constitute sufficient grounds for revocation of a mortician's license. Because this section was cross-referenced in the license revocation statute, 37-19-311 (now repealed), before revoking a mortician's license, the Board of Funeral Service was required to determine whether a mortician's criminal conviction related to and affected the public health, safety, and welfare as it applied to the practice of mortuary science and whether the mortician had been sufficiently rehabilitated. Ulrich v. State ex rel. Bd. of Funeral Service, 1998 MT 196, 289 M 407, 961 P2d 126, 55 St. Rep. 822 (1998), distinguishing Erickson v. State ex rel. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 282 M 367, 938 P2d 625 (1997).

Petition for Reinstatement of License Conditioned Upon Completion of Court-Imposed Sentence Unlawful: Ulrich petitioned for reinstatement of his mortician's license, which was revoked by the Board of Funeral Service on grounds of unprofessional conduct following Ulrich's conviction of criminal charges based on his conduct as a real estate agent. The Board ordered that Ulrich could not petition for reinstatement until all terms of his court-imposed criminal sentence, including full restitution, had been completed. The Board argued that under 37-1-205, the order was lawful because completion of the sentence was evidence of restitution. However, completion of a sentence is not the only method by which an applicant is entitled to demonstrate sufficient rehabilitation. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that an applicant whose license is denied or revoked because of a criminal conviction pursuant to 37-19-311 (now repealed) is entitled to apply for reinstatement and a full hearing pursuant to this section. The order denying a petition for reinstatement until all conditions of a criminal sentence are met was unlawful. Ulrich v. State ex rel. Bd. of Funeral Service, 1998 MT 196, 289 M 407, 961 P2d 126, 55 St. Rep. 822 (1998).

Rejection of Hearings Examiner's Findings and Revocation of License — Abuse of Discretion: Ulrich sought reinstatement of his mortician's license, which was revoked by the Board of Funeral Service on grounds of unprofessional conduct following Ulrich's conviction of criminal charges based on his conduct as a real estate agent. The Board rejected the findings of a hearings examiner, who recommended reinstatement, on grounds that licensing Ulrich would affect the public's health, safety, and welfare. However, the hearings examiner's conclusions were supported by competent, substantial evidence of Ulrich's remorse, attempts to provide ongoing restitution payments, and rehabilitation. It was an abuse of discretion in violation of 2-4-621(3) for the Board to reject the hearings examiner's findings and revoke Ulrich's license to practice mortuary science. Ulrich v. State ex rel. Bd. of Funeral Service, 1998 MT 196, 289 M 407, 961 P2d 126, 55 St. Rep. 822 (1998).

What Section Applicable to License Revocation: Erickson asserted that the Montana State Board of Medical Examiners, pursuant to this section, needed to ascertain whether Erickson's conviction of Medicaid fraud related to the public health, welfare, or safety before considering whether to revoke Erickson's medical license. The Supreme Court held that 37-3-323 sets out the procedure to be applied when the Board revokes or suspends a medical license. A person who has had a license revoked under 37-3-323 as a result of a criminal conviction is entitled to consideration under this section when seeking a new license following rehabilitation. This section does not apply to the revocation of a license. Erickson v. St., 282 M 367, 938 P2d 625, 54 St. Rep. 395 (1997), overruling Mills v. Comm'r of Ins., 226 M 387, 736 P2d 102 (1987), and Gilpin v. Bd. of Nursing, 254 M 308, 837 P2d 1342 (1992).

Crime of Sexual Assault as Unprofessional Conduct and Crime Relating to Public Health, Welfare, and Safety — Lack of Rehabilitation: Gilpin was convicted of two counts of sexual assault. After his nursing license was revoked, Gilpin appealed, claiming that there was insufficient connection between the reason for his criminal conviction and the practice of nursing to warrant revocation of the license. The Supreme Court affirmed the hearing examiner's finding that the sexual assaults related to the public health, welfare, and safety and that Gilpin was guilty of unprofessional conduct. Gilpin v. Bd. of Nursing, 254 M 308, 837 P2d 1342, 49 St. Rep. 831 (1992), overruled in Erickson v. St., 282 M 367, 938 P2d 625, 54 St. Rep. 395 (1997).

License Revocation for Felony Theft: Plaintiff's occupational license as a life insurance agent was revoked solely because she was convicted of felony theft. No effort was made to determine whether the conviction related to the public health, welfare, and safety as it applied to the practice of her occupation. The Supreme Court held that the mere finding that a licensee was convicted of a felony involving moral turpitude is not a sufficient basis upon which to hold that the conviction is related to the public health, welfare, or safety as it relates to the licensed occupation. Mills v. Comm'r of Ins., 226 M 387, 736 P2d 102, 44 St. Rep. 743 (1987), overruled in Erickson v. St., 282 M 367, 938 P2d 625, 54 St. Rep. 395 (1997).

Uniform Professional Licensing and Regulation Procedures

Part Compiler's Comments

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 429, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is necessary for this bill because, although the bill deletes numerous grants of rulemaking authority in numerous sections of Title 37, the bill contains a single section allowing professional and occupational licensing boards to adopt rules. The purpose of replacing the numerous rulemaking authority grants with a single grant, as is the purpose with the rest of the bill, is to standardize the law in an attempt to reduce the number of rules and reduce variations in the rules from occupation to occupation.

The legislature takes note of the large number of bills proposed by and affecting professional and occupational licensing boards in Montana. A uniform licensing and disciplinary process needs to be established to permit the department of commerce [now department of labor and industry] and administratively attached licensing boards to administer the professional and occupational regulatory programs in a manner that is responsive to the public's needs. The public interest will be served by establishing uniform administrative provisions for these regulated professions and occupations that are designed to reduce the number of statutes and rules and variations in statutes and rules between professions or occupations and to promote public awareness of and access to the regulation of professions and occupations. It is the intent of the legislature to strengthen and consolidate disciplinary and licensure procedures for the licensed professions and occupations by providing a uniform disciplinary, licensing, and regulatory act, with standardized procedures for regulation, the purpose of which is to assure the public of the adequacy of competence and conduct in the regulated professions and occupations.

The rules must provide for adequate due process for licensed persons involved in disciplinary proceedings."

Administrative, Not Criminal, Sanctions Properly Imposed by Board of Outfitters Against Outfitter Who Hired Unlicensed Guide: Crismore hired an unlicensed guide. Pursuant to 37-1-312, the Board of Outfitters fined Crismore $1,000, placed him on probation for 18 months, and ordered him to complete remedial education. Crismore contended that the Board should have applied 37-47-344, which is the misdemeanor criminal statute that specifically applies to outfitters and guides and provides a maximum fine of $500. The Supreme Court found that Crismore's argument had no basis in law. The Board of Outfitters has no authority to conduct a criminal proceeding that may lead to a misdemeanor sentence under 37-47-344. That authority is vested in courts of limited jurisdiction. Rather, the Board has authority to enforce license regulations and conduct administrative contested case hearings pursuant to this section and therefore properly exercised its authority to sanction Crismore pursuant to 37-1-312. Contingent Termination — Request for Federal Exemptions: Section 104, Ch. 552, L. 1997, contained the following contingent termination provisions and order that the Department of Public Health and Human Services seek federal exemptions: "(1) [Sections 9, 11, 22 through 24, 93, and 95] [37-1-307, 40-1-107, 40-4-105, 40-5-922, 40-5-924, 50-15-403, and 61-5-107] and the bracketed language in [sections 1 through 3, 10, 25, 45, and 89] [40-4-204, 40-5-226, 40-5-901, 40-5-906, 40-5-907, 40-5-923, and 40-6-116] terminate on the date of the suspension if the federal government suspends federal payments to this state for this state's child support enforcement program and for this state's program relating to temporary assistance to needy families because of this state's failure to enact law as required by the federal Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996.

(2) [Sections 9, 11, 22 through 24, 93, and 95] [37-1-307, 40-1-107, 40-4-105, 40-5-922, 40-5-924, 50-15-403, and 61-5-107] and the bracketed language in [sections 1 through 3, 10, 25, 45, and 89] [40-4-204, 40-5-226, 40-5-901, 40-5-906, 40-5-907, 40-5-923, and 40-6-116] terminate on the date that a final decision is rendered in federal court invalidating the child support provisions of the federal Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996.

(3) If the director of the department of public health and human services certifies to the governor and the secretary of state in writing that one of the following provisions is no longer required by federal law because of repeal of or amendment to federal statutes that require that provision, the provision terminates on the date the certification takes effect:

(a) [section 9] [40-5-922];

(b) [section 11] [40-5-924];

(c) [sections 22 through 24] [37-1-307, 40-1-107, and 40-4-105];

(d) [section 93] [50-15-403];

(4) If the director of the department of public health and human services certifies to the governor and the secretary of state in writing that the federal government has granted this state an exemption from one of the following provisions, the provision terminates on the date the exemption takes effect:

(a) [section 9] [40-5-922];

(b) [section 11] [40-5-924];

(c) [sections 22 through 24] [37-1-307, 40-1-107, and 40-4-105];

(d) [section 93] [50-15-403, certification filed April 24, 1998];

(e) [section 95] [61-5-107];

(f) the bracketed provisions in [sections 1 through 3, 10, 25, 45, and 89] [40-4-204, 40-5-226, 40-5-901, 40-5-906, 40-5-907, 40-5-923, and 40-6-116].

(5) (a) The department of public health and human services shall do everything reasonably within its power to obtain, as soon as possible, federal government exemptions from the provisions listed in subsection (4).

(b) Because section 395(c) of the federal Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996 (PRWORA) allows a grace period for states to amend their constitutions in order to comply with PRWORA and because the Montana legislature believes that the section of PRWORA prohibiting a jury trial in a paternity proceeding violates Article II, section 26, of the Montana constitution and is therefore rejected, the department of public health and human services shall seek a federal government exemption from the jury trial prohibition in PRWORA as the first exemption it seeks under subsection (5)(a). [This exemption was received on December 8, 1997.]

Privileged Communication Precluding Defamation Claim — Summary Judgment Proper: Plaintiff contended that a Department of Transportation real estate appraiser defamed plaintiff by filing two written complaints with the Department of Labor and Industry alleging that plaintiff failed to comply with uniform standards when preparing appraisals on two condemned properties. The District Court summarily dismissed plaintiff's claim on grounds that the complaints were privileged communications. Plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The appraiser's complaints were made in an official proceeding authorized by law and were made to the proper authorities responsible for the interest being expressed and were thus, as a matter of law, privileged communications that were not subject to a claim of libel or slander. No genuine issue of material fact existed, so summary judgment for defendant was proper. McLeod v. St., 2009 MT 130, 350 M 285, 206 P3d 956 (2009), following Skinner v. Outfitter's Obligation to Ensure Licensure of Guide — Board's Failure to Notify Outfitter of Unlicensed Guide Not Due Process Violation: Crismore hired an unlicensed guide and was sanctioned by the Board of Outfitters. Expert Opinions in Legal Malpractice Claim During Summary Judgment — Plaintiffs Not Required to Prove That Underlying Case Was Winner: An attorney missed a statute of limitations deadline in a medical malpractice case by failing to file an application with the Montana Medical Legal Panel before filing a complaint in District Court, as required under 27-6-301 and 27-6-701. After the medical malpractice claim was dismissed, the plaintiffs filed a legal malpractice case against the attorney, but the District Court dismissed the legal malpractice case during summary judgment by relying completely on the affidavit of the attorney's expert while disregarding the opinions of three of the plaintiffs' witnesses. On appeal, the Supreme Court determined that the plaintiffs' opinions from two doctors and one legal expert were sufficient to overcome summary judgment. The Supreme Court held further that at the summary judgment stage, the plaintiffs had to establish only that, but for the attorney's negligence, the plaintiffs would have been able to present sufficient evidence to withstand summary judgment for the underlying medical claim and reach the jury with the case. Labair v. Carey, 2012 MT 312, 367 Mont. 453, 291 P.3d 1160.

Arbitrated Reinstatement of Nurse Affirmed — Violation of Public Policy Exception Inapplicable: An arbitration panel found that a nursing home had wrongfully discharged a nurse and recommended that the nurse be reinstated with no loss of seniority, wages, or benefits. The nursing home appealed on grounds that reinstating the nurse would violate public policy regarding the licensing of nurses because the nurse's alleged impairment would present a threat to the health and safety of vulnerable patients. The Supreme Court concluded that the public policy exception to court enforcement of arbitrated decisions did not apply in this case. The fact that the subject of an inquiry by an arbitration panel may also involve a possible violation of public policy does not mean a court may do the arbitrator's task and determine that reinstatement is not appropriate. Simply because an employee has committed some act that violates a law or public policy during the course of employment does not mean that reinstatement would violate that public policy, and only if the record clearly shows that the grievant is likely to engage in wrongful conduct in violation of public policy in the future could reinstatement be said to violate public policy. Teamsters Union Local No. 2 v. C.N.H. Acquisitions, Inc., 2009 MT 92, 350 M 18, 204 P3d 733 (2009). See also United Paperworkers Int'l Union v. Misco, Inc., 484 US 29 (1987), and Stead Motors v. No Showing of Damages or That Client Would Have Prevailed on Lost Appeal of Marital Dissolution Case — Failure of Legal Malpractice Claim: Richards brought a malpractice claim against an attorney who negligently failed to appeal Richards' marriage dissolution proceeding prior to the deadline for appeal. The District Court dismissed the claim, ruling that the court, rather than a jury, should decide the consequences of the attorney's failure to file the appeal and that the lost appeal would not have succeeded. Richards appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Even though the attorney admitted malpractice by allowing the claim to expire, the attorney contended that no damages occurred. When a malpractice claim changes to the question of whether an attorney perfected an appeal, the analysis shifts from one of fact to one of law, which is properly considered by the court rather than a jury. The question of the probable outcome of a lost appeal also presents a question of law for the trial court to decide based on the special expertise required to analyze the relevant law and rules of appellate procedure, and the review is limited to the transcript and record of the underlying action and arguments presented by counsel. Here, there was substantial credible evidence regarding primary parenting time, valuation of the marital estate, and child support payments showing that Richards' lost appeal would not have resulted in a successful or favorable outcome. Further, one element of a legal malpractice claim requires a showing that the attorney's conduct proximately caused damages suffered by the claimant. Because Richards failed to show that the lost appeal would have been successful, he also failed to show that the attorney's breach caused any damages, so the malpractice claim failed. Richards v. Knuchel, 2005 MT 133, 327 M 249, 115 P3d 189 (2005).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 109 at end of introductory clause substituted "part" for "chapter"; deleted former introductory clause of (2) and (2)(a) that read: "For the purposes of Title 37, chapters 72 and 73, and Title 50, chapters 74 and 76, the following additional practices are considered unprofessional conduct:

(a) addiction to or dependency on alcohol, an illegal drug, or a dangerous drug, as defined in Title 50, chapter 32"; in (13) at end after "mentally" inserted "in the performance of licensed professional duties"; in (14) at beginning inserted "exhibiting"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Code Commissioner Correction: In former (2) the phrase "additional practices are considered unprofessional conduct", which was originally stricken, was restored during the engrossing process. Because this phrase is rendered meaningless in the context of the amendments made by sec. 13, Ch. 109, L. 2009, the Code Commissioner has not codified the phrase.

(b) intended for use in the diagnosis, cure, mitigation, treatment, or prevention of disease in man;

(c) intended to affect the structure or any function of the body of man;

(d) intended for use as a component of any article described in subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this subsection (3), but the term does not include any device or any components of a device"; in definition of pharmacy substituted "has the same meaning as provided in 37-7-101" for "means an establishment which engages in the sale of drugs requiring a prescription"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 83, in (1) deleted "chiropody" and deleted parentheses around "podiatry".

Chapter 444, in definition of medical practitioner inserted "or a nursing specialty as described in 37-8-202(5)"; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

1987 Amendment: In (1) inserted "or optometry".

1981 Amendment: Deleted "the official" after "Pharmacopoeia" in subsection (2)(a); deleted "office, pharmacy, drugstore, or other" from the definition of pharmacy in subsection (4); substituted "requiring a prescription" for "at retail" in subsection (4).

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Code Commissioner Correction: In (2)(a) the Code Commissioner substituted "commercial driver's license" for "commercial motor vehicle operator's endorsement". Chapter 195 changed references in statutes from commercial motor vehicle operator's endorsement to commercial driver's license. The Code Commissioner has made the change in this section pursuant to the authority provided in sec. 84, Ch. 10, L. 1993.

1991 Amendment: In (1), near end of second sentence after "examined", substituted "or investigated as" for "in the manner" and deleted reference to 61-5-110; and in (2)(a), after "license", inserted "driving privilege, or commercial motor vehicle operator's endorsement".

Code Commissioner Correction: The Code Commissioner has substituted the department of justice for the division of motor vehicles in this section, because sec. 14, Ch. 503, L. 1985, repealed 2-15-2002, which had statutorily created the division, and sec. 1, Ch. 503 amended Title 61, Motor Vehicles, to substitute "department" for "division" throughout that title. The apparent intent was to eliminate the statutory status of the division, and therefore the Code Commissioner has changed statutory references accordingly (see 1-11-101(2)(g)).

No Duty of Clinic to Report Patient's Failure to Control Diabetes — Motion to Dismiss Proper: Survivors of decedents who were killed in a three-vehicle collision caused by a clinic patient driver who had failed to properly control his diabetes sued the clinic, claiming that the clinic breached its duty by failing to report its knowledge that Johnson was unfit to drive because of his failure to properly control his diabetes. The Supreme Court determined that the District Court did not err in granting the clinic's motion to dismiss, ruling that because this section provides for permissive rather than mandatory reporting, the clinic, as a matter of law, had no legal duty to report Johnson. 2013 Amendment: Chapter 265 in definition of data in (a) in middle inserted "may be shared with a medical practitioner, including the medical practitioner being reviewed, and that" and inserted last sentence regarding subsequent evaluations and analysis; in definition of incident report or occurrence report in (a)(i) substituted "may be but is not required to be created by the staff involved" for "created", inserted (a)(ii) regarding factual rendition of event, and in (b) substituted current language for former (b) that read: "(b) The terms do not include any subsequent evaluation of the event by a quality assurance committee that was conducted in response to an incident report or occurrence report"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 265, L. 2013, provided: "WHEREAS, the Montana Legislature adopted Montana's peer review statutes over 50 years ago, noting that peer review is in the interest of the public health; and

WHEREAS, in Sistok v. Kalispell Regional Hospital, 251 Mont. 38, 823 P.2d 251 (1991), the Montana Supreme Court held that Montana's peer review statutes confer a privilege on data created by or at the request of a medical review committee; and

WHEREAS, in Sistok v. Kalispell Regional Hospital, the Montana Supreme Court also observed that the statute providing for confidentiality was developed and the privilege was conferred by the Legislature as a matter of public policy to encourage health care providers to join medical review committees in an effort to ensure the responsive and full discourse among the professionals involved and to promote an atmosphere free of apprehension so that constructive criticism could occur; and

WHEREAS, in Huether v. District Court, 2000 MT 158, 300 Mont. 212, 4 P.3d 1193, the Montana Supreme Court found that Montana's peer review statutes are typical of the statutes adopted by various states to encourage candor in medical review committees that review and evaluate the quality of medical care provided in their hospitals; and

WHEREAS, in Huether v. District Court, the Montana Supreme Court also noted that the goal of Montana's peer review statutes is to promote continuous improvement in the quality of health care delivery through review of standardized health care operations and the performance of doctors and staff; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that the continuous review and improvement of health care is in the interest of all Montanans; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds it appropriate to revise certain definitions in order to clarify which information is privileged and which information is not privileged under Montana's peer review statutes."

MEDICINE

Chapter Administrative Rules

Title 24, chapter 156, ARM Board of Medical Examiners.

Chapter Case Notes

Osteopaths: When an applicant failed to supply the information required by the Board of Medical Examiners and failed to take a required examination, the Board was within the scope of its constitutional and statutory authority in denying the applicant a license by reciprocity to practice unlimited medicine and surgery in the state of Montana and did not act in a discriminatory or capricious manner. Shelton v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 166 M 472, 534 P2d 870, 32 St. Rep. 394 (1975).

Definition of "Osteopathy": "Osteopathy", as defined by its founder, dictionaries, and decisions of courts, "administers no drugs and uses no knife". St. v. Thierfelder, 114 M 104, 132 P2d 1035 (1943), overruled on another point in St. v. Labbitt, 117 M 26, 156 P2d 163 (1945).

Major and Minor Surgery Prohibited: Under the law regulating osteopathy, the practitioner is not authorized to perform surgery of any kind, either major or minor. St. v. Thierfelder, 114 M 104, 132 P2d 1035 (1943), overruled on another point in St. v. Labbitt, 117 M 26, 156 P2d 163 (1945).

Removal of Tonsils as Practice of Medicine: An osteopath was practicing medicine without a license in removing tonsils. St. v. Thierfelder, 114 M 104, 132 P2d 1035 (1943), overruled on another point in St. v. Labbitt, 117 M 26, 156 P2d 163 (1945).

Surgery Not Permitted by Amendment: In amending the original act under which the osteopath was forbidden to practice "major, minor or operative surgery" by striking out the word "minor", the Legislature did not intend to permit minor surgery. St. v. Thierfelder, 114 M 104, 132 P2d 1035 (1943), overruled on another point in St. v. Labbitt, 117 M 26, 156 P2d 163 (1945).

Penalty: Section 37-5-312 (now repealed) prescribes the penalty for violation of 37-5-305 (now repealed), both having the same history, Ch. 51, L. 1905. State ex rel. Freebourn v. District Court, 105 M 77, 69 P2d 748 (1937).

License Required of Physician: A physician or surgeon is not entitled, under the statute, to practice osteopathy without a license from the Board of Osteopathic Physicians (now Board of Medical Examiners). St. v. Hopkins, 54 M 52, 166 P 304 (1917).

Negative of Exception to Licensure Not Required: Unless statutory exception found in a statute is part of definition of offense sought to be described, the State is not required to negative such exception in an indictment or information. The proviso contained in 37-5-101(2)(b) (now repealed) is not such an exception, since neither physician nor surgeon can practice osteopathy without first obtaining a license therefor. St. v. Hopkins, 54 M 52, 166 P 304 (1917); St. v. Wood, 53 M 566, 165 P 592 (1917).

Regulation of Osteopathy Not Unconstitutional: The statute regulating practice of osteopathy is not invalid as arbitrary and unreasonable class legislation; nor does it make an arbitrary classification denying right of citizens to engage in lawful occupation and is therefore not an abuse of the police power of the state. St. v. Hopkins, 54 M 52, 166 P 304 (1917).

Temporary License as Matter of Defense: In prosecution for practicing osteopathy without a license, State is not required to negative defendant's possession of temporary certificate referred to in 37-5-304 (now repealed), this being a matter of defense. St. v. Hopkins, 54 M 52, 166 P 304 (1917); St. v. Wood, 53 M 566, 165 P 592 (1917).

Limitations on Practice: Section 37-5-101 (now repealed) does not authorize an osteopath to practice medicine or surgery but requires him to confine his practice to treatment by the use of the hands or mechanical appliances. St. v. Dodd, 51 M 100, 149 P 481 (1915).

Osteopathy Within State Police Power: The practice of osteopathy is a proper subject for police regulation. Johnson v. Great Falls, 38 M 369, 99 P 1059 (1909).

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Acupuncturist License Required of Licensed Physician Who Wishes to Advertise the Practice of Acupuncture — Use of Solid Needles by Licensed Physician Allowed in Performance of Therapeutic Modalities: No exception to either the education or examination requirement for the practice of acupuncture exists in law or rule for a licensed physician who wishes to practice acupuncture, although a licensed physician is relieved from taking additional examinations in anatomy, physiology, chemistry, dermatology, diagnosis, bacteriology, materia medica, and other subjects required by the existing physician's license. Therefore, if a licensed physician wishes to represent to the public that that physician is also licensed to practice acupuncture, the physician must acquire a license to practice acupuncture under Title 37, ch. 13. However, a physician who is licensed under this chapter may, as part of the practice of medicine, use solid needles to perform therapeutic modalities without first acquiring a license to practice acupuncture under Title 37, ch. 13. A physician who performs solid needle treatment without proper training or who exceeds the scope of the physician's license is subject to the disciplinary jurisdiction of the Board of Medical Examiners. 48 A.G. Op. 7 (1999).

General

37-3-101. Purpose.

Case Notes

Applying Pharmaceutical Definition of "Drug" in DUI Case — Counter to Legislative Intent: The defendant was charged with felony DUI and reckless driving after inhaling aerosol dust-remover that contained 1,1-Difluoroethane (DFE). The defendant argued that the charge should be dismissed because the definition of "drug" in 37-3-101 for pharmaceutical drugs did not include DFE. The District Court denied the motion to dismiss, reasoning that it was illogical to apply the pharmaceutical definition of "drug" in a DUI statute under 1-2-107 because it would run counter to the legislative intent of protecting public safety. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, ruling that the locations of the two uses of the term "drug" in the Montana Code Annotated demonstrated legislative intent that the pharmaceutical definition not apply to DUI statutes. St. v. Pinder, 2015 MT 157, 379 Mont. 357, 350 P.3d 377.

Driving Under Influence of Inhalant — Charge Proper Where Substance Used Diminishes Ability to Drive: The defendant was charged with felony DUI and reckless driving after inhaling aerosol dust-remover that contained 1,1-Difluoroethane (DFE). The defendant argued that the charge should be dismissed because the definition of "drug" in 37-3-101 did not include DFE. After his conviction, the defendant appealed the District Court's denial of his motion to dismiss. The Supreme Court affirmed, concluding that the language of the DUI statute plainly shows the Legislature intended to punish an individual who drove after ingesting "any" substance that diminished that person's ability to drive. St. v. Pinder, 2015 MT 157, 379 Mont. 357, 350 P.3d 377.

No Duty of Care Owed by State to Deceased Who Was Allegedly Victim of Malpractice by Doctor: Title 37, chapter 3, is not intended to protect a specific class of persons of which the deceased is a member from a particular type of harm, and thus no special relationship existed between the state and the deceased that gave rise to a special duty. Therefore the statutory special relationship exception to the public duty doctrine did not exist. Nelson v. St., 2008 MT 336, 346 M 206, 195 P3d 293, (2008).

Case Notes

Podiatrist Properly Excluded From Providing Testimony Regarding Doctor's Standard of Care — Consumer Protection Act Claims Properly Dismissed: The plaintiff sued the defendants, a doctor and his related medical business. The plaintiff alleged medical malpractice and Consumer Protection Act (CPA) violations stemming from the defendants' purported refusal to conduct further postoperative visits after his foot surgery. The plaintiff intended to call a podiatrist to testify to the standard of care. However, the District Court excluded the podiatrist because he was not a doctor of medicine or doctor of osteopathy as required in 26-2-601 and 37-3-102. The District Court then granted partial summary judgment on the CPA claim because the legal theories were premised upon allegations of professional negligence. A jury found in favor of the defendant. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the podiatrist did not meet statutory criteria to provide standard of care testimony and that the CPA claims failed because the claim stemmed from the alleged acts of professional negligence. Hastie v. Alpine Orthopedics & Sports Medicine, 2015 MT 346, 382 Mont. 21, 363 P.3d 435.

Partnership Agreement — Definition of "Practice of Medicine" — Application to Psychologists: Former partners of a medical clinic sued the clinic, claiming they were entitled to full partnership interest payments under a partnership agreement. The agreement provided for a reduction of partnership interest payments if a former partner continued to engage in the "practice of medicine" within 3 years of disassociation. The plaintiffs, who were psychologists still working in the community, claimed the phrase "practice of medicine" was a technical term that did not include psychologists. The District Court disagreed and concluded that under contract law, the ordinary and plain meaning of the phrase should be followed and that the ordinary meaning of the phrase included the practice of psychology. The plaintiffs appealed to the Supreme Court, which affirmed the District Court's grant of summary judgment in favor of the clinic. Krajacich v. Great Falls Clinic, LLP, 2012 MT 82, 364 Mont. 455, 276 P.3d 922.

Question of Validity of Definition of Practice of Medicine: Although much of defendant's brief concerns the statutes controlling the practice of medicine, the question of the constitutional validity of this section was rendered moot by the jury's acquittal of the counts charged under that section. St. v. Blinzler, 183 M 300, 599 P2d 349, 36 St. Rep. 1580 (1979).

Attorney General's Opinions

Acupuncturist License Required of Licensed Physician Who Wishes to Advertise the Practice of Acupuncture — Use of Solid Needles by Licensed Physician Allowed in Performance of Therapeutic Modalities: No exception to either the education or examination requirement for the practice of acupuncture exists in law or rule for a licensed physician who wishes to practice acupuncture, although a licensed physician is relieved from taking additional examinations in anatomy, physiology, chemistry, dermatology, diagnosis, bacteriology, materia medica, and other subjects required by the existing physician's license. Therefore, if a licensed physician wishes to represent to the public that that physician is also licensed to practice acupuncture, the physician must acquire a license to practice acupuncture under Title 37, ch. 13. However, a physician who is licensed under Title 37, ch. 3, may, as part of the practice of medicine, use solid needles to perform therapeutic modalities without first acquiring a license to practice acupuncture under Title 37, ch. 13. A physician who performs solid needle treatment without proper training or who exceeds the scope of the physician's license is subject to the disciplinary jurisdiction of the Board of Medical Examiners. 48 A.G. Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 126 in (2) near beginning of third sentence after "granted a" substituted "license" for "certificate"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005. The amendment by Ch. 467 rendered the amendment by Ch. 126 void.

Chapter 467 at end of first sentence after "shall" substituted "apply to the department on an approved form" for "make application to the department, verified by oath and in a form prescribed by the board"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) An applicant for a license on the basis of an examination shall file the application at least 60 days prior to the announced date of the examination. If the applicant is not at the time of filing the application a graduate of but is then in attendance at an approved medical school, the applicant shall submit to the department, instead of a diploma or other required evidence of graduation, a written statement from the dean or other authorized representative of the approved medical school that the applicant will receive a diploma at the end of the then-current school term. The applicant may not be granted a certificate until the applicant has filed with the department a diploma or other acceptable evidence of graduation from the approved medical school and has complied with the requirements of subsection (1). A license may not be issued until the applicant has satisfied the board that the applicant has completed at least 1 year of an approved internship or its equivalent and has otherwise met the requirements for the issuance of a license under this chapter"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 in third sentence in (1) substituted "department" for "board" and at beginning of fourth sentence deleted "At the board's request" and at end substituted "pertinent to the department's inquiry" for "pertinent to the board's information"; and made minor changes in style.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 467 deleted former (1) through (3) that read: "(1) In addition to the license fees required of applicants, a licensed physician actively practicing medicine in this state shall pay to the department a renewal fee as prescribed by the board.

(2) The payments for renewal must be made prior to the expiration date of the license, as set forth in a department rule. The department shall mail renewal notices before the renewal is due.

(3) Except as provided in 37-1-138, in case of default in the payment of the renewal fee by a person licensed to practice medicine who is actively practicing medicine in this state, the underlying license to practice medicine may be considered lapsed by the board"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 224 in (1) substituted "renewal fee" for "registration fee"; in (2) in three places and near beginning of (3) substituted "renewal" for "registration"; in first sentence of (2) substituted "license" for "registration" and after "rule" deleted "and a receipt acknowledging payment of the registration fee must be issued by the department" and in middle of second sentence after "notices" deleted "at least 60 days"; near end of first sentence of (3) substituted "license" for "certificate", after "may be" substituted "considered lapsed" for "revoked", and after "board" deleted "on 30 days' notice given to the delinquent of the time and place of considering the revocation" and deleted former second, third, and fourth sentences that read: "A registered or certified letter addressed to the last-known address of the person failing to comply with the requirements of registration, as the address appears on the records of the department, constitutes sufficient notice of intention to revoke the underlying certificate. A certificate may not be revoked for nonpayment if the person authorized to practice medicine, and notified, pays the registration fee before or at the time fixed for consideration of revocation, together with a delinquency penalty prescribed by the board. The department may collect the dues by an action at law"; in (4) after "A" deleted "registration or" and after "license" inserted "or renewal"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Chapter 271 in (3) at beginning of first sentence inserted "Except as provided in 37-1-138" and at beginning of second sentence after "A" deleted "registered or" (amendment in second sentence rendered void by Ch. 224 amendment); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (1), in (2), in first sentence, and in (3), in three places, before "registration", deleted "annual"; in (1), after "in this state shall pay", deleted "each year"; in (2), near beginning after "The", deleted "annual" and substituted "the expiration date of the registration, as set forth in a department rule" for "April 1"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 deleted second sentence in (1) that read: "If a person licensed to practice medicine absents himself from the state for a period of 1 or more years or does not engage in active practice in this state, he may continue his license in good standing by payment each year of a fee prescribed by the board or, at the discretion of the board, he may be reinstated on the payment of a fee prescribed by the board for each year of absence or inactive practice"; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 at beginning of (1) substituted "department" for "board"; in (2), in first sentence after "may", inserted "upon order of the board" and deleted third and fourth sentences that read: "If the board has reasonable cause to believe that this probability exists, the department shall mail to the person's last address of record with the department a specification of the charges, together with a written notice of the time and place of the hearing on the charges, advising that the person may be present and may be represented by counsel if the person wants to offer evidence and be heard in the person's own defense. The time fixed for the hearing may not be less than 30 days from the date of mailing the notice"; deleted (3) through (6) that read: "(3) A person, including a member of the board, may file a written complaint with the department against a person having a license to practice medicine in this state charging that person with the commission of any of the offenses set forth in 37-3-322 or with any of the offenses or conditions set forth in subsection (1) of this section. The complaint must set forth a specification of the charges. When the complaint is filed, the department shall mail a copy to the person accused at the person's last address of record with the department, together with a written citation of the time and place of the hearing on it.

(4) At the hearing, the board shall adopt a resolution finding the accused guilty or not guilty of the matters charged. If the board finds that the offenses or conditions referred to in 37-3-322 or subsection (1) of this section do not exist with respect to the person or if the person is found not guilty, the board shall dismiss the charges or complaint. If the board finds that the offenses or conditions referred to in 37-3-322 or in subsection (1) of this section do exist and the person is found guilty, the board shall:

(a) revoke the person's license;

(b) suspend the person's right to practice for a period not exceeding 1 year;

(c) suspend its judgment of revocation on the terms and conditions to be determined by the board;

(d) place the person on probation;

(e) impose a fine, not to exceed $500 an incident; or

(f) take any other action in relation to disciplining the person as the board in its discretion considers proper.

(5) In a case of revocation, suspension, or probation, the department shall enter in its records the facts of the action and of subsequent action of the board with respect to it.

(6) On the expiration of the term of suspension, the licensee must be reinstated by the board if the suspended person furnishes the board with evidence that the person is then of good moral character and conduct, is restored to good health, and has not practiced medicine in this state during the term of suspension. If the evidence fails to establish to the satisfaction of the board that the holder is then of good moral character and conduct or restored to good health or if the evidence shows the person has practiced medicine in this state during the term of suspension, the board shall revoke the license, using the notice and hearing procedure provided in subsection (2). The revocation is final and absolute"; deleted (8) and (9) that read: "(8) A fine imposed under this section must be deposited in the general fund.

Case Notes

What Section Applicable to License Revocation: Erickson asserted that the Montana State Board of Medical Examiners, pursuant to 37-1-203, needed to ascertain whether Erickson's conviction of Medicaid fraud related to the public health, welfare, or safety before considering whether to revoke Erickson's medical license. The Supreme Court held that this section sets out the procedure to be applied when the Board revokes or suspends a medical license. A person who has had a license revoked under this section as a result of a criminal conviction is entitled to consideration under 37-1-203 when seeking a new license following rehabilitation. Section 37-1-203 does not apply to the revocation of a license. Erickson v. St., 282 M 367, 938 P2d 625, 54 St. Rep. 395 (1997), overruling Mills v. Comm'r of Ins., 226 M 387, 736 P2d 102 (1987), and Gilpin v. Bd. of Nursing, 254 M 308, 837 P2d 1342 (1992).

License Revocation Warranted — Negligence, Malpractice, Unprofessional Conduct: Revocation of a general practitioner's medical license was warranted where evidence showed negligence and medical malpractice in the practice of obstetrics and neonatal care that resulted in the deaths of two infants. The physician continued to accept obstetrical patients after the restriction of the physician's practice in those areas. This was compounded by the physician's unprofessional conduct in misleading some of his obstetrical patients by informing them that he would have hospital privileges before the birth of their children and by providing obstetrical care in violation of the order to discontinue that service. Kauffman v. Dept. of Commerce, 229 M 204, 746 P2d 103, 44 St. Rep. 1905 (1987).

Charges Instituted by Board: Necessity prevents disqualification of Board from hearing charges instituted by it, since no other body is given jurisdiction to hear such charges. State ex rel. Yuhas v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 135 M 381, 339 P2d 981 (1959).

Unprofessional Conduct: Former provision of statute authorizing revocation of physician's certificate "for unprofessional, dishonorable, or immoral conduct" gave Board jurisdiction to hear charges involving an attempted abortion, unauthorized removal of x-rays, overcharges for services not performed, and the encouragement of fraudulent claims before the Industrial Accident Board (now Division of Workers' Compensation) for injuries not received. State ex rel. Yuhas v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 135 M 381, 339 P2d 981 (1959).

Notice of Revocation: Though Board of Medical Examiners is empowered to revoke certificate (see 2005 amendment) of a physician for unprofessional, dishonorable, or immoral conduct, it cannot arbitrarily revoke the certificate (see 2005 amendment) without giving physician reasonable notice of charge against him and time and place of trial. St. v. Schultz, 11 M 429, 28 P 643 (1892).

Case Notes

Proper Denial of Petition for Judicial Review of Board of Medical Examiners' Decision to Disallow Reconsideration of Stipulation of Unprofessional Conduct: The Board of Medical Examiners found that a doctor had conducted himself in an unprofessional manner by drawing a smiley face on the breast of a cancer patient. The doctor attended two out-of-state facilities at the request of the professional assistance program and subsequently sued the program and several program physicians for false imprisonment, conspiracy, and other charges. The program then withdrew from the treatment arrangement, and the Board produced a stipulation, which the doctor signed, wherein he admitted that the conduct was unprofessional. The doctor's conduct was reported to the national practitioner database, and he was placed on probation for 1 year. After probation was terminated, the doctor petitioned for reconsideration of the stipulation on grounds that it was signed under duress, that the conduct was not unprofessional, and that the record of the charge made it difficult to find employment. The Board denied reconsideration, the District Court affirmed, and the doctor appealed, but the Supreme Court also affirmed. Substantial evidence supported the District Court's findings that the stipulation was not signed under duress, and the court's failure to address the Board's omission of the doctor's requested findings of fact was not in error. The Board has wide discretion under this section whether to reconsider a prior action, and the District Court did not err in concluding that the Board acted within its discretion in denying the petition for reconsideration. Physiotherapy Practice of Medicine:

An alleged physiotherapist who attempted to remove moles from patient's body by use of surgical diathermy machine was guilty of unlawful practice of medicine. St. v. Moore, 141 M 86, 375 P2d 218 (1962).

Unlicensed person who affixed title "Dr." to his name and represented himself as a physiotherapist was guilty of practicing medicine without a certificate (see 2005 amendment). St. v. Bain, 130 M 90, 295 P2d 241 (1956).

The practice of physiotherapy constitutes the practice of medicine under Montana law. St. v. Bain, 130 M 90, 295 P2d 241 (1956).

Medicine and Surgery the Same: Where an osteopath was charged with practicing medicine (removing tonsils) without a license, his contention that the information was fatally defective in that, if he was guilty of any offense it was practicing surgery, held of no merit, the practice of medicine and surgery being considered as one under the statutes and by long acceptation by the people generally. "Osteopathy", as defined by its founder, dictionaries, and decisions of courts, briefly stated, "administers no drugs and uses no knife". St. v. Thierfelder, 114 M 104, 132 P2d 1035 (1943), reversed on other grounds in St. v. Labbitt, 117 M 26, 156 P2d 163 (1945).

Designation of Offense — Bill of Particulars Required: Where statute under which one is charged sets forth a number of ways in which the offense may be committed (such as former section prohibiting practice of medicine or surgery without a certificate, see 2005 amendment, and defining "practicing medicine or surgery"), the accused is entitled to know what particular portion of the section he is accused of violating, and by entering a plea of not guilty he may not be held to have waived his right to a bill of particulars. There is no statute in Montana requiring it, but the right exists by virtue of the provisions of both federal and state constitutions to know the nature and cause of the accusation. State ex rel. Wong Sun v. District Court, 112 M 153, 113 P2d 996 (1941).

Penalty — Jurisdiction in District Court: Prosecution of osteopath for practicing medicine and surgery without a license fell within exclusive jurisdiction of District Court and not within that of Justice of the Peace, the penalty for the offense exceeding Justice's Court jurisdiction. State ex rel. Freebourn v. District Court, 105 M 77, 69 P2d 748 (1937).

Osteopaths — Practice of Medicine: In former statute prohibiting practice of medicine or surgery without a certificate (see 2005 amendment) and defining "practicing medicine or surgery", proviso that nothing in section should restrict legally licensed osteopaths did not permit osteopaths to practice medicine or surgery without a certificate (see 2005 amendment).

Case Notes

Voluntary Act Precluding False Imprisonment Claim — Lack of Underlying Tort Precluding Civil Conspiracy Claim: A woman with breast cancer was advised by Hughes, a radiation oncologist, to undergo therapeutic radiology for the disease. Prior to radiation, an oncologist makes specific marks on the affected area to identify where to direct radiation beams. However, in addition to the marks directing radiation beams, Hughes drew a "smiley face" on the woman's breast by drawing two dime-sized "eyes" above the nipple of the breast and outlining the scar from the breast biopsy for the "mouth". The woman complained to hospital administration, and an ad hoc investigative committee recommended that Hughes receive a letter of reprimand, have a term of probation, have a chaperone while working, and be evaluated by the Montana Professional Assistance Program (MPAP). Hughes agreed to a medical, psychiatric, or chemical dependency evaluation and voluntarily enrolled in two such programs in Texas and Kansas. After release, Hughes signed an aftercare agreement. Hughes then brought suit against the individual members of the ad hoc committee and MPAP, alleging false imprisonment, civil conspiracy, breach of contract, and civil right violations related to the disciplinary actions. Summary judgment was granted to defendants in federal District Court on the civil rights claims, and the remaining charges were remanded to state District Court, where they were also summarily dismissed. Hughes appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed dismissal of the false imprisonment claim because Hughes voluntarily signed the treatment agreements and submitted to evaluation. Two elements of false imprisonment are the restraint of an individual against the individual's will and the unlawfulness of that restraint, but because no material fact existed as to the voluntariness of Hughes's action, the false imprisonment claim failed as a matter of law. Further, to sustain a civil conspiracy claim, plaintiff must allege a tort committed by one of the conspirators, but because the false imprisonment claim failed, there was no underlying tort action to form a basis for civil conspiracy, so that claim failed as well. Hughes v. Pullman, 2001 MT 216, 306 M 420, 36 P3d 339 (2001).

Case Notes

Injunction to Preclude Reporting of Physician's Suspension Until Breach of Contract Issue Settled: A physician applied for a preliminary injunction to preclude defendant medical center from reporting the physician's suspension until the issue of whether defendant breached its contract by suspending the physician without just cause was resolved. The District Court granted the injunction and defendant appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Defendant failed to demonstrate that the District Court manifestly abused its discretion by issuing the preliminary injunction. The District Court correctly found that the physician had met two criteria for issuance of the injunction by demonstrating the likelihood of success on the merits of the case and the need for relief to prevent great or irreparable injury to the physician. The criteria for issuing the injunction having been met, the District Court did not err in dismissing defendant's motion to dismiss. Doe v. or verbal command in a manner appropriate to the patient's cognitive level. Conscious sedation is not a form of general anesthesia, and brief interludes of unconsciousness during conscious sedation do not bring conscious sedation within the scope of general anesthesia"; inserted definition of deep sedation; in definition of general anesthesia substituted current text for "means a state of unconsciousness intentionally produced by anesthetic agents, with absence of pain sensation over the entire body and a greater or lesser degree of muscular relaxation. The drugs producing this state can be administered by inhalation, intravenously, intramuscularly, or via the gastrointestinal tract. General anesthesia is divided into:

(i) full general anesthesia, which means a level of consciousness in which the patient is without intact protective reflexes, is unable to maintain an airway, and is incapable of rational response to query or command; and

(ii) light general anesthesia, which means a level of consciousness in which the patient breathes normally without assistance and retains protective reflexes throughout most of the procedure"; and deleted definition that read: ""General anesthetic" means any recognized anesthetic agent, sedative, hypnotic, tranquilizer, or narcotic used in sufficient prescribed dosages for the purpose of inducing general anesthesia.

Case Notes

Use of Declaratory Judgment to Settle Question of Business Association Between Dentist and Denturist Improper — Dismissal for Failure to State Claim and Exhaust Administrative Remedies: Brisendine, a licensed denturist, presented to the Board of Dentistry a proposal stating his desire to enter into a business association with a dentist regarding fees and compensation. The Board issued a letter stating that it was considering the proposal but that such association would probably constitute the illegal practice of dentistry. The Board further threatened sanctions against Brisendine if he went forward with his proposal, but no final decision was ever issued by the Board. Brisendine sought a declaratory judgment and injunctive relief in District Court, requesting a decision on whether the business association was legal. The District Court dismissed the complaint for failure to present a justiciable controversy. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, holding that use of a declaratory judgment at this stage of the proceedings constituted an attempt to seek an advisory opinion and an unwarranted intrusion into the Board's regulatory authority. The Supreme Court noted that Brisendine could seek a declaratory judgment from the Board without subjecting his license to suspension or revocation and that dismissal of the motion for declaratory judgment was proper because Brisendine had not exhausted his administrative remedies. Compiler's Comments

1985 Amendment: After first sentence inserted remainder of section providing that rules may include the subjects of administration of anesthetics and advertising.

1985 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 518, L. 1985, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it contains a delegation of authority to allow the board of dentistry to adopt rules to regulate dental advertising and dental procedures involving the administration of anesthetics.

The legislature finds that no person who engages in the practice of dentistry or oral surgery should perform a dental or surgical procedure upon another person if a general anesthetic or general anesthesia is administered unless there is another qualified health professional available to monitor the patient. The legislature intends that any rule regulating dental anesthetics adopted by the board should be consistent with this finding.

The legislature intends that the board impose additional, necessary requirements for the training and skill of individuals who administer and monitor general anesthesia, deep conscious sedation, or any anesthetic agent used in pain control. In preparing its rules, the board should be guided by the principles stated in the "American academy of oral and maxillofacial surgeons' Model State Rules for General Anesthesia" and any other guide pertinent to the subject.

The examination and qualification of monitoring assistants under section 2(3) [37-4-511(3)] should require a level of proficiency higher than that required for basic life support but need not encompass all the requirements for advanced cardiac life support certification.

The legislature also intends that the board adopt rules for approving dental practice facilities in which general anesthesia is induced. The board may also adopt rules for approving dental practice facilities in which conscious sedation or nitrous oxide analgesia is used. In formulating any such rules, the board may look to similar rules developed by dental boards in California, Arizona, Texas, and other states. The board may appoint teams to inspect dental practice facilities. Initially these teams may include a majority of anesthesiologists. When a sufficient number of approved facilities exists, oral surgeons may constitute a majority of each inspection team. Rules for approving facilities should also establish the duration of permits, provide for periodic reinspection, and establish application and inspection fees. Compensation should be provided for service on inspection teams.

The board may delegate authority to examine monitoring assistants to inspection teams and may authorize such teams to adapt the practical aspect of examinations to the equipment in a particular facility.

Lastly, it is contemplated that the board will develop and implement appropriate rules regulating advertising practices by licensed dentists. The scope of such rules should extend to the content and purpose of such advertising as indicated in section 3 [37-4-205]. Such rules should have as a purpose the protection of the public from unprofessional advertising and the maintenance of professional standards in advertising by persons engaged in the practice of dentistry."

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 349, L. 1983, provided in part: "A Statement of Intent is required because Section 2 [37-4-205] delegates to the Board of Dentistry power to make rules for the implementation, continuation, and enforcement of all sections within Title 37, chapter 4. This provision is intended as a backup to the various provisions giving the Board rulemaking authority over portions of the chapter as are found in 37-4-301 (examination criteria for dental license), 37-4-307 (dentist license fees), 37-4-321 [now repealed] (defining unprofessional conduct), 37-4-402 (examination criteria for dental hygienist license), 37-4-406 (hygienist license fees), and 37-4-408 (scope of duties of dental assistants). This is consistent with authority delegated to most other professional licensing boards. Section 2 grants the Board the authority to interpret or implement other parts of the chapter that are not covered by existing delegation. The Board shall be bound by statements of intent adopted in 1979 for these other sections and may not use Section 2 for rulemaking authority when a more specific delegation suffices."

Licensing

37-4-301. Qualifications — fees.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 467 deleted former (1) through (3) that read: "(1) Applicants for licensure shall take and pass an examination in order to be licensed. The examination must consist of a written part and a practical or clinical part. It may also include, at the board's discretion, an oral interview with the board, which may include questions pertaining to the practice of dentistry. The board may accept, in satisfaction of the written part, successful completion of an examination by the national board of dental examiners and, whenever the board determines necessary, successful completion of a board examination in jurisprudence to be administered at times and places approved by the board. The board may accept, in satisfaction of the practical part, successful completion of an examination by a board-designated regional testing service.

(2) Acceptance by the board of a written and practical examination must be conditioned on evidence that the examination is sufficiently thorough to test the fitness of the applicant to practice dentistry. The examination must include, written in the English language, questions on anatomy, histology, physiology, chemistry, pharmacology and therapeutics, metallurgy, pathology, bacteriology, anesthesia, operative and surgical dentistry, prosthetic dentistry, prophylaxis, orthodontics, periodontics and endodontics, and any additional subjects pertaining to dental service.

(3) The board has the right to administer its own examination in lieu of acceptance of the national board written examination and a regional testing service practical examination. The board is authorized to make rules governing examination procedures"; in (1) after "board" deleted "written"; in (2) after "board" deleted "practical"; deleted former (4)(e) that read: "(e) an examination fee commensurate with costs and set by the board"; in (5) after "fee" deleted "commensurate with costs and set by the board"; deleted former (4)(g) and (4)(h) that read: "(g) a recent photograph of the applicant; and

(h) copies of all other state licenses that are held by the applicant"; deleted former (5) through (7) that read: "(5) Applicants may not take the jurisprudence examination or the oral interview without first having completed and passed all other parts of the examination.

(6) Examination results will be accepted for a period of time as set by board rule. An applicant failing to pass the first examination, if otherwise qualified, may take a subsequent examination upon payment of a fee commensurate with costs and set by the board.

(7) The board is authorized to adopt necessary and reasonable rules governing application procedures"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 224 in (4)(f) substituted "an application fee" for "a licensure fee"; deleted former (5) that read: "(5) Applications must be submitted no less than 20 days prior to the board interview and jurisprudence examination"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Severability: Section 34, Ch. 224, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

Saving Clause: Section 35, Ch. 224, L. 2003, was a saving clause.

1987 Amendment: In (1) inserted language in third sentence that changes oral interview from mandatory to discretionary; and at end of fourth sentence inserted "to be administered at times and places approved by the board".

1983 Amendment: In (2) added "periodontics" to exam subjects; inserted (4)(h) referring to copies of other state licenses; in (6) inserted "and passed"; and deleted (9), which read: "The board may in its discretion permit a dental student who has successfully completed his junior year in a recognized dental school and who files proof satisfactory to the board that he has the preliminary education described in this section to take a written examination in the subjects he has completed. Satisfactory grades secured shall be credited on the final examination of the student. The board shall require a fee commensurate with costs and set by the board for this examination, which shall apply on the final examination taken by the applicant."

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent adopted with Ch. 337, L. 1979, provided: "A statement of intent is required for HB 233 because the bill amends sections 37-4-301, 37-4-402, and 37-4-406, MCA, to give the Board of Dentists rulemaking authority regarding examination and application procedures for dentists and dental hygienists. The following explains the intent of the Legislature regarding the rulemaking authority granted by this bill.

Sections 37-4-301 and 37-4-402 give the Board of Dentists the right to administer their own exams for dentists and hygienists, respectively. The rulemaking authority delegates power to the Board for making rules for running its own examinations. This is intended to be a continuation of existing authority, and rules now in effect may not have to be substantially revised.

In addition, section 37-4-301 gives the Board power to set the examination and licensure fees for dentists. These are to be "commensurate with cost" and it is intended that the Board publish data on the actual costs of examination in the notice of proposed rulemaking.

Sections 37-4-301 and 37-4-402, MCA, give the Board of Dentists the authority to make rules for application procedures for dentists and hygienists, respectively. It is intended that these rules would cover routine matters not provided for in the statute.

Sections 37-4-307 and 37-4-406, MCA, require licensed dentists and hygienists, respectively, to pay an annual renewal fee that is set by the Board. It is intended that these fees, as established through administrative rules, should not exceed during the next biennium, $20 to $25 for dentists and $10 for hygienists. These fees, as required by statute, are for the purpose of maintaining an emergency fund that is used for administering and enforcing the statutes relating to dentistry and dental hygiene. If, during the next biennium, some unforeseen, complex legal proceeding arises involving the Board, the fees intended for this biennium would be increased to defray such additional costs."

The renewal fee must be set by the board commensurate with costs. Notice of the change in the amount of renewal fees must be given to each dentist registered in this state by the department.

(2) Payment of the renewal fee must be made on or before the license expiration date set by department rule, and a license renewal must be issued by the department. A reasonable late fee must be required by the department if the renewal fee is not paid in a timely manner.

(3) (a) Except as provided in 37-1-138, in case of default in payment of the renewal fee by a licensee, the license must be forfeited by the licensee. The board shall give the licensee 30 days' notice of its proposed forfeiture action. The notice must be sent by certified letter addressed to the last-known address of the licensee and must contain a statement of the time and place of the meeting at which the forfeiture will be considered.

(b) If the licensee pays the renewal fee, plus a reasonable late fee set by the board, prior to the time set for forfeiture, the license may not be forfeited.

(c) A license forfeited for nonpayment of the renewal fee may be reinstated within 5 years of forfeiture if:

(i) renewal fees are paid for each renewal period that they were unpaid, plus a late penalty fee for each renewal period;

(ii) the applicant produces evidence, satisfactory to the board, of good standing with the dentistry regulatory agencies of any jurisdiction in which the applicant has engaged in the active practice of dentistry since the last payment of a renewal fee under this chapter; and

(iii) the applicant produces evidence, satisfactory to the board, of good character and competence"; in (1) near end after "within" substituted "10" for "30"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 230 at end of first sentence in (3)(a) substituted "forfeited by the licensee" for "revoked by the board"; in second and third sentences in (3)(a), in (3)(b), and in (3)(c) substituted "forfeiture" for "revocation"; in (3)(b) and (3)(c) substituted "forfeited" for "revoked"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (1), in first sentence after "shall pay", deleted "each year"; in (2), in first sentence near beginning and in second sentence, before "renewal fee", deleted "annual" and in first sentence, after "fee must be made", deleted "each year" and inserted "license expiration"; in (3)(a), before "renewal fee", deleted "annual"; in (3)(c)(i), in two places, substituted "renewal period" for "year"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 in (2), in first sentence, substituted "made each year on or before the date set by department rule" for "made prior to March 1 of each year" and in second sentence, after "required", inserted "by the department" and at end substituted "not timely paid" for "not paid before March 1"; deleted former (3) and (4) that read: "(3) The board may adopt rules governing requirements for demonstrating continued competency for license renewal.

(4) (a) The board may reclassify an active status license to inactive status for a licensee who furnishes satisfactory evidence that the licensee has discontinued the actual practice of dentistry because of physical disability or retirement.

(b) An individual who wishes to maintain a Montana license but does not maintain a resident practice must be licensed in the inactive status.

(c) Application to convert an inactive status license to an active status license must be made in accordance with rules of the board. The application to convert to active status must accompany the submission of the renewal fee prescribed for such license. If more than 1 year has passed since the license was inactivated, satisfactory evidence of competence must be submitted to the board before an active status license may be issued"; and made minor changes in style.

Applicability: Section 133, Ch. 429, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to licenses applied for, complaints submitted, and proceedings begun after [the effective date of this section]." Effective October 1, 1995.

1983 Amendment: Substituted entire text (see 1983 Session Law) for former text that read: "(1) A licensed dentist practicing within this state shall annually pay to the department before March 1, as a renewal fee for the year, a sum set by the board. Notice of the change in the amount of renewal fees shall be given to each dentist registered in this state by the department.

(2) If a registered dentist absents himself from the state for a period of 1 or more years or does not engage in active practice within this state, he may continue his license in good standing by a payment set by the board each year or at the discretion of the board, he may be reinstated on the payment of a fee prescribed by the board for each year's absence. The annual payments shall be made prior to March 1 of each year, and a receipt or certificate shall be issued by the department.

(3) In case of default in payment of the annual renewal fee by a dentist, his license shall be revoked by the board on 30 days' notice given to the delinquent of the time and place of considering the revocation. A registered or certified letter addressed to the last-known address of the party failing to comply with this requirement, as the address appears on the records of the department, constitutes sufficient notice of revocation of license, but no license may be revoked for nonpayment if the dentist notified pays the renewal fee plus a late payment penalty prescribed by the board before or at the time fixed for consideration of revocation. The department may maintain in the name of this state a suit to collect renewal fees and penalties applicable and to recover from the delinquent dentist the cost of the action, including reasonable attorneys' fees.

(4) No license fee or tax may be imposed on dentists by a municipality or any other subdivision of the state."

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 349, L. 1983, provided in part: "Sections 4 and 8 [amending 37-4-307 and 37-4-406] give the Board the authority to adopt rules imposing a demonstration of continued competency for license renewal. The Board is not required to adopt such rules. It is contemplated that a study will be conducted to review other existing program designs in determining a viable means of demonstrating continued competency."

1981 Amendments: Chapter 345 deleted "and not to exceed $50" at end of first sentence in (1). Chapters 345 and 363 deleted "The board may increase or decrease the annual renewal fee to maintain in the earmarked revenue fund at all times an amount, to be known as the emergency fund, to be used for the purpose of administering, policing, and enforcing this chapter. The emergency fund shall be maintained at an approximate level of $2,500" after "a sum set by the board" in (1); Ch. 345 deleted ", not to exceed $25," after "a payment set by the board each year" in (2); substituted "a fee prescribed by the board" for "a fee of $25" in (2); and substituted "penalty prescribed by the board" for "penalty of $10" in the middle of (3).

Fees Prescribed by Board — 1981 Statement of Intent and Preamble: Chapter 345, L. 1981 (SB 412), which amended this section relating to the Board prescribing fees, contained a statement of intent and a preamble. For the texts see compiler's comments at 37-1-134.

1979 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent adopted with Ch. 337, L. 1979, provided: "A statement of intent is required for HB 233 because the bill amends sections 37-4-301, 37-4-402, and 37-4-406, MCA, to give the Board of Dentists rulemaking authority regarding examination and application procedures for dentists and dental hygienists. The following explains the intent of the Legislature regarding the rulemaking authority granted by this bill.

Sections 37-4-301 and 37-4-402 give the Board of Dentists the right to administer their own exams for dentists and hygienists, respectively. The rulemaking authority delegates power to the Board for making rules for running its own examinations. This is intended to be a continuation of existing authority, and rules now in effect may not have to be substantially revised.

In addition, section 37-4-301 gives the Board power to set the examination and licensure fees for dentists. These are to be "commensurate with cost" and it is intended that the Board publish data on the actual costs of examination in the notice of proposed rulemaking.

Sections 37-4-301 and 37-4-402, MCA, give the Board of Dentists the authority to make rules for application procedures for dentists and hygienists, respectively. It is intended that these rules would cover routine matters not provided for in the statute.

Sections 37-4-307 and 37-4-406, MCA, require licensed dentists and hygienists, respectively, to pay an annual renewal fee that is set by the Board. It is intended that these fees, as established through administrative rules, should not exceed during the next biennium, $20 to $25 for dentists and $10 for hygienists. These fees, as required by statute, are for the purpose of maintaining an emergency fund that is used for administering and enforcing the statutes relating to dentistry and dental hygiene. If, during the next biennium, some unforeseen, complex legal proceeding arises involving the Board, the fees intended for this biennium would be increased to defray such additional costs."

Attorney General's Opinions

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not (prior to the 1983 amendment of 37-4-307) made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

Case Notes

Board of Dentistry Not Immune When Seeking Injunctive Relief in District Court: The Board of Dentistry alleged that Kandarian, a denturist, was practicing dentistry without a license and sought an injunction in District Court. The lower court dismissed the injunction action against Kandarian but also dismissed his counterclaim against the Board on the basis that the Board enjoyed quasi-judicial immunity with respect to its actions. The Supreme Court reversed the lower court, holding that the Board did not have immunity for its actions when it sought injunctive relief in District Court. St. v. Kandarian, 248 M 444, 813 P2d 409, 48 St. Rep. 504 (1991). On remand, the District Court did not err in summarily dismissing Kandarian's claims of invasion of privacy, wrongful litigation, intentional interference with business, slander and libel, outrage, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and negligence. St. v. Kandarian, 268 M 408, 886 P2d 954, 51 St. Rep. 1381 (1994).

1985 Amendment: In opening paragraph inserted second sentence relating to administering local anesthetic.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 449, L. 1985, provided: "The legislature believes that a statement of intent is necessary because this bill authorizes the board of dentistry to make rules to implement the provisions permitting a licensed dental hygienist to administer local anesthetic agents under the direct supervision and authorization of a licensed dentist. The legislature intends that, as a prerequisite to issuance of a certificate to administer local anesthetic agents to a dental hygienist, the board, in addition to other criteria prescribed by 37-4-402, shall determine that the applicant is qualified to administer local anesthetic agents and holds a currently valid certificate to perform cardiopulmonary resuscitation from an agency recognized as qualified to make such certification. The board's rules for license renewal pursuant to 37-4-406 shall also recognize these criteria."

1983 Amendment: In opening paragraph, substituted "services, performed by a licensed preventive oral health practitioner known as a dental hygienist, that are" for "the doing by one person for a direct or indirect consideration, with respect to the teeth of another person, an act or service" and inserted "procedures" after "preventive"; and in (2) inserted "other than root planing and subgingival curettage".
